NEGRO DESCRIBED BY BOYS SOUGHT BY POLICE AS SLAYER OF EDNA ELLIS

Various Lines of Inquiry Into the Murder Conducted Yesterday Failed to Produce Any Certain Evidence—Employers of Girl Typist Aiding in Search.

CLEW FURNISHED BY FIVE BOYS

Lads Were Playing Near Scene Evening of Crime When Tall Negro Passed Shaking His Head and Muttering.

Various lines of inquiry into the murder of Edna Ellis, 18-year-old stenographer, were followed by the police yesterday, but no certain evidence developed as to the identity of the person who, Thursday night, attacked the girl on a lonely block on North Market street, just east of her home at 1833 North Garrison avenue, and when she resisted, cut first her hands and then her throat with a razor.

The principal search being made by the police is for the tall negro who has been described by five boys, living in the neighborhood, as having been seen walking rapidly away from the vicinity of the murder, about 8:35 p. m. Thursday. This was a few minutes after Edna Ellis had left the Cass car, on which she had ridden from downtown with a girl friend, at Glasgow avenue and North Market street, a block east of her home.

The boys described this negro as being heavily built, and more than six feet tall. He wore a long dark coat and a dark flat hat.

The boys said the negro, as he passed them on Magazine street, a block south of North Market, was shaking his head, muttering, and looking behind him frequently. They were frightened, and hid behind a pile of timbers where they had been playing, and the youngest of them, who was 7 years old, wept.

Razor Blade Not Found.

The boys tried yesterday, without success, to find the blade of the razor with which the murder was committed. The handle lay near the girl's body when it was discovered Friday morning, but the blade had been broken out.

On information from a county resident, who told of a tall and eccentric negro who had sometimes frightened children, city detectives arrested a suspect in St. Louis County last evening. He proved to be eccentric and excitable, but seemed able to account for his whereabouts on the night of the murder, saying that he was at home with his brother and sister. He said he never owned a razor, having little growth of beard. As a precaution, the police held him last night, and the boys who told of seeing the negro leaving the scene of the crime will be asked to look at him today.

Policemen also sought two negroes who have served penitentiary sentences for attacks on women, and who have lately returned to St. Louis.

The funeral of Edna Ellis was held yesterday afternoon at an undertaker's chapel at Fair and West Florissant avenues. A number of girls who worked with her in the accounting department of the Bell Telephone Co., in the Boatmen's Bank building, attended. Flowers were provided from a fund raised by subscription among the company employes, and a surplus of the fund was given to the girl's mother, Mrs. Marie Ellis. Special agents of the Bell company are working with the police in the search for the murderer, and the company has offered a $2000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the guilty person.

Verdict of Homicide.

A Coroner's jury at the inquest yesterday returned a verdict of homicide, declaring that Edna Ellis came to her death at the hands of a person unknown to the jury.

Mrs. Ellis testified that a young man, whom she named, boarded at her home about two years ago and at one time gave Edna a diamond ring, but later took it back. She ordered him from the house, she said, after he owed her a large board bill, and at that time he said to her, "I'll get your daughter in spite of you." Mrs. Ellis said she did not interpret this as a threat of violence but always thought and still thinks the young man meant only that he would marry her daughter in spite of her opposition.

Mrs. Ellis testified that last May

MAN RESISTING SEARCH OF HOME KILLED BY DRY AGENT

S. Glenn Young Shoots Luka Vukovich in Home at Madison, Ill.—Says He Was Threatened With Revolver and Struck in Face.

S. Glenn Young, a prohibition enforcement officer of East St. Louis, shot and killed Luka Vugovich, 45, last night at 10 o'clock in the latter's home at Twelfth and G streets, Madison, Ill., into which he had broken in search of liquor.

Young declared that Vukovich twice snapped a revolver in his face on what chanced to be empty shells, though the revolver contained three other shells which were loaded. Young then shot Vukovich twice. Vukovich next advanced toward Young with an iron bar and the pistol again leveled, whereupon Young fired three more shots, Vukovich falling dead.

Young's Story of Shooting.

The events leading up to the shooting were afterwards related by Young, in effect as follows: He had deputized Policeman Walter Cowgill of Granite City to accompany him on a liquor search and the two had peered into a window of Vukovich's home. They observed Vukovich drinking what they believed to be liquor, so knocked on the door.

Getting no response they broke the door in and found Vukovich in bed. They compelled him to get up and accompan ythem on an in-

$8000 ADDITIONAL LOOT IS FOUND IN JANITOR'S HOME

New Lot, as Was First, Identified as Stolen by Missing Employe of Downtown Department Store.

The search for Michael Weisbacher, head janitor of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., which began Thursday morning when detectives found goods valued at between $5000 and $6000 in his home at 1817 South Eighth street, was redoubled yesterday following discovery in his home of additional merchandise valued at between $8000 and $9000. This lot, as was the first, has been identified as goods stolen from his employers.

It now is believed that Weisbacher is the "leak" through which in 10 years have filtered goods valued at approximately $50,000, of which the Grand Leader never was able to find trace.

The goods recovered in Weisbacher's home yesterday were rare Irish linen, some of it missed six years ago from the store, laces, fancy work and furs. One of the pieces of linen was a tablecloth valued at $150 and of a quality which cannot be purchased at this time. Representatives of the store recall the disappearance within the period of Weisbacher's employment, 12 years, of a set of furs valued at $3500.

Suspected on High-Living.

Attention was directed to Weisbacher in the investigation of recent thefts from the store by certain of his high-living practices. He was paid $12 a week during the early period of his employment, $18 later and more recently $30. Detectives Kaiser, Wetzel and Heggeman learned that Weisbacher's wife had made three trips to Germany during her husband's employment at the Grand Leader, that Weisbacher owned an automobile, that he had purchased 100,000 German marks recently; that he had purchased $2,000 worth of Liberty bonds, and had invested about $2,000 in other bonds and securities.

His purchase of $2,000 in Liberty bonds was made after his release during the war from 60 days' confinement by the Federal Government during which his activities were investigated. His arrest came about through an incident of one of the flights of Scott Field aviators over St. Louis during a Liberty Bond drive. Weisbacher was on the roof of the Grand Leader, watching the airplanes. "If those were German airships, they would blow this whole damn place up," he was said to have remarked. His arrest was on the basis of the remark.

Shifted From Conspicuous Post.

Weisbacher for several years was stationed at the entrance to the Grand Leader as doorman. He had a military bearing and Kaiser-like mustache, which seemed to fit him

THRONG AT UNION STATION GREETS HARDING ON STOP HERE FOR 32 MINUTES

President-elect Harding addressing throng at Union Station through the trainshed grating.

PRESIDENT-ELECT SAYS 'WE ARE ALL AMERICANS NOW; NO MORE PARTIES'

He Shakes Hands With Republican Leaders and Trainmen on 32-Minute Stay, and Expresses Appreciation for Majority Vote for Him in Missouri.

MRS. HARDING TALKS WITH WOMEN LEADERS

Senator Asks for Co-operation of All in Continuing People's Government Under American Ideals—Tips Messenger $1.

President-elect Harding, Mrs. Harding and their special-train party bound for the Texas Gulf Coast, spent 32 minutes in Union Station last night, and the President-elect made a short speech, through the iron gates of the train shed, to a crowd of several thousand persons in the station midway.

Mrs. Harding also left the rear platform which, on the tour, is taking the place of the front porch in Marion. She shook hands with a line within the train shed, and talked with women political workers before returning to the train. The train, which arrived at 7:40 over the Big Four, left at 8:12 by the southern line of the Missouri Pacific, and is due to reach Brownsville, Tex., tomorrow noon.

The crowd in the station began to form before 6 o'clock, as the announced time of arrival was 6:08. During the wait the throng increased and the standing space in the midway was filled, while lines formed on the nearest stairway, which was not very near, as the track selected for the arrival and departure was near the west end of the shed.

Shakes Hands With Many.

Senator Harding got off his car a moment after the train backed in, and shook hands with city political leaders and with others who had gained admittance to the train shed. His hat was left on the train, and he had an unwearying smile as he moved slowly toward the gate, shaking extended hands, and saying in a low, deliberate voice, with almost a drawl, "How do you do?" "How are you, sir?" "Glad to meet you all."

At the gate, he mounted a train-announcer's stool, and the cheering crowd outside pressed toward the gate, many seeking to shake hands through the iron railing. But here Senator Harding declined. "I would like to shake all your hands," he said, "but I don't want to cause a crush, for someone might be hurt."

Amid cheers and photographic flashlight explosions, Senator Harding began addressing the crowd.

"Ladies and gentlemen, fellow Americans," he said. "Let me have a word. I don't like to have to talk to you through this gate, but I'm not sure but that is what you do to a President-elect. I am finding that, in his undertaking to serve you, you take away a good deal of his liberty.

"All Americans Since Election."

"I am happy to come here again, and know you a little better, and have you know me a little better. When I come into responsibility, I pledge you that I will serve you with all my heart and soul, in the interest of our common country.

"I may be permitted to say that I was rather well pleased with the way Missouri voted. But in the same breath, I would remind you that after the polls closed, we ceased to draw the line, Republicans, Democrats, Socialists. We must all be 100 per cent Americans. We must seek to recover from the war. We must put America on the right track. We must make sure of this popular Government of ours.

"You have got to help. This is your Government, not mine. I want

FRANCE READY TO HELP IN CHANGING LEAGUE COVENANT

Officials Say Preferable Procedure Would Be to Adopt Amendments, Preserving Existing Organization.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—The view was expressed in official circles today that the French Government would be ready to co-operate with the authorities at Washington in formulating something different from the covenant of the League of Nations.

This statement was made in official quarters in referring to the declaration of President-elect Harding, as cabled from Marion to the French press, to the effect that the Versailles covenant was now "deceased." This is interpreted by officials as applying to the covenant as drawn at Versailles, and as indicating that something different from the Versailles agreement must take its place. To that end, it was stated by officials, the French Government would be ready to give its collaboration.

It has been the generally accepted view here that the French Government would accept reservations by the United States regarding article 10 and the other provisions of the covenant which have been the subject of controversy in the United States. In this connection it was pointed out in official circles today that the original French idea of a League of Nations did not contain anything like article 10.

Whether the amended organization would be called a league, or a society, or an association is immaterial to France, according to the Government viewpoint. The essential thing, it is held, is to arrive as near as possible to the prevention of war.

The French Government considers that it would be regrettable to sacrifice the organization already set up, and that the preferable procedure is to amend the existing league under the name of an association if that meets the American view.

U. S. Insisted on Open Door Principle in Turkish Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—While no protest has been made thus far by the State Department against the tripartite agreement by France, Great Britain and Italy, defining spheres of influence in Turkey, officials stated today that this did not mean that no objection would be made against any provision viewed as contravening an open door policy in Turkey. The open door principle was insisted upon by the United States in the Turkish settlement, it was said, when President Wilson was asked in March by the French Government for his views on the tentative draft of the Turkish treaty.

The American note of March 24 said "it is the understanding of the Government of the United States that whatever territorial changes or arrangements may be made in the former Ottoman Empire, such changes or arrangements will in no way place American citizens or corporations or those of any other country in a less favorable situation than the citizens or corporations of any Power to this treaty."

In some quarters it was contended today that the second paragraph of article two of the tripartite agreement did violate this principle in excluding from the particular spheres of influence reserved for each of the three Powers the nationals of the other two contracting parties. The paragraph in question reads:

"The contracting Powers undertake not to apply, nor to make or support applications on behalf of their citizens, for industrial or commercial concessions in an area in which the special interests of one of the said Powers are recognized, except in cases where such Power declines or is unable to take advantage of its special position."

Western Anatolia, in the sphere of Italian special interests under the tripartite agreement, produced 7 per cent of the world's supply of chrome before the war, of which the United States imported in 1913, 18,200 tons besides a quantity of emery. It is also practically the world's sole source for meerschaum.

Washington Silent on Herrick's Alleged Activity

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—State department and White House officials refused today to discuss reports from Paris published in this country that Myron T. Herrick, formerly American Ambassador to France had been chosen as an intermediary in negotiations with President elect Harding regarding Harding's proposal for an association of nations.

Officials at the State Department would not say whether the French government formally had communicated to the present administration its desires to discuss this or other matters with the new administration in advance of its actual inauguration, nor would they say whether there was precedent for such a request.

They also refused to say whether they had information that Senator Harding was to be asked by the French Geneva delegation to send a personal representative to the forthcoming meeting of the assembly of the league of nations.

It was stated some time ago that the United States would not be represented at this meeting even unofficially, but Secretary Colby refused today to say whether an unofficial observer for the American government would atted the session.

BRILLIANT PASS BY "SUBS" SAVES DAY FOR HARVARD

Aerial Play Sends Ball Behind Goal Near Finish and Crimson Ties Tigers.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 6.—The Harvard football team converted a lost cause into an even issue today when it tied the Princeton team at 14 points all in the last period of their annual game. A forward pass, last of a surprising series which had swept the Crimson colors down the field 73 yards while the Tigers futilely clawed the air in an effort to bring the ball down, was the medium of what Crimson supporters cheered tonight as a victory for substitute members of the Harvard football squad.

Honors for the aerial advance and for the pass which was its crowning feature went to second string players. Called into play after the regulars had proved unable to stop the Tigers, Buell at quarterback, Fitts at right halfback and Macomber, an end, worked out the Crimson salvation. Buell and Fitts were the principal factors in three passes which sent the ball ahead more than half the distance of the field. Buell launched and Macomber received and scored with the pass which was the means of tying the score.

For daring in strategy and perfection of execution this series of plays will long stand memorable to followers of the college gridiron game. There were 44,000 of those followers within the walls of the stadium today.

RUSH FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE

428 Enlist in Six Hours for 256 Vacancies in Army in Germany.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Service in the American army of occupation is popular with young Americans, the army recruiting service found today in checking up its Nov. 1 records. There were 256 vacancies in the forces in Germany, for which recruits were accepted on that date, and Adjutant-General Harris' office sent out telegrams discontinuing the opportunity six hours after the day began, only to find that 428 men had completed their enlistment for regiments overseas.

Letters from soldiers there indicate that an American private is able to exchange his army pay for so many German marks that he ranks as a plutocrat among civilians, which in some part accounts for the popularity of service there, officers believe.

TIME TO RALLY, GOMPERS SAYS

Leader Believes Move Is on Foot to Undermine Labor.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Samuel Gompers, in presenting an American Federation of Labor charter to the newly organized Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York this afternoon, exhorted members to conduct themselves in a manner befitting the high standards of organized labor.

Gompers asserted that "reaction has jumped into the saddle," and that he believed an organized movement is on foot by big business to undermine labor. "It has never been so essential as now for unorganized labor to rally to the cause of unionism," he added.

HARDING VACATION TRIP TURNED INTO TRIUMPHAL TOUR

SPEAKS BRIEFLY AT SEVERAL PLACES

Promises to Forget Partisanship of Campaign—Will Be Armistice Day Speaker at Brownsville, Texas.

By the Associated Press.

ON BOARD PRESIDENT-ELECT HARDING'S SPECIAL TRAIN, Nov. 6.—Crowds rivaling those of campaign days turned President-elect Harding's vacation trip into a triumphal tour today, as he traveled southwestward for an outing on the Texas coast.

At more than a dozen cities along the way in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois his private car was besieged by cheering men, women and children, clamoring for a spech or a chance to shake his hand. In some cases there were thousands in the crowd and even at the smaller towns where no stops were made the people turned out in force to wave him their regards.

In several places he spoke briefly from the rear platform of his car, expressing his gratitude for the welcome accorded him and declaring that he meant to be the people's President, forgetful of the partisanship of the campaign and devoted always to the interests of the nation as a whole. As in his campaign speeches, he preached a doctrine of common understanding and of faithfulness to American institutions and ideals.

Mrs. Harding also waved a greeting to every crowd, and at every stop there were cheers for the next first lady of the land. Flowers and other gifts were handed up to her at several stops as she leaned over the platform rail shaking hands with all of those within reach.

Gatherings a Surprise.

The number who gathered along the path of the special train was a surprise to those on board, Mr. Harding's advisers having declined to make public his itinerary and arranged to avoid local stops in order to give him a thorough rest. The news traveled ahead, however, and as soon as he saw the first wayside gatherings the President-elect insisted that it would be unfair to run past waiting crowds without a word of greeting.

Mr. Harding also announced during the day that he had agreed to break up his 12 days' stay at Point Isabel, Tex., by delivering an address in Brownsville, 20 miles away, next Thursday, Armistice day. He will speak under auspices of the American Legion, but detailed arrangements have not been made.

The President-elect's train, which left Marion at 7:30 this morning, will make a practically continuous run to its destination. Tomorrow night there will be a layover of equal length at San Antonio, but most of the way it is the intention to travel on a fast schedule.

Campaign Issues Ignored.

In none of his rear platform speeches during the day did Mr. Harding touch directly on the issues of the campaign, but he called several of his audiences to witness that he was preaching the same doctrine now as when he was a candidate for office. When he referred, at Paris, Ill., to his campaigning, a woman in the crowd shouted: "It was a clean campaign," and he replied: "Yes, you are right, and one for which I need make no apologies, and after it is won and a majority of Americans have spoken in favor of a well-defined program for our common country, then we cease to be in a general sense Republicans and Democrats, but we are all Americans, for America.

"While I have preached the gospel of party government, that is, government through the sponsorship of party, I may tell you now, in the reflection and sober thought of the aftermath, that I do not want my party to be serving to keep itself in power or to perpetuate the placeholding of any members, but I want my party to serve America for the American people."

In his other speeches he repeated the same thought several times in different language.

"We won our victory for Republican policies and Republican candidates," he said at Charleston, Ill., "but from this time on it is to be a victory for American policies and the American people.

"We are partisan in our campaigns, and after our campaigns are over we are all alike, citizens of the Republic, interested in the common welfare of the American people. It is going to be the aim of the incoming administration to always strive to understand what the aspirations and conscience of the American people is and to put it into effect."

Secret Itinerary Abandoned.

Because of the crowds the special train fell behind time, but railroad officials thought a night run across Missouri would put it back on its schedule. Giving up hope that short stops at way stations could be avoided by holding the itinerary confidential, they made public tonight the following tentative schedule:

Arrive Little Rock, 4:30 a. m., Sunday; Texarkana, 8 a. m.; Palestine, Tex., 2 p. m.; Austin, 8 p. m.; San Antonio, 10:30 p. m.; leave San Antonio, 11 p. m.; arrive Odem, 4:50 a. m. Monday; leave Odem, 5:30 a. m.; arrive Brownsville, 11:30 a. m.; from Brownsville to Point Isabel the party will travel by motor.

George B. Christian Jr., Harding's secretary, was in charge of the train. The fact that his relations with his chief were being continued beyond the end of the campaign started a report that he had been selected definitely for secretary to the President. There was no official confirmation, however, members of the party saying that any formal announcement on that subject would have to come at a later date.

your help and your confidence, yes, and your prayers, for the good of our common country.

"We will go into the service of our country, to conduct this Government not according to European ideals, but to continue under American ideals.

For "Government of People."

"There will never be anything wrong with America, as long as the people do their full part. I am for a government directed by the will of the people, flowing up to those in authority, and not a government of the will of those in authority flowing down to the people. This is your Government. Let us keep our America the best place to live under God's shining sun."

Returning to the rear platform, Senator Harding questioned railroad employes as to the time when his train would reach Poplar Bluff, a platform speech there having been planned. As Poplar Bluff is more than a four-hours' run, it appeared that the arrival there would be well after midnight.

Seeing a group of trainmen, some of them in overalls, at the car step of a local train opposite his special, Senator Harding went to them and shook hands with each of them. "Some people say that only men who want office go around shaking hands," he remarked as he left this group, "but that doesn't apply to me at present."

Al Jolson, musical comedy star, had been one of the first to board the rear platform, and was there when Senator Harding returned to the train. He posed with the Senator and Mrs. Harding for a photograph and, then bowing to the crowd, said something about the happiest moment of his life, and sang a four-line campaign song of his own which contained the name "Harding" eight times, ending with "Harding, Harding, you're the man for us." Jolson led a pilgrimage of theatrical folk to the Marion front porch during the summer.

Asks About Missouri Vote.

To a man who introduced himself as a Democrat who had worked hard for Cox, Harding repeated what he had said in his talk, that party distinctions ceased when the polls closed. "We're all for each other and for our country now," the President-elect said.

In speaking with newspaper reporters, Senator Harding asked for the latest figures as to his own plurality in Missouri, and that of Arthur M. Hyde for Governor. "And how about Senator Spencer's vote?" he asked. He was told that it was below that for himself and Hyde, and asked the reason. "Possibly his support of the Esch-Cummins railroad bill had some effect," was the reply.

"They'll all be supporting us for that some day," he remarked. "Do you know," he continued, "I claim to have foreseen this result in Missouri a good while back. In 1908, when I was making Chautauqua speeches in this State, I predicted that Missouri would go Republican. Nobody else at the national headquarters thought I was right, but that was what happened." (Missouri went Republican, on the presidential ticket, in 1904 as well as in 1908.)

Mrs. Harding, on the rear platform, made a half-serious gesture of protest toward photographers who were continuing to make flashlight shots. "I never have been able to get used to those flashes," she declared. "I would about as soon be shot." In talking with women political workers, Mrs. Harding told of the confidence which she had felt in the result, through the campaign, yet said her constant warning to others had been against over-confidence.

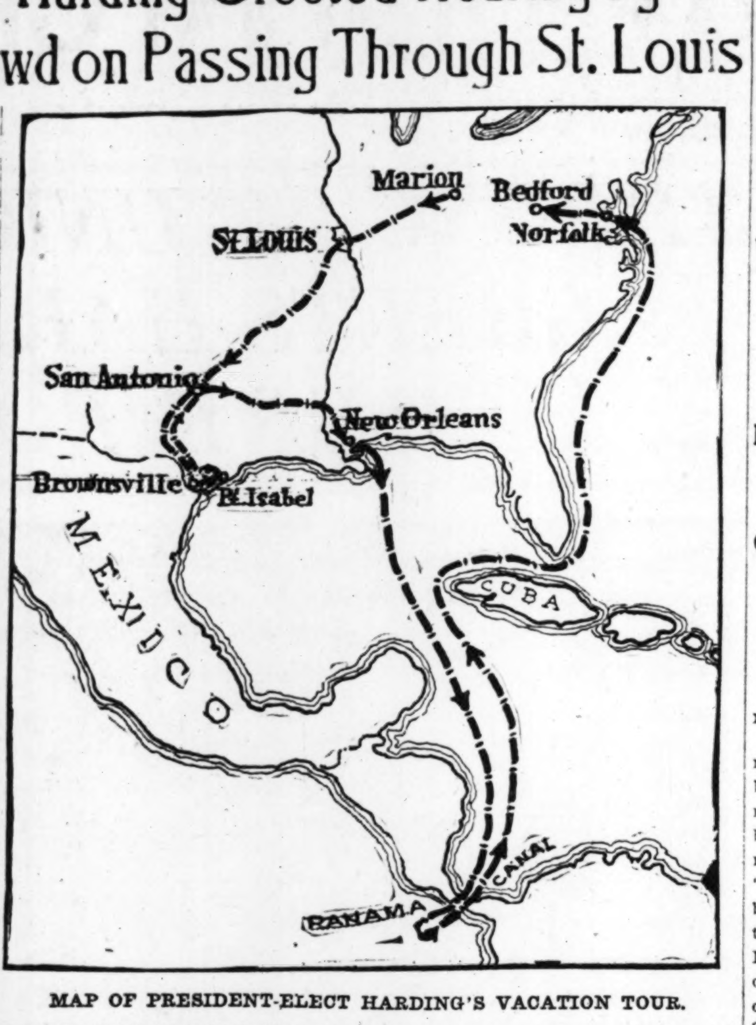
Sees Republicans in Car.

Walter S. Dickey of Kansas City, former State Republican chairman, was one of those admitted to the Harding private car. Others who spoke with the candidate were National Committeeman Babler, State Chairman Hughes, former Chairman Cole and John Schmoll, former city chairman.

The President-elect gave a $1 tip to Joe Turner of 5592 Etzel avenue, a telegraph messenger who delivered telegrams to the party, and who had made bold to tell him that he had distributed Harding buttons to 100 or more school pupils in his neighborhood.

In the Harding party were Senators Elkins of West Virginia and Hale of Maine, Mr. and Mrs. Edward McLean of Washington, H. M. Daugherty, pre-convention manager for Senator Harding, J. W. Smith of Washington, treasurer of the Harding organization; Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Sawyer of Marion, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Jennings of Marion, newspaper correspondents, moving picture men and secret service men.

A dining car was attached to the Harding special train here. A negro cook from Tennessee, said to know all about the proper preparation of chicken, buckwheat cakes and yams, was in charge of the kitchen.



MAP OF PRESIDENT-ELECT HARDING'S VACATION TOUR.

THE dotted line shows the route of the journey from Marion to Brownsville and Point Isabel, Tex. The journey thence will be made by rail to New Orleans, via San Antonio or by a line running along the Gulf Coast, and the Harding party is to sail from New Orleans to Colon, Panama. Returning from the Canal Zone, a coastwise route will be followed, touching probably at Norfolk, Va., as Senator Harding has an engagement to speak in Bedford, Va., Dec. 5, shortly after he is due to land.

Harding to Take Part in Armistice Celebration at Brownsville.

By the Associated Press.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Nov. 6.—Senator Harding has accepted an invitation to take part in an Armistice day celebration here on Nov. 11, it was announced today by R. B. Creager, at whose home the President-elect will spend his vacation, at Point Isabel.

The following telegram was received by Creager today from the President-elect in response to the invitation extended yesterday by citizens of Brownsville: "I will be happy to join Brownsville in Armistice day celebration."

The celebration will include a parade in which representatives of numerous South Texas towns will participate. The procession will disband at Fort Brown, where Senator Harding is scheduled to deliver an address.

Upon his arrival here Mr. Harding and the entire party will be taken to the Country Club for luncheon. The afternoon probably will be spent on the golf links and later in the day the trip to Point Isabel will be made in automobiles.

Plans to bring about a meeting between Senator Harding and Alvaro Obregon have been dropped out of deference to the Senator's desire for complete rest.

POLES REACH AGREEMENT WITH DANZIG AUTHORITIES

Plan for Commission to Control the Port Will Be Signed by Poles on Nov. 15.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—The Poles and the authorities of Danzig have reached an agreement regarding the convention which the Poles recently refused to sign. Signature of the convention and the city's constitution has been set for November 15.

The convention provides for the establishment of a commission composed half of Poles and half of residents of Danzig, under a neutral chairman, to control the port of Danzig. The Poles refused to sign the convention, holding that it did not fulfill the promise made them of free access to the sea and the control of customs, as specified in the treaty of Versailles. The council of ambassadors at Paris designated Henri Fromageot, counselor to the French foreign ministry, to bring about a conference of the Poles and Danzig authorities in an effort to reach a settlement of the dispute.

Dead Man's Companions Held.

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—Larceny of $1800 was charged today against Mrs. Lucille Josephs, May Erne, Samuel Livingstone, William J. Wayne and Ernest Gordon, who are said to have been drinking companions of Ambrose E. Roberts, a victim of wood alcohol, whose body was found in a South End alley yesterday morning. The police say the broker's pockets had been stripped and checks and jewelry taken.

spection of the house which revealed a trap door and stairs leading to a basement.

Young instructed Vukovich to remain in sight at the head of the stairs while he and Cowgill descended to look for liquor. They found 20 gallons of raisin whisky and 50 gallons of mash, but upon reascending the stairs found that Vukovitch had left the room. He reappeared immediately with a revolver and, running toward Young, snapped the trigger twice. There was no explosion. Young fired two shots from his revolver, both, it afterwards was learned, entering Vukovich's body.

Says He Was Attacked.

Vukovich ran out the kitchen door. Returning with a piece of iron he struck Cowgill in the face, gashing his nose and loosening several teeth. He turned upon Young again and pointed his revolver, advancing. Young fired three more shots, one striking Vukovich in the shoulder, the two others lodging in his head, killing him.

Vukovich's wife remained in bed in the house during the entire trouble.

On a visit to a house next door, occupied by Vukovich's brother-in-law, Michael Sever, 32, Young and Cowgill, declare that they found a still there. They arrested Sever.

U. S. MISSION REPORTED TAKEN

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—An American mission in South Russia has fallen into the hands of the Soviet forces, according to the Moscow newspaper Pravda, as quoted in a wireless dispatch today from the Soviet capital. The mission, says the newspaper, was headed by "Gen. Morel."

So far as known, the only American mission now in the Crimea is an American Red Cross unit of about a dozen members, commanded by Maj. Geo. H. Ryden of Kansas City, Mo. There also is an American naval and diplomatic mission under Rear-Admiral Newton A. McCully, representing the State Department, but the activities of this mission have been confined largely to the Black Sea area.

COAL ASSOCIATION PREDICTS GENERAL DECLINE IN PRICES

Production Now Exceeds 12,000,000 Tons a Week, and Operators Work to Eradicate Abuses.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—General decline in the price of soft coal at the mines was predicted today by the National Coal Association as a result of the tremendous increase in production which now exceeds more than 12,000,000 tons a week. The association asserts that in the last month there has been a price decline of more than 25 per cent in many of the fields.

This announcement is construed by officials here as an answer to the declaration of Senators Calder and Edge that unless there is an immediate drop in prices they would force Government control of mines.

"Operators in soft coal fields where unusually high prices existed," says a statement issued today, "have, within the last 10 days, been setting up fair practice committees, and working in conjunction with Attorney-General Palmer, have put under way a determined effort to eradicate abuses in the handling of coal. Coincident with this effort, prices in these particular fields have begun to fall."

Col. B. Wentz, president of the association, today denounced as false the statement of Franklin T. Miller of New York that the bituminous operators had used, or attempted to use, persuasion with Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, to influence the Interstate Commerce Commission to issue priority orders so that operators could dodge contracts. The operators kept Tumulty informed of development in the efforts to overcome the coal shortage, said Wentz.

Offered to Bet He'd Recover; Dead.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Nov. 6.—Even after physicians had declared there was no chance for him to recover from six bullet wounds, James R. Leach, of Thayer, Mo., offered to bet in a local hospital that he would win his fight against death. Leach died last night. He was shot six times last Wednesday night by "Bud" Martin, city marshal of Thayer, when Leach enacted a shooting demonstration on the streets in a crowd receiving election returns.

CONTRACTOR HELD AS PERJURER IN NEW YORK INQUIRY

Wealthy Business Men Released on $15,000 Bail and Ordered to Appear in Court Again.

MAYOR ASSAILED BY UNTERMYER

Committee's Counsel Threatens to Summon Hylan to Explain Failure to Cancel Contracts.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Arraignment of George Backer, wealthy building contractor, on an indictment charging perjury in testimony before the joint Legislative Committee investigating the alleged "building trust" here, and a threat by Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the committee, to summon Mayor Hylan to explain failure to cancel contracts for new city buildings were outstanding developments in the inquiry today. Backer was released under $15,000 bail and directed to appear again on Monday.

Untermyer's threat to call the Mayor before the committee was contained in a letter to Comptroller Craig, made public tonight. Untermyer declared that upwards of two weeks ago he wrote the Mayor and urged particularly "immediate cancellation of contracts that had been made or were then under way for the construction of school houses, on the ground that there was sufficient justification for that course as to many of them, from the evidence that we already have in hand."

No reply was received, the letter said, until Nov. 3, "and then only a belated formal perfunctory acknowledgement which reached me 11 days after my letter to him."

Yesterday, Untermyer declared, he warned Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield that "if the Mayor persists in delaying action, I shall feel taht my duty as counsel to the committee will require me to call him to the witness stand to explain his reasons."

"One of the peculiar features, which I have not yet been able to comprehend about the solitary bid for the limestone work on the Courthouse," Untermyer's letter added, "is found in the fact that, although the insulting letter of John T. Hettrick (counsel for the Master Plumbers' Association) to the Mayor, in which Hettrick undertook to pledge to the Mayor the political votes and support of the labor unions, virtually as a bribe, if the Mayor would approve the contract, was received by the Mayor almost two months ago, it was not made public and no mention or intimation was given of its receipt until after Hettrick's office had been raided under a search warrant issued on the complaint of the Attorney-General at the request of the committee.

"The fact that the letters were undated is also significant as is the further circumstance that no step was made to cancel the Courthouse contracts until after our investigation was well under way and the conspiracy to swindle the city was publicly exposed."

Mayor Hylan, in a statement tonight, declared the statement that no action was taken to cancel the courthouse contracts until after the investigation was well on the way "is absolutely false."

"Mr. Untermyer's statement that I held back the Hettrick letter is absolutely false, as the Hettrick letter was referred without delay on Sept. 14, 1920, to Commissioner Hirschfield, who was at that time investigating the limestone contract before the Lockwood committee or Mr. Untermyer began their investigation," said the Mayor.

FRANCE AND BRITAIN REACH ADJUSTMENT ON REPARATIONS

Paris Is Said to Agree to Conference at Which Germans May Be Present.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Coolness between the British and French Governments over their divergent views relative to German reparations was dissipated by a note from the British Government delivered at the French Foreign Office personally by the Earl of Derby, British Ambassador, last night. Premier Leygues and the Ambassador met tonight to complete the agreement.

It is said at the French Foreign Office that France now approves, not only of a Brussels conference of allied and German experts, but also an advisory meeting at Geneva of allied representatives, which she formerly opposed. There is a possibility that Germans will participate in this meeting.

It is understood the Geneva meeting, whether attended by allied Premiers or not, may draw up a basis for final action by the Reparations Commission.

Poor Business Ties Up Ships.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—Nine United States Shipping Board freight steamers, representing approximately 65,000 tons, are to be retired because of lack of cargoes, the San Francisco headquarters of the board announced here today. Completion of sugar shipments were given as one cause for shortage of cargoes.

GANGSTER IS SHOT WHEN HE TRIES TO HOLD UP SALOON

Christy Dunn, Arrested 35 Times in Last 8 Years, Dangerously Wounded by Joseph (Rooster) Stolte.

TROUBLE IN SALOON ON TWELFTH STREET

Bartender, Who Fired Shots, Congratulated by Policemen When Taken to Carr Street Station.

Christy Dunn, 28 years old, of 1310 Cass avenue, huckster and gangster by day and thief and highwaymen by night, who was feared even by his own gang and treated kindly by the courts in the 35 times he has been arrested on charges ranging from petty larceny to murder in the last eight years, started trouble in the saloon of J. J. Hollohan, 1327 North Twelfth street, early yesterday afternoon; went back later for more—and got it.

Dunn was shot twice and dangerously wounded by an old acquaintance, Joseph (Rooster) Stolte, 41 years old, of 1439 North Tenth street, who for 20 years has been Hollohan's bartender.

At Carr Street Station, where Stolte was taken, he was warmly congratulated by several policemen, who hailed him as a "genuine game rooster." Stolte was modest through it all and said he hoped his bullets had the desired effect.

Well Known in Saloon.

Dunn and his record were well known to habitues of Hollohan's place and he was never welcome there, according to Stolte, who said Dunn was the kind of fellow who often forced his acquaintances at the point of a revolver to "lend" him money when words failed, and then would threaten to kill them if they complained to the police.

"He came into our place about 2 o'clock this afternoon," Stolte related, "and started a brawl with a customer. No one paid much attention to him and he left, threatening to return later.

"About 5:30 three customers came in and ordered beverage. I reached in the ice box for the bottles and at that moment saw Dunn enter, revolver in hand. He shouted 'Everybody throw up your hands,' and as he did so, I jumped through a door that leads from behind the bar and seized my revolver, which was in my overcoat pocket, and fired at Dunn.

Dodged Behind Stove.

"The bullet hit the stove, behind which Dunn had jumped to shield himself, and he fired at me, his bullet missing me and hitting the mirror. I fired twice again, and he fell behind the stove.

"I locked the door, and Hollohan, who had been fixing the electric piano, telephoned for the police. The customers fled with the first shot."

Dunn was shot in the back of the head, and in the left shoulder. Stolte explained this with the statement that Dunn was "dodging around behind the stove" to avoid being hit.

At Carr Street Station Capt. John J. McCarthy said he had known Stolte more than 10 years and never heard of him being in trouble before, while Dunn's criminal behavior has been more or less of a problem to the police of that district since 1912.

Police Record of Dunn.

Dunn was first arrested for stealing a horse and buggy in 1912, the charge of grand larceny being amended by the Court, and he was sentenced to a short term in the workhouse. March 30, 1913, he was identified as one of two men who stabbed Lawrence Cafferty, 108 South Broadway, to death, at 6 South Eighth street. He was charged with second-degree murder, and the case was nolle prossed (dismissed because of no prosecution.)

Sept. 11, 1918, he was caught at 6:30 a. m. at Eighteenth and O'Fallon streets with a wagon load of burlap bags stolen from the International Bag Co., 2013 Morgan street, and charged with grand larceny. May 14, 1919, Judge Garesche, in the Criminal Division of the Circuit Court, amended the charge to petty larceny and sentenced Dunn to the workhouse for one year. He was paroled by the same Judge Nov. 26.

May 14 of this year, he was arrested at 4 a. m. in front of Greenfield Bros.' store, Eighth and Olive streets, with fine silk shirts, taken from the window, which had been smashed a few moments before. At Central Police Station that morning he gave his occupation as "thief." He was charged with burglary and was released on bond.

Hat Near Scene of Robbery.

Oct. 9 he was arrested on suspicion of being one of two men who held up Charles F. Beehler, treasurer of the Beehler Steel Products Co., 1437 North Ninth street, and robbed him of $1200 pay roll money, afterward locking Beehler in the basement of a dwelling into which he had been jerked. Dunn's hat was found at the scene of the crime, but Beehler, who did not see the faces of the robbers, could not identify him.

Oct. 25 Sonnenfeld's window was smashed at 5 a. m. and furs valued at several thousand dollars were stolen. The Victoria Hotel was searched and some of the furs were found in a washroom on the second floor. Dunn was in the hallway near the washroom. He was arrested, charged with burglary and released on bond.

NEGRO SOUGHT BY POLICE AS SLAYER OF EDNA ELLIS

she and her daughter alighted from a street car at North Market street and Grand avenue and this young man, who had been standing on the corner, followed them some distance, but made no threats.

Testimony of Mother.

At the inquest Mrs. Ellis also testified that her daughter had told she had some fear of a man named "Nick" whom she met at a dance hall. This fear, she said, was based on stories which other girls told about "Nick." Mrs. Ellis said her daughter told her this man had never made any advances to her or any threats against her.

Elsie Lovejoy of 4211A Warne avenue, a friend of Miss Ellis, told policemen Miss Ellis had expressed herself as being afraid of a young man, whose name Miss Lovejoy gave.

Catherine Norton of 3855 Labadie avenue, a Bell Telephone employe, who rode with Miss Ellis on a Cass line car as far as Glasgow avenue and North Market street the night of the murder, told detectives Miss Ellis was a "spunky" girl. She said that recently when they were riding home together she asked Miss Ellis if she was not afraid to walk through the lonesome block alone, and Miss Ellis replied: "I should say not. If anybody tackles me I'll fight."

"Wouldn't you scream?" Miss Norton asked.

"No," replied Miss Ellis; "anyone who tackles me would know he had been in a fight."

Former Boarder Questioned.

The young man mentioned by Mrs. Ellis as having boarded at her house and as having said he would get her daughter despite her opposition was taken to the Dayton Street Police Station yesterday and closely questioned. He denied knowledge of the murder and said he was at home when it was committed.

Mrs. Ellis was taken to the police station to see the young man. He said: "Mrs. Ellis, I didn't kill your daughter." He was then taken to the scene of the murder and said he had never been there before. He was next taken to an undertaker's parlor to view Miss Ellis' body. There he said: "I did not kill Edna."

A motorman of the Cass line reported having seen a young man standing at the corner of Glasgow and North Market as he passed that corner, westbound, about 7:49 p. m Thursday, and having seen the same young man when he passed the corner, on his return trip, at 8:30. This motorman and other street car men will view the young man who was questioned. Another motorman, Claude McKeehan, told of having seen a young man and a young woman quarreling, at 11:20 p. m., one night a week before the killing, at the corner. He said he heard the young man make an angry remark, though not a threat. He believes, from having seen Edna Ellis' picture, that she was the girl.

Girl Usually Rode Another Car.

It has not been explained how any young man would have known that Edna Ellis would take the Cass car on that particular evening. When she usually took the Natural Bridge car and got off directly in front of her home. Her reason for taking the Cass car Thursday night was that her friend and fellow worker, Miss Norton, who had worked overtime with her at the office, lives further out on the Cass line, and that Edna wished to ride with her.

A boy had brought in a bedraggled collar which he found in the weeds on the lot where the body was found. It had several dark brown stains on it which some policemen thought might be blood. The collar was half a size smaller than that worn by the man questioned.

H. McC. Ludington, proprietor of a garage at 3016 North Market street, told of going to the lot soon after the body was found. He said he noticed two footprints, one of which showed the mark of a rubber heel which was worn down on one side.

Tells of Hearing Quarrel.

Ludington said the mark made by one suction hole in the heel was very distinct in the footprint. The police made a putty impression of the heels of the prisoner's shoes, and Ludington said the print of the left heel was "very much like" the one he saw on the lot after the murder. Ludington said that one night last June he saw the prisoner and Miss Ellis sitting on a coping near his garage, and heard them quarrelling. He said he heard Miss Ellis say: "I'm through with you," and heard the prisoner reply: "You'll marry me some day."

Mrs. Dorothy Turner of 3219A Magazine street, told policemen that about 7:15 the night of the murder, she walked west on North Market street, between Glasgow avenue and Garrison avenue and saw a negro standing on the sidewalk near the edge of the lot where Edna Ellis' body was found. She described him as being slim and about six feet tall and wearing a dark sack suit. He did not accost her or do anything to excite her suspicion at the time.

The presence of an automobile near the scene of the killing, about 6:15 p. m. Thursday, was explained by two Laclede Gas Light Co. employes, who said they stopped by the vacant lot to empty a pail of dirty water which had been used in cleaning gas apparatus.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Childress of Cairo, Ill., telephoned police headquarters here last night that he arrested a negro half-wit answering the general description of the negro sought here, while seeking another negro murderer 15 miles from Cairo. Childress said the negro told conflicting stories of where he came from, and his behavior indicated he is wanted somewhere. He is holding the man for further questioning.

PASTOR KILLS INN KEEPER IN LIQUOR RAID

Canadian Preacher-Inspector Says He Fired in Self-Defense, but Others Swear Victim Was Not Armed.

DETAINED BY POLICE FOR OWN SAFETY

Minister, While Holding Pastorate, Has Patrolled River and Fought With Rum Runners.

By the Associated Press.

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 6.—Whether the Rev. J. O. L. Spracklin, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Sandwich, and a leader of prohibition enforcement agents along the border, must stand trial for the slaying early today of Beverly Trumble, an inn proprietor, is to be determined by the result of a coroner's inquest which is still in session late tonight. Crown attorney Rodd announced he would take no action against the minister-license inspector until the coroner's jury had given a verdict.

In a statement to the police Spracklin asserted he shot Trumble in self defense, and his version of the raid on Trumble's place was corroborated by three other officers who were with him.

Trumble's widow and several friends called to testify, however, declared Trumble was unarmed. Local police who made an investigation, said they had been unable to find the pistol Spracklin says Trumble had drawn.

Feeling ran high throughout the border cities tonight. The police said they had heard open threats to "shoot Spracklin on sight." The minister was detained at police headquarters for his own safety.

During the day members of Spracklin's congregation raised $10,000 for his defense should charges be brought against him and pledged $300,000 for his bond. They declared the church was prepared to "go the limit" in providing funds and other assistance their pastor might require.

Spracklin was appointed a special officer following his charges several months ago that regular authorities were making little effort to enforce the Ontario Temperance Act. He had headed many spectacular raids and patrolled the Detroit River in a motor boat for rum runners, with whom he has engaged in several revolver rights. He has continued the duties of his pastorate while acting as license inspector.

Spracklin and five of his assistants had broken their way into the roadhouse through a rear window, after their way had been barred, they said, by locked doors. The shooting occurred as Spracklin encountered Trumble in a hallway on the first floor.

ELECTION RESULT PLEASES ENVOY OF SOVIET RUSSIA

Ludwig C. A. K. Martens Says He Expects Change in Policy Toward His Country After Harding's Inauguration.

SPEAKS AT FIRST REGIMENT ARMORY

Crowd of About 750 Hears Address, After Which Medical Relief Fund of $1302.50 Is Collected.

A change in the policy of this Government toward Soviet Russia may be expected as soon as the Harding administration is inaugurated, Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, representative in this country of the Soviet Government, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter last night, following an address which Martens delivered at the First Regiment Armory.

"Reactionary or not, the Republicans will change the policy, because it is to their interest to do so," he said. "You have two great political parties. An analysis of them will show that the economic interests of the Democratic party are vested finance—the banks— and agrarian interests—the southern and southwestern planters.

"The dominating interests of the Republicans are the great industrial interests of the East and Middle West. Those industries must buy raw material, and they must sell manufacturered goods. Soviet Russia has vast quantities of raw material to sell and it is prepared to spend millions for manufactured articles. Therefore, the Republican manufacturers will demand that trade relations be established with Soviet Russia. Your trader forgets his political prejudices when it affects his pocketbook."

Views on Recognition.

Asked if he expected official recognition, Martens shrugged his shoulders and replied with a smile: "It does not matter. We do not care about the red tape as long as we are permitted to trade with you. Personally, however, it is hard to imagine how trade relations can be established without recognition. That probably will come later, when the anti-Bolshevik propaganda dies down and the facts about Russia becomes known to your people."

Martens spoke at the Armory under the auspices of the Soviet Russia Medical Relief Committee of America, and a collection was taken up for the purchase of medical supplies to be sent to Russia. It was announced that $1302.50 was received. It was said that chairs were placed to seat 1000 persons, and they were three-fourths filled.

When Martens was introduced by William Brandt, secretary of the Socialist Party in St. Louis, the audience stood and cheered for more than a minute. Martens, who spoke English with an accent, read carefully from a manuscript. His manner was placid, and he used no gestures, seldom raising his voice. He said:

"For three years Soviet Russia has endeavored to establish friendly relations with you, and to carry on the ordinary economic and intellectual intercourse of nations. During that time the Russian workers have been blockaded, starved and tortured by the soldiers of a dying social order. But the workers of Russia have shown that they cannot be beaten.

Fighting for Own Land.

The soldiers who have been sent against us never knew why they were fighting. On the other hand, the red soldier knew exactly why he was fighting. He knew he was fighting for his own land, his own home and his own economic liberty.

"When feudalism and capitalism collapsed together during the war, the Russian workers set out on the only rational road to the reconstruction of a new order. The course of sanity and reason would have been not to interfere with this work. But this is not an age of sanity and reason, and the capitalist government immediately did intervene to suppress this new idea. The worst irrationalism of all has been to try to restore order in Russia by fomenting civil strife, and invading our country.

"From this attempt, America might have been expected to refrain. We have nothing but good will for you. We are welcoming your technical experts, whose aid we need in carying out our plans. Even if you do not believe in the Socialist form of government, we welcome you if you will work with us.

Believes Soviet Best System.

"We believe we have the best system, and we are willing to let it stand on its merits in competition with any others. We are not afraid of arguments. We ask only to be permitted to work out our destiny. You see much in your newspapers of Bolshevist propaganda. There is no such thing. There is a propaganda against Soviet Russia, as you well know.

"I hope that this nightmare will soon be over when people are afraid of their own shadows, and find a menace in every new idea. Then we will be friends again, and Soviet Russia will live in peace and brotherhood with the rest of the world."

Martens was preceded by Isaac McBride, former American newspaper correspondent, who spent two months in Russia last year. He declared that the blockade against Russia had resulted in the deaths of thousands of civilians, men, women and children. It was particularly acute with reference to drugs, he said, because Russia before the war imported three-fourths of the medicine it used.

Hospital Scenes Described.

"I have seen red soldiers in military hospitals gritting their teeth and gripping the sides of operating tables while surgeons amputated limbs with carpenter tools," he said. "I have seen hundreds of shrapnel wounds wrapped in newspapers. During this time warehouses in this country were stocked with medical supplies, and millions of dollars in gold lay in the banks of Moscow, which the Soviet Government begged the United States to accept for those supplies. That is what the blockade did.

"John Reed, the American who died recently in Moscow of typhus, was a victim of that blockade, for with a little nourishing food and adequate medicine, he would have got well." At McBride's request, the audience sat in silence one minute in memory of Reed.

TO REPLACE MISSING JAW WITH PIECES OF SHINBONE

Surgeons at St. John's Will Attempt Operation in Case of Wounded Marine.

Kenneth Stewart, an actor of New York City, whose lower jaw was shot away by machine gun bullets on June 6, 1918, the day the marines entered Belleau Wood, and who has since been treated in several A. E. F. hospitals in France and a private hospital in New York, is at St. John's Hospital for an operation to rebuild his jaw by bone grafting, which will take about a year.

No attempt was made to reconstruct the shattered bone while Stewart was in the army hospitals, as he was not then in condition to undergo the operation. The attempt was made, unsuccessfully, in the New York Hospital. While in a hospital in Paris he was for a short time under the care of a St. Louis surgeon and came here last week after leaving the New York hospital, to have him perform the operation.

The process of reconstructing the jaw will require the removal of bone from the shin, to take the place of the jaw-bone. This must be done in numerous separate operations.

ARGENTINE SENATE TO FIGHT SPECULATION IN NECESSARIES

Proposes to Create Government Board to Handle and Distribute Supplies and Prevent Hoarding.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 6. — The Argentine Senate has undertaken to fight the hoarders and speculators in food, clothing, fuel and other necessities by placing the trade in such articles under the control of a government board with broad powers. A measure adopted by the Senate would charge the proposed board with the duties of assuring an adequate supply, facilitating distribution and preventing hoarding and speculating against the common interest of the nation.

The bill provides for the appointment of sectional boards throughout the country, empowered to buy and sell, provide warehousing facilities and means of distribution and to proceed against persons storing supplies in order to cause increased prices. If prices are too high, the board may recommend expropriation, which measure can then be taken by decree by the executive power of the nation.

In cases of food hoarding or destruction for the purpose of increasing prices, the law provides fines and imprisonment up to $50,000 and two years, respectively.

NEW YORK STATE COMPTROLLER FINED, HELD TO GRAND JURY

Court Bases Finding on Sale of Bonds to State at 89½ When Market Price Was 82.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—State Comptroller Eugene M. Travis today was ordered held for the grand jury on two counts by Chief Justice Kernochan, in the John Doe investigation of bond sales to the State. Coincident with this action, Travis was fined $250 for contempt of court in refusing to testify as to his personal financial transactions, with the alternative of paying it before next Friday or going to jail for 30 days.

The Justice then suggested, after expressing willingness to issue a warrant for Travis' arrest, that the District Attorney's office take the case direct to the grand jury to save time and expense. Justice Kernochan recommended that the District Attorney also lay the evidence befor the Governor and Legislature for proper steps to safeguard the State's finances for the future.

Justice Kernochan bases his findings on a sale of $2,013,000 worth of New York City bonds to the State at 89½, when the market price was 82 and interest. The sale was made by William S. Fanshaw & Co. for Albert L. Judson, dealer, and it is declared, $140,000 on the purchase was paid over.

JAILED JAILER IS PARDONED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 6.—Gov. Morrow has pardoned Fess Whitaker, of Letcher County, who has been confined in his own jail and on Nov. 2 was elected County Judge. Whitaker won his race for the office of County Judge, defeating his Republican opponent, Judge Stephens Collins, by a majority of 500.

The jailer made his race from his "front cell" in the Whitesburg Jail, to which he was committed several months ago by Judge Collins to serve a six months' sentence for alleged disorderly conduct and carrying a concealed weapon. He appealed, but the judgment was affirmed. It was then that Jailer Whitaker, who was a prisoner, in his own jail, decided to "get even" with Judge Collins and "vindicate" himself, as he expressed it, by running for the office of County Judge.

BANK HELD UP AT NIGHT

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 6.—Three robbers tonight held up the Twin City Bank of Rosedale, a suburb of Kansas City, Kan., obtained about $4000 in cash and escaped.

Going into the bank as the officials were preparing to lock up for the night, the three men, unmasked and carrying revolvers, forced the vice president, who was at the cashier's window, to hand over all the currency in sight. The robbers backed the bank attaches into the vault and escaped. A heavy rain handicapped the police in their search for the men.

NEW 80-FOOT WAY ON WASHINGTON IS OFFICIALLY OPENED

Music, Speeches and Placing of Brass Tablet Mark Completion of Improvement Dating Back 10 Years.

TOTAL COST WAS ABOUT $820,000

New Thoroughfare Extends From Grand to Jefferson Avenue—Paving 60 Feet Wide, Sidewalks 10.

The new 80-foot Washington avenue thoroughfare, from Jefferson to Grand avenues, was opened officially yesterday afternoon with a ceremonial of speeches and the placing of a brass tablet at the Washington avenue cut-off. The opening marked the completion of an improvement projected nearly 10 years ago, when the first ordinance was introduced in the Board of Aldermen.

A parade of automobiles, including two trucks with bands, halted at 3000 Washington avenue after driving through the downtown district. Several boards across the drive were drawn up, the bands played the national anthem and "Dixie," and the procession, consisting of more than 100 cars, passed through to the Washington avenue cut-off at Grand.

Louis M. Hall placed a brass tablet bearing the inscription, "Washington Avenue Widening, Completed Nov. 6, 1920. Cost, $810,000." Speeches were made by Mayor Kiel, President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, Louis M. Hall, treasurer of the Washington Avenue Property Owners' Association; Thomas Watts, president of the association, and Congressman-elect Harry B. Hawes.

Mayor Calls It a "Forerunner."

Kinsey reported for the Board of Public Service that the work was completed and Mayor Kiel accepted it as executive. The Mayor said the improvement is a forerunner of others to come. He suggested a comfort station, to be erected underground at the cutoff.

Watts expressed the belief that traffic will be so heavy within 10 or 15 years that a subway up Washington avenue will be necessary.

The speakers called the avenue the "Fifth Avenue of St. Louis," calling attention to the fact that it is the natural artery for traffic from the East Side to the industrial districts. Hawes said it will connect with the roads to be constructed under the bond issue amendment.

The new street is 60 feet between curbings, with walks 10 feet wide on each side. The street has a concrete foundation upon which is the paving of wood blocks. The improvement, including damages to property by widening of the street, cost approximately $820,000.

The first ordinance was passed by the Board of Aldermen April 7, 1911. Suit was filed Aug. 20, 1912, to have a commission appointed to assess damages and benefits in the taxing district, which extends from Third street to Clara avenue, on Washington.

The commission was discharged May 24, 1915, after serving about one year, because of the resignation of one of the members, August H. Frederick, who resigned from the Board of Aldermen and was later sent to prison for real estate deed of trust frauds.

Louis Nolte, now City Comptroller, was appointed in Frederick's place, and the commission was reorganized and went to work, making its final report Jan. 7, 1918, in which it was provided the cost would be $552,511.89, of which the city's share was to be $66,714.94, and $485,796.95 to be assessed against property owners.

Completed in Year.

Considerable delay was occasioned by objections to the findings of the commission, and it was not until a year had passed until all interests were reconciled, and construction was begun. Actual work was started Nov. 3, 1919, and almost a year to a day from that date the work was completed.

W. H. Horner, chief engineer, had said the work could be done in 120 working days. He reports that the contractors were held up 50 days by freezing water, 30 days by rain, 60 days waiting for wood blocks, 52 Sundays, 52 Saturday afternoons and five to 10 days in organizing working forces from time to time. Altogether 180 days were employed, the delays, Horn explained, being typical to outdoor construction work.

The improvement includes the Washington avenue cut-off at Grand avenue, which was finished over a year ago.

Cars Released From Coal Traffic.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Approximately 25,000 cars will be released from coal traffic for other commodities under an order issued today by the Interstate Commerce Commission, effective Monday. It limits the preferential coal order to gondola cars with sides 42 inches or more in height, instead of 38 inches. Modifications have already released 170,000 cars, not including those released under today's order.

RIVAL REPUBLICAN FACTIONS PLANNING FIGHT FOR MAYOR

Foristel-Koeln Element Said to Have Practically Picked John H. Holliday to Defeat Kiel.

HARD SITUATION FOR COLLECTOR

He Has Been Drawn Into Close Personal Relations With Mayor by Penuchle, and May Remain Quiet.

With the national and State political campaigns out of the way, lines are being laid by the conflicting Republican interests in St. Louis for the bitter political fight over the office of Mayor, which politicians see as a certainty for next spring.

Mayor Kiel will be a candidate for re-election, a third term. That there will be a fight on him within his party is virtually certain, and the opposition, the Foristel-Koeln faction, is scanning the list of possibilities with great care to pick a man who can defeat Kiel. It was talked yesterday in the innermost political circles that they had picked John H. Holliday, a lawyer, who had charge of Lieutenant-Colonel Dwight Davis' campaign for United States Senator, as the man who could win, and were preparing to bring pressure to bear on him to make the race. It is said he has not been consulted.

A peculiarity of the situation is that Collector Koeln, probably against his personal desire, will be forced to oppose Kiel. They formerly were politically unfriendly, but during the past yar or two penuchle games have brought them into a personal intimacy which is said to be embarrassing to Koeln's political interests. It is even said that Foristel may have to go along without Koeln's public assistance in his fight on Kiel.

Not a New Situation.

But if this should develop, it will not be the first time. In the primary campaign last summer Foristel was the real power in the Hyde campaign in St. Louis. Koeln had publicly announced that he was supporting McJimsey, Hyde's opponent. Notwithstanding the fact that it is general public knowledge that Foristel and Koeln never are far apart in a campaign, Foristel handled the Hyde campaign, while Koeln maintained a deep silence on the governorship after announcing that he was for McJimsey. The Koeln wards went for Hyde.

It need not be surprising if there is a similar situation in the mayoralty primary. Koeln may announce himself for Kiel because of personal friendship, but if Foristel gets actively into the fight for Holliday or some other candidate it will not be surprising if the Koeln wards go against Kiel.

In all probability, Kiel could have had the renomination for mayor next spring without serious opposition if John Schmoll, former chairman of the Republican City Committee, had not attempted to defeat Foristel for delegate at large to the Republican National Convention. According to informed politicians, Schmoll, Kiel, Nat Goldstein and others in the Kiel-Schmoll organization asked Foristel to be a delegate at large. Then at the State convention Schmoll, backed by others of the faction, opposed him, and the Mayor did nothing to stop the fight.

Created Its Own Trouble.

Foristel is one who doesn't forget in politics, and at the State convention the Kiel-Schmoll faction created considerable trouble for itself. As a result of its action there in opposing Foristel there developed much of the inside strength of the anti-boss fight in the primary, which accomplished the elimination of Schmoll as a candidate for Sheriff and defeated him for re-election as a member of the Republican City Committee. It also accomplished the defeat of several others of the Kiel-Schmoll committeemen who sought re-election.

Now the guns are being trained for the big game, the Mayor himself.

Koeln's position, politicians familiar with conditions say, is particularly unenviable. He and the Mayor are close friends personally, though more or less antagonistic politically. However, much of this political antagonism is said to have disappeared over the penuchle table. Koeln and Foristel have for many years been personal friends, and have worked without a hitch in politics. Koeln will not want to oppose the Mayor, and it is doubtful if he will oppose him, but it also is as much a certainty as anything is in politics that he will not put anything in the way of Foristel in anything that Foristel undertakes.

It was said yesterday that in preliminary consideration of probable candidates the choice had narrowed down to Holliday and Lieut.-Col. Robert Burkham, and that the anti-Kiel forces had practically decided that Holliday was the man to make the race.

In the Davis campaign Holliday was chairman of the Davis-for-Senator Committee in St. Louis. Davis was supported by the Foristel-Koeln faction. There was talk for a time that Davis might be a candidate against Kiel next spring, but this talk has almost died out recently.

BRITISH CORRESPONDENT IN IRELAND TELLS OF THREAT

Written Warning Given That He Will Be Shot if Dispatches Are Not Shown to Police.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The correspondent of the Central News at Tralee, Ireland, reports he has received written warning that he will be shot if he transmits any dispatches without first submitting them to the police.

Official denial is made of last night's Central News dispatch that 200 Sinn Feiners were arrested near Macroom after soldiers and police had surrounded an assembly of Sinn Feiners.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, was questioned in the House of Commons last Wednesday regarding a story from a staff correspondent in Ireland of the Daily News to the effect that the correspondent's life was in danger from "black and tans" because he wrote the "truth." The Government, said Sir Hamar, had not been informed of the threat, but he had instructed the district inspector at Tralee, where the threat was alleged to have been made, to give protection to all newspaper correspondents.

DUBLIN, No. 6.—Numerous raids were carried out in Dublin this morning. The printing establishment of Patrick Mahon, where the Sinn Fein organ "Young Ireland" is published, was searched and documents removed. Mahon was arrested. His associates dismantled the machinery and ordered the plant closed. The District Hall at Gorvah, County Leitrim, was burned at dawn today by a band of uniformed men. Yesterday vacant police barracks there were burned.

SEVEN STEEL BARGES ON WAY HERE FOR UPPER RIVER TRAFFIC

Vessels Are Open Steel, 300 feet in Length and Were Built Under Contract at Dubuque.

Seven 300-foot open steel barges, which are part of the War Department's fleet of four towboats and 19 barges for operation on the upper Mississippi River between St. Louis and St. Paul, departed for St. Louis yesterday from Dubuque, Ia., where they were built in the yards of the Dubuque Boat and Boiler Works. The contract price was in excess of $1,000,000.

The first of the towboats of the fleet was launched 10 days ago at Stillwater, Minn. The fleet will be operated beginning next spring under lease by Edward F. Goltra of St. Louis in carrying coal to northwestern railroads and bringing back iron ore for smelting here in the furnaces of the Mississippi Iron Co.

CROWD BREAKS UP A GAME

Chases Visiting Football Team to Cover After Slugging.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—More than 2000 persons broke up a football game at Nutley, N. J., today when one of the players of the Nutley high school team was slugged by a member of the West Orange High School team. Streaming on the field, the crowd chased the visiting team into the refuge of the Nutley schoolhouse and besieged it an hour and a half, despite the efforts of the Nutley police force to restore order. Guards were posted at each door to prevent the West Orange boys from getting out.

After darkness had come on the policemen rescued the besieged team, member by member, and led them to the police station. Only Shoumaker, a husky lad, who did the slugging, was left in the building. A guard was left to protect him, as many persons in the crowd settled down to wait. He was finally got out at 9:30.

M'CUMBER'S VIEW ON RESULT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6. — "It makes no difference whether you call it an association or a league of nations. There is nothing in the name. The people are overwhelmingly in favor of something that will secure the peace," said Senator McCumber, Republican, of North Dakota, one of the "mild reservationists," who returned to Washington today. This is an entirely different view from that held by Senators Borah and Johnson, who say the election was a deathblow to any international agreement whatsoever. It presages what may be expected in the Senate from Republicans.

"There is no question," Senator McCumber continued, "but that the public wants some kind of an understanding with the nations of the world. While in some sections of the country those who were opposed to any kind of agreement with the nations of the world manifested their ideas at the polls, the majority of the American people, so far as I can ascertain, want something done to stop wars."

TEACHERS ADVISED TO "DOLL UP"

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—American school teachers are advised to "doll up" by the Civic Club of this city, in order to impress their pupils. This suggestion comes from the Committee on Extension of Good Citizenship. A report covering the broad ground of committee work, which the club has just approved, advises that a few inches off the bottom of the skirts of teachers and a few curls and flying fringes of hair would not be out of place in the classrooms.

The Civic Club is a woman's organization. The committee's recommendation seems to have originated with progressive teachers and with aspirants who have certificates but are still on the waiting lists. One young woman said if she didn't soon land a place she would bob her hair and see if she could move the appointing powers in that way.

YOUTH IS KILLED WHEN AUTO TURNS OVER IN COUNTY

Al Engler Jr., 19, Loses Life on Manchester Road Near Kirkwood — Companion Escapes Injury.

ANOTHER MAN, HURT, DIES AT HOSPITAL

U. R. Conductor Injured at Grand and Lafayette Avenues at 1 O'Clock Yesterday Morning.

Al Engler, 19 years old, of 4111A Lafayette avenue, died at the home of Dr. H. Hanson, in Kirkwood, last midnight from injuries suffered when he was pinioned beneath a coupe top automobile in a ditch on the Manchester road near Kirkwood a short time before.

Engler and Francis Quan, of 1416 North Union boulevard, had been visiting in Kirkwood and were returning to St. Louis when the lights of their automobile suddenly went out, according to Quan, and the car slid off the road and upset in a ditch.

Quan said he managed to extricate himself from the wreck, but that he could not reach Engler. He attempted to hail passing automobiles, but the drivers, evidently mistaking him for a highwayman, put on speed and passed.

Quan then summoned aid from Kirkwood, and Thomas Masterson, a life insurance agent, drove to the scene and with the assistance of other men lifted the car off Engler, who was rushed to Kirkwood for medical aid. He died without regaining consciousness. Quan escaped injury.

Man Hit by Auto Dies.

Frank Dudley, 30 years old, of 1730 Texas avenue, a conductor for the United Railways Company, died at St. John's Hospital at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon from injuries suffered when he was struck at 1 o'clock yetserday morning at Grand and Lafayette avenues by an automobile owned and driven by Frank Bakula, 32, 4554 Fair avenue, a draftsman, whose wife was a passenger in the automobile. Bakula, who was first arrested and charged with careless driving and released on bond was rearrested after Dudley's death.

It was the ninety-fifth automobile fatality this year, as compared with 79 deaths from automobile accidents in the same period last year.

Said to Have Had Head Down.

Dudley had alighted from a southbound Grand car at Lafayette and started eastward across the car tracks, when Bakula's machine, going north, struck him and dragged him about 50 feet before stopping, according to the police report. James P. Maher, 4648 Vernon avenue, who was standing at the corner, said Dudley was walking fast across the street with his head down, when hit.

Bakula said he was not driving more than 15 miles an hour and did not see Dudley until too late to stop. He took Dudley to a nearby doctor, where it was found he had suffered fractures of the left thigh, right forearm and ribs on the right side. The United Railways Company was apprised of the accident and sent a private ambulance which conveyed the injured man to St. John's Hospital.

Arrested After Wrecking Post.

William D. Geller, 19, of 3654 Castleman avenue, son of H. W. Geller, was arrested yesterday after an automobile he was driving had wrecked a lamppost at Newstead avenue and Lindell boulevard, causing the splinters of steel to scatter, damaging the automobile of Max Rosenfeldt, of 5447 Easton avenue, and Mrs. David L. Keiser, 5748 Pershing avenue.

Geller escaped injury. He said he was proceeding west when he swerved suddenly to the south to avoid an automobile going north, causing his machine to hit the post and knock it off at the base. His automobile was damaged $300. He gave bond on a charge of careless driving.

G. O. P. HOUSE PLURALITY, 176

Chief Clerk's Statistics Show Republicans Have 305 Members.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The Republican plurality in the next House of Congress, according to the unofficial list compiled tonight by William Tyler Page, chief clerk, will be 176, breaking all previous records. The count shows 305 Republicans, 129 Democrats and one Socialist. Page's list, in which the party designation is selected by each elected member, shows no independent or prohibitionists seated.

The previous record party majority in the House, Mr. Page said, was in the Sixty-third Congress, elected in 1912, when the Progressive party was in the field, and the Democrats had a plurality of 163.

HARRISON FOR CHANGE IN PARTY ORGANIZATION

Would Retain Chairman White—Calls on Democrats to Bury Differences.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Another move toward reorganization of the Democratic party was made here today when Senator Harrison of Mississippi, chairman of the Speakers' Bureau during the campaign, issued a statement calling on his fellow-Democrats to "bury all past differences and forget about the recent campaign."

"The Democratic party is not dead," he said; "it has only received a temporary setback and will make itself felt every day of every session of Congress until the next election rolls around.

"Gov. Cox made a gallant fight. He impressed the country as measuring up in the fullest degree to the important role to which he had been assigned. A grateful party will hold him in highest esteem for the splendid fight he has made and will continue to look upon him as the real leader."

As to party reorganization, Harrison said:

"I believe that there should be a change in the permanent organization of the Democratic party. I don't mean by that that Chairman George White should not be retained as chairman of the National Committee. He showed marked ability in the management of the recent campaign, which was waged against overwhelming odds. No one could have done better than he did under the circumstances.

"He has a very keen insight touching future plans, and I am sure that when they are put in force every element within the Democratic party will approve of them.

"I want to see every Dmocrat in the country, no matter what his views in the past have been, or what his course was in the recent campaign, brought into line and a militant organization maintained to fight the reactionary policies the Republicans will assuredly attempt to inaugurate.

"The results of the recent election, while, of course, discouraging to the Democracy of the nation, should influence Democrats to stand united as never before and work together in a spirit of complete cooperation and accord.

"I have no criticism to make of those Democrats who failed to aid the party when the 'going was hard.' I want to see complete harmony within our ranks."

County Committee in Arkansas Condemns Bryan for "Ingratitude."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 6.—Indignant over his statement a few days ago that President Wilson should resign, the Democratic Central Committee of Crittenden County, Arkansas, in session at Marion, Ark., yesterday, sent a letter to William Jennings Bryan, suggesting that the Commoner "publicly" renounce your allegiance to the Democratic party and the United States."

The letter to the Nebraskan is signed by Rudolph Isom, chairman of the committee, and several members of the body. Referring to the three times Bryan was a candidate for the presidency on the Democratic ticket, the letter says, that he shows his gratitude "by sulking in his tent, as did Achilles of old." The closing sentence of the letter reads: "Your egotism is only surpassed by your ingratitude."

Movie Thriller Enacted by St. Louisans to Be Shown at Woman's Exposition

Crooked Count, With Blonde Vampire as Confederate, Among Characters Impersonated by Society Folk in Film Mystery.

A crooked Count who conspires with his confederate, a blonde vampire, to discover what mysterious thing is brewing (or being brewed) in the wealthy "Mr. Buntley's" garage, furnishes some of the exciting moments in a movie thriller enacted by St. Louisans, and which will be shown at the Woman's Exposition at the Coliseum, Nov. 15 to 20. The last scene to be filmed was completed yesterday.

The film is immersed in mystery. Even the actors don't know what it is all about, as the scenes were filmed without regard for the sequence of the story; and the characters will not comprehend the heights of their heroism or the depths of their villainy until they see it on the screen.

This much can be told: The story begins when two items appear in parallel columns in "Town Topics." One of these states that "our multimillionaire Mr. Harry Valient is giving a party for his beautiful daughter, Phyllis, at which Mrs. Sheldon of Chicago and her daughter, Suzanne, will be guests." The other item remarks that "Mr. Buntley has piqued the curiosity of his neighbors by certain secret operations which he is carrying on in his garage," and adds that the neighbors suspect that "something is brewing."

Scheme of Crooked Count.

The crooked Count, whose part is taken by Burgoyne Wilson, comes upon these items as he leafs through the society journal seeking new prey, and he shows it to his beautiful and cunning confederate, "Alva," taken by Mrs. Gustavo di Rosa, the former Miss Maude Scudder. They determine to investigate the garage, and set out to gain entree to society by attending the "Valient" reception.

Whether they succeed is known only to the directors, Harry Smith, Mrs. Hayward Niedringhaus and Mrs. Harry Potter, but the action of the scene filmed yesterday indicates that dark and ominous things happen at the garage. In one glimpse at the plot, "Mr. Buntley," aroused from his slumbers by a noise, hurries to the garage, clad in yellow pajamas and a new spring hat.

He is astounded to find "Alva" prowling in the back yard. She immediately sets out to "vamp" him, and while he is observing her duct, the "Count" lays him out with a blow from a cane, delivered from behind. "Mrs. Buntley," played by Mrs. Julius Walsh, finds her "husband" sitting where he had fallen, still somewhat dizzy, and drags him away to the house, while he protests that he must investigate to learn if his secret has been discovered.

The part of "Suzanne" is taken by Miss Ada Johnson, reigning Veiled Prophet Queen, and the role of her brother is enacted by Pelham Turner. The part of "Suzanne's" admirer is taken by John Young Brown, but he is not the hero. The brother is the hero. The explanation of that situation also must wait upon the showing of the film.

Gang of Crooks in Film.

The part of "Phyllis" is taken by Mrs. Carl Langenberg, and the role of the hostess by Mrs. John Davis.

There is a gang of crooks in the film, headed by a desperate character enacted by Hayward Niedringhaus. Judging from that part of the action filmed yesterday, the role of "Mr. Buntley" is not altogether a happy one. What with having his garage invaded, his good nature imposed upon by a conscienceless vampire, and his new hat knocked over his ears by a no-account Count, he was having a most strenuous time.

The picture has been in the process of filming for several days. The scene taken yesterday was at the home of Miss Mary Lionberger, 30 Westmoreland place. Other scenes have been made at various homes in the West End and in St. Louis County.

ARMISTICE DAY PARADE PLANS ARE ANNOUNCED

Procession of War Work Societies to Precede Exercises in Forest Park Next Sunday.

Gen. E. J. Spencer, grand marshal of the Armistice Day parade and memorial exercises to be held in Forest Park next Sunday afternoon, issued a call yesterday to all patriotic, civic, religious and other organizations that participated in war work, to communicate immediately with headquarters at 1003 Equitable building to arrange the final details for the celebration.

"Owing to the limited time remaining before the celebration," Gen. Spencer said, "it is essential that every organization desiring to participate in the parade and memorial exercises notify headquarters on or before Nov. 9.

"It will be necessary to devote the remainder of the week to the details of mobilizing the units for the parade and any organization reporting in after these details have been completed will have to be satisfied with whatever position in the line of march that is available.

24 Legion Posts Respond.

"We have had returns from the American Legion showing that 24 out of 25 posts in the city have adopted resolutions pledging their memberships to turn out 100 per cent and in uniform if possible."

Mrs. Frank V. Hammar, chairman of the St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross and also a member of the St. Louis Armistice Committee, is directly in charge of the Red Cross division. All members of this unit are instructed to report at 802 Equitable building. Mrs. Hammar said that she is confident that her entire section will be in uniform.

Mrs. Frank De Garmo, representing all patriotic societies with the exception of the uniformed division of the Red Cross, and Mrs. Frank P. Hays, representing women's clubs and women's civic and religious organizations, have sent out urgent appeals to all units to report at headquarters before Tuesday.

It was announced at committee headquarters yesterday that Michael J. Murray, Judge of the Superior Court, Boston, will deliver the principal address.

The Pageant Choral Society will lead in patriotic singing which will be part of the memorial exercises at the Municipal Theater.

Committee in Charge.

The entire celebration is under the direction of the American Legion, the Red Cross and the Chamber of Commerce. The committee representing these organizations consists of Mrs. Frank V. Hammar, Melville W. Wilkinson, W. Frank Carter, Col. Robert G. Burkham and Col. H. D. McBride.

Mayor Kiel yesterday issued the following proclamation:

"Whereas, President Wilson has set aside Nov. 14 as the day on which the signing of the armistice shall be celebrated throughout the nation; and whereas,

"It behooves all true and loyal Americans to observe with proper decorum the anniversary of this day which marked the termination of the four years of chaos, the victory for civilization and the dawn of peace; and whereas,

"Throughout the entire period of of the war the citizens of St. Louis responded to every call of the nation in a spirit that placed them in the foremost ranks among the cities of the nation. With men, money and munition we threw ourselves solidly in behind our Government, with such sterling patriotism as to attract the applause of the entire world; and whereas,

"It is the desire of every citizen to keep alive the high spirit of patriotism thus developed during times of trouble; be it hereby proclaimed,

"That we as citizens of St. Louis, out of respect to our Allies, to our country, and to our city, observe the anniversary of the signing of the armistice in a manner that will properly reflect the enviable record established by our city during times of emergency; that we, on this day, pay tribute to our sons who carried the banner of St. Louis to victory and pause in solemn reverence to the memory of those of our citizens who made the supreme sacrifice in order that the high ideals of our people might be preserved."

Mayor Kiel Requests 2-Minute Observance at 1 P. M. Armistice Day

MAYOR KIEL yesterday issued a proclamation in line with that of President Wilson, asking that Armistice Day be observed next Sunday, Nov. 14. The armistice was actually signed Nov. 11, but the following Sunday has been designated as it will give all an opportunity to observe the day by going to church and joining in prayers of thanks that justice prevailed and democracy was sustained.

In addition to this observance the Mayor requests that at 1 p. m. next Thursday, Nov. 11, "all movable things" in St. Louis be stopped for two minutes and that all persons uncover their heads and offer up a silent prayer of thanksgiving that America produced noble men who were willing to give up their lives that liberty should not perish and that the Stars and Stripes might be returned to peaceful America unsullied and untarnished.

WILSON SAID TO OPPOSE A PARDON FOR DEBS

Understood to Hold That Executive Clemency Would Set Bad Precedent.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—That President Wilson has no intention of pardoning Eugene V. Debs, serving a 10-year sentence in the Federal prison at Atlanta for violating the espionage act, was indicated plainly today by persons in position to know. It is understood that the President thinks it would be wrong, and a bad example to free Debs or any other prominent man convicted of a like offense, as it would affect the morale of the nation in the event of another war.

Some months ago Attorney-General Palmer was asked by officials of the American Federation of Labor and others to recommend the pardon of Debs, but no steps in that direction have been taken by the authorities. Palmer explained that each case would have to take its turn. Debs' will be considered when it is reached in the regular way.

"Russia Shall Light the Way," Message From Debs Says.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Establishment of "the workers' republic" in Soviet Russia "is a bright star in the political heavens and shall light the way of the world," Eugene V. Debs declared in a message sent from the Atlanta penitentiary to the Cook County organization of the Socialist party, made public tonight. The message will be read at the celebration tomorrow of the third anniversary of the Russian Soviet revolution by local Socialists. It follows:

"Atlanta, Ga.—Greetings, comrades, in our glorious celebration of the third anniversary of the Russian revolution. The proletariat world and lovers of liberty everywhere are thrilled with joy at the news of the great victory of the Russian people. The triumph of the workers' cause in Russia is a historic milestone in the progress of the world, and its influence for good has circled the earth, and shall direct the course of the future.

"The emancipation of Russia and the establishment of the workers' republic is a bright star in the political heavens, and shall light the way of the world. It is the great hope of the human race and its example will lead to the emancipation of the workers of the world. All hail to those noble comrades who carved out a people's government on an impregnable foundation of granite that shall stand for all time.

"Comrades, you have weathered the storm, the faithful co-operation of comrades has been able to defeat the world-wide alliance of capitalism. I am sure that the same spirit that conquered capitalism will develop the geniuses that will conquer the devastating disease you inherited from capitalistic governments, who seek to destroy the newly emancipated people of the Soviet Russia. Faith, comrades, your triumph is complete. Other nations will become liberated and together shall form a brotherhood of the world."

SHAW'S GARDEN 'MUM' DISPLAY OPENS TODAY

Surpassing Number of Blooms and Species in Annual Show Free to Public.

The annual chrysanthemum show at Missouri Botanical (Shaw's) Garden, reckoned at the Garden as surpassing in number of blooms and species six former shows, will be opened to the public today. The show is free. The blooms are expected to remain in show form throughout the month.

The blooms range from masses of the original daisy-like flower, with face scarce one-half inch in diameter, to stately single-stem Turners measuring 12 inches across. There are 3000 plants of the single stem varieties alone in the show, and, in addition, many thousands of the smaller "mums"—a total of 300 varieties.

There are several groups of the Turners, their compact, ball-like blooms making them most coveted of "mums" by commercial florists. Until this year Turners were only yellow and white. This year pink Turners have been developed and several of these are to be found.

A distinctive feature of the 1920 show is the presence of about 25 baskets of massed blooms suspended from the rafters that form the dome of the floral display house. The flowers were grown expressly for this purpose, to enhance the first impression upon entrance.

Two other notable groups are the Nagaric and Marissa "mums" of the large single-stem variety. The Nagaric is a golden yellow of deeper tinge than the familiar chrysanthemum shade. The Marissa, a double variety, is a dark pink.

The garden will be open to the public today from 2 p. m. to sundown.

Toledo Voters End Street Car Fight by Adopting Service at Cost Plan

City Council Will Control Operation—Fare to Be 6 Cents and Cent for Transfer for Six Months.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 6.—As a result of Tuesday's election the street railway system in Toledo will begin operation under the Milner service-at-cost plan not later than February. The Milner service-at-cost ordinance received 27,961 more votes than the municipal ownership ordinance, ending Toledo's street car fight, in progress 25 years.

When the ordinance becomes effective, which must be within 90 days after the election, car fares will be reduced immediately from 7 cents, with 2 cents for a transfer, to 6 cents, with 1 cent for a transfer. With the very first fare paid in under the Milner ordinance the city will begin acquiring an actual ownership in the property. A small fraction of a cent from each fare will be set aside for accumulation of a fund for this purpose.

The company is required to separate the street car system from its other public utility interests in Toledo and turn it over to the Community Traction Co., which will give in payment $8,000,000 of mortgage bonds. The only income the Doherty interests will be allowed will be the 6 per cent on these bonds and 8 per cent on preferred stock.

$2,000,000 in Stock to Be Sold.

Provision is made for $2,000,000 of preferred stock. The proceeds from its sale will be used as follows: For extensions and rerouting, $1,000,000; for improvements and betterments, $500,000; for a stabilizing fund, $400,000; for an operating fund, $100,000. Other extensions may be ordred as required by the Council.

It will be the duty of the Mayor to appoint a board of control, to consist of three members for terms of two, four and six years. As these terms expire, the Mayor appoints new members, each for six years. Members of this board are to serve without salary in a general advisory capacity. They must be electors of the city of Toledo and can hold no other public office or have any interest in the company or in contracts with the company.

Upon recommendation of the Board of Control, and not otherwise, the Mayor is to appoint a city street railway commissioner. He must give full time to his duties. His salary is to be fixed by the board. The commissioner has access to all books and accounts of the company constantly, for auditing and inspection.

The first big job of the Board of Control will be to prepare a plan for rearrangement of the street railway system with a view to highest efficiency. No plan can be adopted except by approval of the Council. The board is permitted to employ engineers and other assistants, whose compensation is limited to not more than $10,000, to be paid by the company.

City May Buy Lines.

The city may, by vote of the people, buy the car lines at any time on six months' notice at the agreed valuation or at a price to be fixed by a jury in condemnation proceedings.

The ordinance reserves to the Council the control of service. The Council can order any type of cars, or any number of cars, can indicate where and how often they shall be operated and exactly where they shall stop. The fare rate of 6 cents and 1 cent for transfers cannot be changed for six months, but after that the rate will be just what the Council makes it. The people will pay the exact cost of the service ordered, plus only the fixed rate of return on bonds and stocks.

PHYSICIAN SUES TO ENJOIN OWNERS FROM EJECTING HIM

Dr. W. M. Hangen Declares He Had Privilege of Renewing Lease on Office.

Dr. William M. Hangen yesterday filed suit to enjoin the owners of the property at 5602A Delmar boulevard, which he rents for his office, from ejecting him. He also asks that they be required to comply with an alleged agreement permitting him to renew the lease for two years at reasonable rental, which he petitions the Court to fix.

According to the petition, Dr. Hangen was persuaded by the owners or their agent to give up his office at 450 Laurel street, and lease their property for two years, with the privilege of renewal. This was on Sept. 23, 1918. The lease will expire Nov. 14, and the owners have refused to renew it, and are about to put the plaintiff out, and rent the premises to another, it is alleged. The original lease provided for $75 a month rent.

Dr. Hangen says that since being in his present location he has built such a practice that it would be damaging to him if he has to move. He cites the housing shortage in the city.

The defendants are Louise A. Powell, Isadore A. Powell, Harry E. Powell and Robert W. Powell of 627 Clara avenue. Dr. Hangen states that he would not have given up his Laurel street location except for the assurance he could renew the lease on the Delmar property.

WON'T JOIN "LITTLE ENTENTE"

Polish Announcement Says Country Will Remain Out.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Nov. 6.—It was semi-officially announced today that Poland had decided not to join the "Little Entente" formed by Czecho-Slovakia, Serbia and Rumania, for their protection against Russia or enemies in the Balkans, for the present. Take Jonescu, Minister without portfolio in the Rumanian Cabinet, who had come to Warsaw seeking Poland's adherence, said he hoped Poland would join the "Little Entente" later.

It was explained in diplomatic circles today that Poland approved an alliance with Rumania, but disapproved entering the "Little Entente."

CARDBOARD 'MAN' FOR POLICE TARGET WORK

Patrolmen to Be Trained in Shooting to Halt Fugitives.

A style of target practice with revolvers that will give policemen training in shooting at fugitives will be inaugurated at the Laclede avenue police rifle range Monday.

Instead of the usual round target at which policemen have been shooting bullets for the past 50 years they will be given a "life size" target resembling a human form, to shoot at with a view to stopping, in the future, some of the reports that reach the Chief's office daily reading, "the officer fired several shots at the men. They escaped."

The new target is the invention of Capt. T. Rosser Roemer, drillmaster for the department, who has charge of training the men in adeptness with the revolver as well as in drills of the manual of arms.

The target was perfected mechanically by Sergeant Sidney Sears, the crack shot of the department. It consists of cardboard cut to resemble a human form and extending in length to the measurement between the top of the head and half way to the knees. It will be kept in constant motion, back and forth and zig-zag by the mechanical arrangement so that it will resemble somewhat a fugitive running from a policeman.

In the center of the target a six-inch bull's-eye will be placed. A hit in the bull's-eye will count 10. No hit will count less than eight. A hit on the pasteboard "body" outside the bull's-eye in what would be a vital spot in the human will count nine.

The initial shoot Monday will be started by the second platoon of Central District. Then on the following seven days the district, in order, from Carondelet to the Mounted will take their turn. When these platoons have completed their targets the first and third platoons will be given a schedule for their turn at the range.

In reporting the new system to Chief O'Brien, Capt. Roemer says the life-size targets in motion will "simulate actual shooting so frequently required by our officers in the performance of their duty."

DEACON QUITS OVER LEAGUE

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 6.—Declaring that in defeating proponents of the League of Nations at Tuesday's election churchgoers permitted "the spirit of hatred, prejudice and selfishness to outweigh the responsible spirit of living," J. W. Hicks, a deacon in the Plymouth Congregational Church, today, publicly asked that his name be stricken from the roll of the church. He declared that "Christianity, as taught, has been weighed in the balance and found wanting."

WIDOW OF OFFICER FATALLY WOUNDED IN ARGONNE ENGAGED

Mrs. Catharyne Newsom Duncan to Become Bride of P. R. King Jr. of Chicago.

Mrs. Catharyne Newsom Duncan, daughter of I. J. Newsom, 320 Gore avenue, Webster Groves, sales manager of the Lee Wilson Lumber Co. and member of the firm of Wright-Newsom Chemical Co., confirmed yesterday a report that she is engaged to be married to P. R. King Jr., son of a retired Chicago capitalist. Mrs. Duncan is the widow of First Lieut. John T. Duncan of the 137th Infantry, who died from wounds suffered in the battle of the Argonne Forest. They were married Sept. 29, 1917, at Fort Sill, Okl

Mrs. Duncan spent three months in France this year, visiting her husband's grave, and shortly after her return visited Mrs. Frank Dale Thompson, a girlhood friend, at Indianapolis. While there she met King, also a friend of the Thompsons.

The engagement has not been formally announced nor a date set for the wedding.

Says Sugar Will Go Lower.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Claus A. Spreckles, sugar refiner, who sailed for Europe on the Olympic today, said that sugar had not yet reached the low price level to which it will fall. "Prices must go to normal, and by that I mean to pre-war figures," he said. "This fall finds us with a surplus to be sold in this country of 1,250,000 tons."

H. Littlefield, former president of the Friday and Parliamentary Clubs and present corresponding secretary of the Missouri Federation, as a candidate for president of the Missouri Federation at the elections to be held next May.

The officers elected yesterday were: Mrs. John S. Payne, president; Mrs. J. E. Allen, first vice-president; Mrs. Upton Coudy, second vice-president; Mrs. Daisy Balson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frank Davis, recording secretary; Mrs. C. B. Broom, treasurer, and Mrs. Matilda Sternberger, auditor. The offices were hotly contested and Mrs. Payne won the presidency from Mrs. Gilbert Fox by a majority of only three votes.

Americans' Creed Recited.

The morning session was opened at 9:30 with a recitation of the Americans' creed and the singing by the assembly of the Star Spangled Banner and America the Beautiful. Mrs. Carl J. Luyties accompanied at the piano. After reports were given by chairmen of the various committees and the officers of the eighth district, A. E. Bostwick, Librarian, spoke on the County Library Bill, which will soon be introduced to the State Legislature and which provides for the establishment of libraries in the county. Bostwick said there are many homes in the rural districts that never see a book and he asked for the co-operation of the Women's Clubs in passing this bill to eliminate such conditions. Addresses were also made asking for the participation of the women in the Armistice Day Parade and in the Red Cross Roll Call.

A luncheon was served in the ball-room, after which W. Scott Hancock spoke on Service in Organizational Work, and Charles Hatfield, secretary of the St. Louis Publicity and Convention Bureau, gave a short talk on the relation of women's work and the Chamber of Commerce. Each chairman of the forty-nine clubs represented at the convention responded to a roll call and gave a one-minute talk on the accomplishments and plans of her club.

Mrs. George A. Still, president of the Missouri Federation, in her address, asked for a united effort by the different clubs to enlist young women in club work in order that they may obtain an early training in the work that is to be theirs later. She also criticised the selfishness of many clubs in holding their meetings at a time when business and professional women were unable to attend, and asked that wherever possible meeting times should be arranged to permit professional and business women to be present.

Plea for Endowment Fund.

Mrs. W. O. Bleeck spoke on the State Endowment Fund, and urged the members of the women's clubs to contribute to increase the fund to $25,000, and M. R. Bevington of the Department of Naturalization praised the work of women's organizations in the contribution to the solution of problems of Americanization.

Mrs. A. E. Reton, retiring president, in the concluding speech, stated that a representation of 49 clubs out of 51 in the district was an unusual occurrence and thanked the women for their loyalty and co-operation.

Resolutions were then adopted and plans were made for a reception for Mrs. Alice Winters, president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, who will make a brief stay in the city Nov. 11.

SAYS WOOD ALCOHOL VICTIM DID NOT SPEND FLOWER FUND

Mother of Edward O'Shea Declares Beverage Was Not Bought With Donations.

Mrs. Anna L. Holleran of Ferguson, whose son, Edward O'Shea, died Oct. 25 from wood alcohol poisoning, has been informed by several of the son's acquaintances that the beverage which he drank was not purchased from a fund which had been raised to purchase flowers for the funeral of another wood alcohol victim. A news item in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch related that O'Shea and another man used the flower money in a spree which ended in the death of both.

Mrs. Holleran says she has been told, by persons familiar with the circumstances, that O'Shea had nothing to do with raising the fund, but subscribed 25 cents to it. A small sum of money was subscribed, she was told, but none was collected. O'Shea enlisted in the regular army in war time, and was a First Sergeant at Camp Pike. He had worked for 8 years for a storage and moving firm.

LEVITZKI PLAYS AND ACTS LIKE A VETERAN

BY RICHARD L. STOKES.

QUAINTLY veteran is the method of Mischa Levitzki, although he has not fared far into the twenties, the decade of ardent blood. In a recital last night at the Odeon, before a numerous and amiably disposed audience, the pianist exhibited his flair for maturity not alone in his bearing, one of insousciant aplomb whatever the plaudits of his hearers. It showed also through his playing, in the form of an imperturbable composure, a gaily disdainful, reticence, which seemed at moments to resemble irony. It was almost, on occasions, as if the music and he were in some delicately malicious secret, to which others might not be admitted.

What an air of mirthful complicity, of smiling in one's sleeve, there was, for instance, in the pretence of contemptuous languor with which he began Beethoven's "Appassionata" sonta! Only here the prank was turned upon the jester. For when mighty passages soon presented themselves, Levitzki had suddenly to arouse, as if by a spasm of energy, from his assumed nonchalance; so that the effect of the first movement, despite many beauties, was one of convulsions rather than of passion nobly on fire. In more amenable music, however, and especially in that presenting difficulties of execution, his mien of adult superiority and of mirthful inward relish had unopposed scope.

A Pleasurable Program.

Yet the graybeard mask could not always conceal the lively youth. Sometimes Levitzki forgot his venerable role, and then one heard the keys sing under his hand, exulting and gallant. At his truest he has few rivals—and none of his years—in grace, delicacy and poetic charm. A bright, luscious tone, pellucid clarity of phrasing, easy strength of arm, dazzling velocity of fingering, a temperament capable of fevof if not of passion, and a head incomparably clear—all these combined to make the recital interesting, pleasurable and at times thrilling.

He began with Tausig's arrangement of a Bach Toccato and Fugue—the latter part an admirable example of thinking in both hands at once. Then came a delightful melody by Gluck, arranged by Sgambati, which Levitzki—and here reticence was legitimate—played with a feeling which never approached sentimentality. The "Appassionata" followed; and one may praise the expression given to the second theme of the first movement, the beauty of the variations in the second movement, and the unruffled brilliance with which the last movement was dispatched.

Next came a Chopin group, headed by the lovely Nocturne in F sharp, with its gossamer traceries of ornament. The popular "Butterfly" etude was given with such contrasted airiness of touch and vigor of speed as to afford the audience an authentic thrill, and to win a second hearing. Other Chopin numbers were the "Black Key" etude, the waltz in A flat, Op. 64, No. 3, and the fine Scherzo in C sharp minor. Chopin's G flat waltz was the encore for the group.

A waltz by Stojowski, Levitzki's first teacher, ensued. Possibly its choice betrayed the dutifulness of the disciple to the preceptor rather than that of the performer to his audience. "La Jongleuse," a most scintillant number, was next, and delighted the audience into securing its repetition. "Concert Arabesques" on themes from "The Blue Danube Waltz" closed the program, and proved, before the end was reached, rather a bore, as circus pieces mostly do.

The gathering declined to disperse until Levitzki, in response to repeated applause, gave two more encores, which were Chopin's C-major Etude and Liszt's Twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody.

POISON THEORY IN MAN'S DEATH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Nov. 6.—The viscera of John McCormack, a farmer of Monett, Mo., was brought to Springfield today for analysis. The body was found in a well on his farm Wednesday. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict that McCormack had been murdered by unknown persons. The poison theory is based on the fact that no water was found in the man's lungs when the body was removed from the well.

Police of Monett have been informed that about three weeks ago a bullet was fired through McCormack's hat while he was gathering wood near his home. It is not known whether the shot was fired by an enemy or a passing hunter. McCormack recently became violently ill after he had taken some medicine, presumably for stomach trouble, the police have been informed

GRAND JURY FINDS MOST BASEBALL PLAYERS HONEST

Report Cites Instance in Chicago Where Player Left Field After Bribe Was Offered to Him.

THOUSANDS FLEECED ON BASEBALL POOLS

Out of $134,572 Collected in Three-League Combination Only $28,000, or Less, Is Paid in Prizes.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—The special grand jury investigating baseball this morning returned its final report in which it stated that "while evidence has been found that some games were thrown by players, the practice was not general, and the leaders in organized baseball may be relied upon to keep the game above suspicion."

The Grand Jury recommended that Hartley Replogle, assistant State's attorney in charge of the investigation, be retained by the incoming State's attorney as special prosecutor of those indicted. The Grand Jury's report says, in part:

"Considering the magnitude of the enterprise and the great number of ball players engaged, we believe a comparatively small number of the players have been dishonest — we were gratified to find players who immediately reported to their managers the suggestion of fixing and likewise managers who immediately discontinued players who were implicated in any way in attempts to corrupt the game. The adoption of this policy as a fixed practice, no matter at what cost, will make impossible a repetition of the present trouble.

Instance of Player's Honesty.

"Evidence was given the jury of an instance during a game played in Chicago where a certain player on the New York National League club offered another player a bribe if he would throw that particular game. The player to whom the bribe was offered immediately walked off the diamond, refusing to continue pitching the game.

"We earnestly commend the action of this player, and we likewise commend the manager of the New York club for his action on the following day in suspending the player who offered the bribe. In this particular case, and notwithstanding the reprehensible conduct of the players who offered the bribe, no crime was committed under the present Illinois law. Therefore no indictment could be rendered by this Grand Jury. At this point we call attention to a law offered by Senafor Cummins in May, 1919, making the offering or accepting of a bribe a criminal offense. This Grand Jury recommends the passage of such a Federal statute.

Guilty Men Remorseful.

"The Jury thinks it advisable to emphasize in this report the remorse and self-contempt felt by the players appearing before the grand jury who had accepted bribes. Their testimony in this connection was entirely voluntary on their part and showed how cheap and petty each player felt, and how their loss of self-respect was in no wise compensated by the sums that were accepted."

Touching on baseball pools, the report says thousands of persons are fleeced every season of hundreds of thousands of dollars each week; that "the pools are, almost without exception, conducted by irresponsible persons who operate without definite system and without any regularity of practice."

There are 134,572 chances in a season's three-league pool, the report says, selling at $1 a chance. Out of the $134,572 collected the pool pays to the buyers only $28,000 in prizes. Even at this enormous profit, the grand jury says, "it appears from the evidence that pool owners refuse even to pay all the prizes won by individuals."

The grand jury, in making its report, returned indictments against six Chicago men as a result of its inquiry into baseball pools. The six are charged with unlawfully selling lottery tickets. Their bonds were fixed at $1500 each.

Judge McDonald complimented the jury on its work in unearthing and exposing "conditions of bribery and crookedness in organized baseball that shocked the conscience of the clean, sport-loving American public."

"However," he said, "this was the only effective way by which the baneful influence of a coterie of crooks and plug-uglies could be thwarted and the national game purified and restored to the confidence of the public. By your earnest efforts to bring about this hoped-for result you have rendered an invaluable service to your city and country."

Ruling on War Policy.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 6.—The Kansas Supreme Court in a decision handed down today upheld the contention of a life insurance company that it cannot be held liable for the full amount of a policy bearing a military service waiver, in case the insured died while engaged in such service. The court ruled that "military service" could not be restricted to actual fighting, but that such service begins with enlistment.

FORMAL OPENING OF DEPARTMENT STORE ADDITION THIS WEEK

11-Story Structure at Seventh and Washington Built by Stix, Baer & Fuller at Cost of $1,000,000.

GIVES FIRM FIFTEEN ACRES IN FLOOR SPACE

Tablet to the Founders of the Store, Aaron Fuller, J. A. Baer and C. A. Stix Unveiled There Yesterday.

The 11-story building at the corner of Washington avenue and Seventh street, erection of which was begun shortly after the close of the war by the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co. (Grand-Leader), has been finished and the firm has completed occupancy.

The building adjoins the eight-story building at Washington avenue and Sixth street, which the Grand Leader has occupied since 1906. The floors of the two buildings have been thrown together so that the two buildings have the interior aspect of one, with no intervening partitions on any floor.

The store now covers the entire block between Washington and Lucas avenues, and Sixth and Sevents streets with 625,000 square feet, or 15 acres of floor space. A more-easily grasped dimension is that if the floors of the building, instead of being piled one upon another, were stretched side by side along Washington avenue to the west the store would reach to Eighteenth street.

Cost Exceeded $1,000,000.

The new building was erected because congestion in the old quarters created by increased sales, had made difficult pursuit of the firm's desire to increase and expand its merchandising service to the public. The new building cost in excess of $1,000,000, but it has made possible the addition of $1,000,000 in merchandise carried in the store, making the total value of stock approximately $5,000,000.

A representative of the firm yesterday stated the store's annual business to be $20,000,000, and expressed the belief that the added space would make possible further growth while contributing to the comfort of the shopping public.

The added space has enabled each of the approximately 100 departments in the store to stretch out in more open displays, and also has made possible the addition of certain opportunities for shoppers. An instance of this are the Cowan galleries on the sixth floor. These are really a little store apart devoted to the display of novelties suitable and recommended for gifts.

Department Store With New $1,000,000 Addition

Another instance of the opportunities afforded by the new addition is that the tenth floor is given over to expanded welfare work for the employes, a cafteria where a satisfying meal may be had for from 12 to 15 cents, or where those who carry their lunch may eat it with the addition of hot refreshment. Here also is the educational department, where clerks in the various departments are taught knowledge of the merchandise and how to sell it.

Hospital and Dentist.

In this connection, the chief aim of this instruction is stated to be that the clerk shall recognize salesmanship not as the ability to dispose of goods, but the ability to serve each customer with that article which best suits his want. The tenth floor has also the employes' hospital and dentist.

The firm of Stix, Baer & Fuller was established in 1892 in a building on Broadway near Morgan street. After a time it was moved to larger quarters at the northwest corner of Broadway and Washington avenue and then in September, 1906, the eight-story building on the west side of Sixth street, extending from Washington avenue to Lucas avenue was taken. In 1911 the store expanded into two adjoining buildings, including the "Grand Leader Annex" at Seventh street and Washington avenue, which was demolished to make way for the new 11-story structure just completed.

The first year's business of the Grand Leader was $750,000. As stated the annual sales now are approximately $20,000,000. The first store had about 150 employes. The present Grand Leader force approaches 4000. The firm recently established a $40,000 club consisting of five buildings for employes on the Meramec River near Fern Glen The first Grand Leader store had 50,000 square feet of space. The floor space now is more than 12 times greater.

Founders of the Store.

The firm of Stix, Baer & Fuller, was founded by the late Charles A. Stix, Sigmond P. Baer, Julius A. Baer and Aaron Fuller. In later years the sons of the founders have entered the business—Leo C. Fuller, Sidney R. Baer and Arthur B. Baer. These, in addition to employes of many years, D. G. Braham, Leopold Freund and S. Wolfort, have membership in the board of directors.

The formal opening of the new addition will be the week beginning tomorrow.

A tablet for Aaron Fuller, Sigmond Baer, Julius A. Baer and the late Charles Stix, the founders, was unveiled yesterday afternoon on the west side of the first floor of the new building, on the northeast corner of Seventh street and Washington avenue. The tablet was erected by the Tenormore Club, composed of employes who have been with the company 10 or more years. The store closed 15 minutes earlier so that the 3000 employes could attend the ceremony.

The tablet hangs upon the west wall, near the elevators. The inscription is as follows: "This tablet is dedicated to the founders of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., Charles A. Stix, Aaron Fuller, Sigmond Baer and Julius A. Baer, by their coworkers who have, served with them 10 or more years, on the occasion of the completion of this splendid building as a tribute to their achievement and business success, and as a token of our esteem. More enduring than bronze shall be our loyalty and devotion in the years to come.

WIFE SAID SHE DID NOT LOVE HUSBAND, DEPOSITION SAYS

Uncontested Divorce Granted Jacob Wallach, Teacher in Central High School.

Jacob Wallach, teacher of Latin and English in the Central High School, obtained a divorce yesterday from Henrietta Miles Wallach, 31 years old, on the grounds of desertion. They were married Aug. 31, 1914, and separated March 30, 1919, when Wallach was teaching at Wheeling, W. Va. She refused to come to St. Louis with him, it was alleged.

The deposition of his sister, Mrs. Esther Hartmann of Newark, N. J., was read. She said she tried to effect a reconciliation between her brother and his wife, but that the latter demurred, assigning as her reason that Wallach was too systematic and methodical. This was her only complaint against him, the sister said.

Mrs. Hartman quoted Mrs. Wallach as saying that she realized on the day after marriage she did not love her husband and that they were mismated. She also said, according to the deponent, she regarded the marriage contract the same as she would a business contract and that it was like "a scrap of paper—if you don't want to keep it, just tear it up."

Mrs. Wallach did not contest the suit. She lives in New York City.

The Princeton Followers Very Naturally Expected Scheerer to Cut a Wide Swath

HARVARD'S AERIAL DRIVE GAINS TIE WITH PRINCETON

Crimson Carries Ball From Own 35-Yard Line to Touchdown in Final Period—Score 14 to 14.

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 6.—Some good football and some bad; two damaging penalties as the game opened, which cost the Tigers seven points; one blocked punt, which cost the Crimson seven points, and some brilliant, almost sensational forward passing, were mixed and jumbled together in a whirling, exciting game as Harvard and Princeton played each other to a 14-to-14 tie before 44,000 gaily bedecked men and women in the closely packed Stadium here today.

The Harvard men, with defeat staring them in the face, just as it did a year ago, came from behind in the last few minutes of play and saved a lost cause, by falling back on the forward pass when everything else had failed. They completed four in quick succession for a total gain of 65 yards, the last for a touchdown, which robbed Princeton of a victory just as was the case in 1919, when their yearly struggle ended in a 10 to 10 tie. So it came about that football history repeated itself. Lightning did strike the Tigers twice in the same place.

Each team scored two touchdowns with the resulting goals therefrom, and to bring forward these high spots in their proper importance they can be summarized as follows:

Fumbles Costly to Tigers.

Capt. Arnold Horween scored the first touchdown for Harvard before the game was fairly under way as the direct result of two of the most costly penalties that ever befell a football team in many a long day.

Macomber scored the second touchdown for Harvard just before the game ended. He fairly picked a long forward pass out of the air when running at top speed a foot or two over the goal line. Faxon kicked both goals.

In between, the Tigers had their fun. Early in the third period Don Lourie took a long forward pass from Murrey and sidestepped one Crimson tackler, ducked another and ran 25 yards for Princeton's first touchdown. The plunging Garrity scored the second just after the fourth period opened as the direct result of Stan Keck blocking one of Arnold Horween's punts and Legendre recovering the ball for the Tigers on Harvard's 4-yard line.

So it happened, but how it happened must be developed in more detail. The huge stadium was throbbing with its thousands, with hundreds upon hundreds clamoring at the gates in the vain hope of getting a ticket which might have been turned in at the last minute, when the two teams took the field at two o'clock.

Two Tiger Penalties Aid Harvard To Score Soon After Start of Game

Harvard won the toss and decided to defend the north goal with a light but fitful wind behind the ball. And this is important in the light of what followed, as it gave Princeton the kickoff and the usually dependable Keck took his eye off the ball and sent it not more than 30 yards in the Harvard territory, a weak and unfortunate effort.

Harvard punted on the third down to Lourie, but some over-anxious Princeton man roughed the kicker so that the referee called the play back, imposed a penalty of 15 yards against the Tigers and gave Harvard a first down on Princeton's 45-yard line.

Then the Crimson opened up its driving line attack and with five rushes for about two yards each, and with one for 16 yards, carried the ball deep into Princeton territory. Then came the second damaging penalty against the Tigers for "piling up" on the runner, which landed the ball on the 1-yard line.

Twice, in sheer desperation, the Tigers stopped Horween at the line of scrimmage, but on the third try, the Harvard captain battered his way over the line with the stadium a mass of waving crimson.

Tigers Refuse to Be Stunned.

It was a stunning blow, but the Tigers refused to be stunned, and for the balance of the first half they slightly outplayed their rivals and twice advanced close enough to threaten a score. But the play was loose to the point of "rattles," and the football far below the high average expected.

Then came the second half with all the thrills and exciting situations which could well be crowded into 30 minutes of actual play.

Both teams settled down to something like their true form and particularly Princeton. After an exchange of punts following the kickoff, the Tigers took the ball on their own 45-yard line, and in less time almost than it takes to tell it, they tied the score.

After four or five line plunges which netted 15 yards, Murrey, who had been substituted for Scherer, shot a 20-yard forward pass to Lourie, who twisted and ducked his way clear to run 25 yards for a touchdown. Keck kicked the goal.

Not content with this the Tigers kept on forcing the play until toward the end of the third period, Harvard was forced to punt from her own 25-yard line. Horween was so slow in getting off the ball that Keck, breaking through sharply, blocked the kick and the ball went shooting off across the field. Langendre was on it like a hawk after some teammate had blocked off a Harvard man, just as he was about to clutch the sphere. This gave Princeton the ball on Harvard's four-yard line and one plunge by Garrity carried it two yards nearer as the third period ended.

Garrity Charges Over Crimson Line For Final Touchdown for Princeton

That one minute rest was just about the longest one minute in the memory of every Princeton man present. Victory it seemed hung on the next two or three plays, and they could hardly wait for the realization of a long dream.

Hank Garrity, the tearing, plunging back, was entrusted with the task of taking the ball over as the fourth period opened. The Harvard men with their backs against the wall stopped him just short of the goal line on his first drive at the center of the line, but there was no stopping him the second time and Princeton men rose in a frenzy of cheers when Garrity crashed over for what appeared to be a sure victory. Keck kicked the goal and the score was 14 to 7.

On the run of the game up to this point it did not seem possible that Harvard could score. The Tigers had learned to stop the running attack and the Crimson had shown so little of a forward passing offense that the case looked hopeless.

But Harvard had been holding something, perhaps for Yale, in Buell and Pitts. The former was substituted for Fitzgerald and the latter for Churchill, and they knew what to do, and how to do it.

With the fourth and last period half over and the Tigers playing largely a defensive game, Harvard took the ball on her own 35-yard line, and opened up a forward passing game of such sheer brilliance that the Tigers were fairly carried off their feet.

Buell Outwits Opponents.

Ordinarily it would be poor football tactics to call for a forward pass on the first down deep in one's own territory, but desperate measures were needed and Buell outwitted his opponents, who were drawn well up for a running attack, by shooting a pass to Pitts for a clean gain of 35 yards.

He faked a running play on the next line up from the closest kind of a close formation, but running back, made another forward pass for six yards and followed with the same formation for another one of 12 yards.

By this time the Tigers were awake to the strategy and split their defense for another pass, whereupon Buell shot two plays into the line, but for a scant yard each, so roused were the men from Princeton.

It was the third down with 10 yards to go and Princeton men began to breathe easier, but the relief was only momentary. Once again faking a running play from close formation Buell took the ball on a direct pass, darted back eight or ten yards and turning like a flash hurled a forward pass a full 18 yards in the general direction of a point at the far corner of the goal line, to which Macomber was racing at full speed, broke its flight with the tips of his fingers, gathered it in and fell in a heap over the goal line.

Feelings broke loose, with a roar which rattled back and forth from the walls of the stadium. Hats went in the air and then came a hush, as everybody realized that the goal must be added for the one point needed to tie the score.

Faxon, the Harvard tackle, was deliberate to the point of extreme fussiness in sighting the ball, but appeared to be as cool and calm as the unemotional clam—a condition not apparent in the throbbing, restless stand.

He stepped back a pace or two, paused a moment and shot the ball true to the mark. So the score was tied; so Harvard was saved; so Princeton's fondest hopes were sadly shattered.

YALE ELEVEN DEFEATS BROWN IN GAME FULL OF THRILLS, 14 TO 10

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 6.—In a game that was full of thrills from the first play Yale defeated Brown by a score of 14 to 10. Brown led most of the game, first by 7 to 0 and later by 10 to 7, but toward the end Yale took a great brace, as in games earlier this year, and won.

The game was exciting to the last, Brown opening up a forward passing offense at the close, while Yale used this style of play more than in any previous contest this year. Armstrong and Oden played for Brown in a way that will long be remembered, and the game goes down as one of the great Brown-Yale battles.

Yale used two quarterbacks during the game, Murphy for the greater part, though he went out for a while and came back. Kempton playing in the interim and later shifting to halfback. Murphy's bad leg troubled him, affecting his kicking, for he made many trials for field goals, and was successful in none of them. One of them was blocked, one just missed the bar, but the majority went far short of the mark.

Ralph Fletcher's Goal From Field Wins for Illinois

Placement Kick in Second Period Brings Only Points of Contest.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—The light, but tricky Illinois football eleven climbed a notch closer to the 1920 championship of the Western Conference by scoring a 3-to-0 triumph over Chicago today before 32,000 fans, the biggest crowd that ever witnessed a football game in Chicago.

Credit for the victory goes to Ralph Fletcher, diminutive halfback who booted a goal from placement at the 23-yard line at the start of the second period. Early in the first period Fletcher's brother, Bob, Illinois' quarterback, tried the same feat from the 15-yard line, but the ball did not get six feet off the ground and rolled wide of the Chicago goal.

Illinois, with victories over Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota and Chicago, must defeat Wisconsin at Madison next Saturday in order to meet Ohio State with a clean slate in the deciding game of the championship campaign at Urbana two weeks from today. In the meantime, Ohio, which conquered Michigan today, will rest in preparation for the clash with Illinois as the Buckeyes have no other games scheduled.

Walquist Stars for Illinois.

Illinois was superior to the crippled Chicago eleven in every department of the game. The brilliant forward passing of Walquist, Illinois right half, to Carney at end, brought the huge crowd to its feet with an outburst of cheering a half dozen times. Walquist heaved passes for gains of 20 to 30 yards with consistent regularity.

Chicago never seriously threatened the Illinois goal, and for three periods played a strictly defensive game.

Iowa Is Victor Over Northwestern, 20 to 0.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 6.—Iowa University defeated Northwestern here today by the score of 20 to 0. Coach Jones' rejuvenated Hawkeyes played a stellar game, which, coupled with the inability of the Northwestern backs to gain, spelled an easy victory for the Iowa team.

Locke scored the first touchdown in the initial period when he carried the ball 49 yards through the line. Aubrey Devine scored the second touchdown in the third period and Jacqua scored the final touchdown in the fourth period.

Davey, Badger Substitute, Defeats Minnesota, 3 to 0.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 6.—Wisconsin rooters paraded the street in Minneapolis tonight, singing the name of Davey, their hero of a 3-to0 victory over the Minnesota eleven on Northrop Field this afternoon. For it was Davey, sent in as a substitute quarterback, who drop kicked from the 20-yard line squarely between the Minnesota goal posts in the third period for the only points of the game.

In the eyes of the Minnesota fandom, however, another luminary gleams, for the redoubetble Arnold Oss, his leg crippled and his strength frequently exhausted, played through the game with outstanding brillancy, much as the Oss of old.

Wisconsin's forward passing efforts were fairly successful, nearly half of them being completed, one for a gain of 28 yards, another for 15 and others for lesser yardage. Minnesota tried fewer passes, but broke almost even with the Badgers in percentage of those completed. One of the Gopher passes resulted in a 25-yard gain by Oss through a broken field.

Buckeyes Block Michigan's Punt And Win, 14 to 7

Captain Huffman Falls on Ball Behind Goal Line in Final Period of Game.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 6.—Breaking through Michigan's defense on their own 3-yard line early in the fourth quarter, Capt. Huffman of Ohio State blocked Steketee's punt behind the Wolverine goal and converted a seemingly tie game into a 14-to-7 victory for Ohio State. More than 20,000 persons witnessed the battle.

Michigan's only touchdown, 7 minutes after the start of the second period, came after one of the prettiest exhibitions of fighting ever seen on Ohio Field. Michigan went to the Buckeye 4-yard line on a delayed pass formation. For two downs the Buckeyes held out the third, Quarterback Dunn sneaked across the line.

Near the close of the period after a short punting duel between Ohio's quarterback and Steketee, H. Workman standing on the Wolverine's 22-yard line dropped back and hurled one of his famous forward passes to his brother, Noel Workman, who was downed on the 3-yard line. On the fourth down Michigan's line crumbled, Stinchcomb sliding through for a touchdown from the 2-yard line.

Davies Star in Pitt's Victory

Halfback Scores 21 Points Running 90 Yards for One Touchdown.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—To the individual brilliance of Halfback Davies may be attributed largely the victory of the University of Pittsburgh over the University of Pennsylvania on Franklin Field today by the score of 27 to 21.

Davies, receiving a kickoff, in the second period, flashed through the entire red and blue team 90 yards for a touchdown. In another spectacular moment Davies intercepted a forward pass and dashed from midfield for a score. He score 21 of Pittsburgh's points.

In the first period, Pennsylvania opened up an offensive hardly expected in view of its previous performances and with a series of pretty forward passes scored early.

McMillin Stars As Centre Beats Depauw, 34-0

Kentuckians' Quarterback Is Responsible for 19 of Eleven's Points.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 6.—Excelling in their aerial attack and aided by brilliant open field running of McMillin, Centre Collegt defeated Depauw University, 34 to 0, here this afternoon.

McMillin, in addition to plunging through the Depauw defense for two touchdowns, added six points to his team's total by two drop kicks when the Indiana collegians held near their goal line. He also added another point by making a goal after touchdown when Weaver retired from the game.

Centre worked the forward pass game successfully, bewildering the Depauw defense with a mixture of long and short passes. A crowd estimated at about 17,000 witnessed the contest.

Penn State Forward Passes and Way's Great Run Beat Nebraska

Hugo Bezdek's Eleven Vanquishes Westerners, 20 to 0—Easterners' Halfback Dashes From Own 43-Yard Line to Touchdown in Final Period of Contest.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 6.—It was East against West this afternoon on Beaver Field, and when Hugo Bezdek's Pennsylvania State eleven piled up 20 points, while Nebraska failed to score, the East came out on top. It was a great game and a fitting climax to the annual Pennsylvania Day celebration at the college. An estimated crowd of ten thousand witnessed the well-earned victory of the Nittany Lions.

Nebraska's powerful line proved hard to penetrate, but when Penn State cut loose with some of the forward passes that Bezdek held up his sleeve, the complexion of the game changed. Forward passes figured prominently in the scoring of two touchdowns, while the third was a personal contribution of Charlie Way, the diminutive halfback, who again demonstrated his right to an all-American berth. Bezdek's marvel has been on the injured list, but he went in at the start of the final quarter and fairly ran away from the Westerners, who were not slow by any means.

Way was Bezdek's only substitution. He relieved Lightner when State had the ball in the shadow of its own goal posts. Given the ball on the very first play he went around right end for a beautiful run of 58 yards, being nailed by Newman on the Nebraska 35-yard line. But he was merely warming up, for following an exchange of punts which gave State the ball on her 43-yard line, Way broke through right tackle, only to find three burly Westerners awaiting him with open arms, but that meant nothing to the Blue and White star. Whirling about, he cut through the secondary defense to the length of the field and then outsprinted Newman when the latter was the remaining barrier to a touchdown. It was one of the most sensational runs ever seen here. Rausch kicked the goal.

Forward Pass Gives Score.

After both teams had made stonewall stands on their very goal line during the first period, State broke into the scoring column near the close of the second frame by opening up with sensational forward passes. One to Haines enabled the latter to sprint 35 yards before being nailed on the eight-yard line. The rush was halted momentarily when Nebraska intercepted a pass to Hufford, who stepped across the line for the first score. Rausch kicked goal.

Nebraska improved during the third quarter and kept the ball in State's territory almost the entire period. Forward passes to Swanson carried the ball to the Blue and White six-yard line, but again State stiffened and on the fourth down a forward pass grounded back of the goal. Way's entrance at the start of the fourth frame was the signal for another Penn State drive as has been related. Just before the end of the game, some poor judgment lost the ball on downs for Nebraska on their 26-yard line and State's drive was not stopped, Killinger finally going over for the touchdown, to which Rausch failed to kick the goal. This ended the scoring.

Dartmouth's Line Crushes Cornell for 14-3 Victory

Robertson's 23-Yard Run and Blocked Punt Give Big Green Team Two Scores.

By Leased Wire From New York Bureau of The Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—A bruising, hurtling, man-eating Dartmouth forward line, operating behind the Minnesota shift, defeated Cornell by a score of 14 to 3 at the Polo Grounds today, although one will find no reference to the fact in the appended statistics.

Nor will it avail anything to inquire of an innocent bystander. He will tell you that Capt. Jim Robertson won the game by turning Cornell's right flank for 23 yards and a touchdown in the first period and that Shelburne made it safe by flinging his giant negro bulk on a blocked kick beyond the goal line in the fourth.

It may, however, in the excitement of the moment be forgotten that it was Neidlinger, a forward, who blocked a careless Carey punt far down in Cornell territory; otherwise, Robertson would have found it necessary to run further than 23 yards to score. Also it was Aschenbach, another forward, who romped over the prostrate miner to smother another kick almost on the goal line. Shelburne happened to be in the immediate background and to him fell the touchdown.

To the stands it was Robertson, Holbrook and Shelburne, who gained so handily off tackle. But that is overlooking the fact that Sonenburg and Neidlinger opened gaping, ragged holes in the Cornell line for just that purpose; that Cunningham and Crisp were a defensive Gilbraltar, no more, no less and that the entire ensemble slipped into the pack interference with the gentle accord of a herd of roving cattle.

Defensively, the Dartmouth line was all but immune. Cornell never advanced the ball beyond the 30 yard mark and its only score of the day came in the second period when Carey shot a lofty field goal from the 41 yard line, a magnificent effort.

Lewis' Field Goal Gives Missouri Victory, 10 to 7

Chuck Also Figures Prominently in Plays Which Net Tigers' Touchdown.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 6. — A touchdown from a pass across the goal line by Hinds to Cowell saved the Aggies from a shutout here this afternoon when the Tigers won, 10 to 7.

The old kicking hoodoo which for three years in succession had kept the Tigers from taking the Wildcat's scalp this year turned the other way, for it was Chuck Lewis' field goal in the third quarter that gave Missouri a safe lead.

The Missouri touchdown came in the second period when Travis blocked Huston's punt. Fullbright passed 10 yards to Lewis and the Tigers' captain smashed a 20-yard run through a broken field. Lewis tossed the oval 15 yards to Williams. He caught it on his knees and crawled across the goal line.

Both the Tigers and the Wildcats worked aerial football for big gains and each showed ability at smashing the line. Travis' tackling was the bright spot of Missouri defense. Dewey Huston and Chuck Lewis fought a valiant punting duel, each kicking from behind the goal lines to midfield safely. Huston was once forced to kick directly from behind the goal post when Lewis' punt had rolled against the post and stopped.

Williams and Lewis, with repeated 15 and 20 yard runs, were the stars of the Tiger backfield. Lincoln, too, showed well in the few minutes he was in the game.

The smashing running of the light Aggie backfield bothered the Missouri line and loose tackling gave the Aggies frequent big gains on returning punts.

Both lines showed real defense for each team turned the other back at the one-yard line, holding for four downs, but each weakened in other pinches:

Sooners Defeat Kansas 21-9 and Take M. V. Lead

Statistics of Contest Show Oklahoma Outplayed Rivals at All Phases of Game.

NORMAN, Okla., Nov. 6.—The University of Oklahoma practically clinched the football championship of the Missouri Valley Conference here today by defeating the unbeaten Kansas eleven, 21 to 9. It was the third successive victory for the Sooners, the others coming over Washington and Missouri.

Statistics on the game today, show that Benny Owen's eleven outplayed the Jayhawkers at every angle. The Norman team had 14 first downs, against only two for Kansas. From scrimmage, the Sooners gained 425 yards, and Kansas only 105. Oklahoma gained 107 yards on seven completed forward passes and the visitors only 18 on the two of 19 attempted, which were completed.

The Jayhawkers were the first to score, putting over a touchdown in the first period, Mandeville crossing the goal line, after one of the Kansas forward passes had put the ball close to the Oklahoma goal line. Lonborg kicked goal.

Sooners Use Aerial Attack.

In the second period, Kansas added two more points on a safety, before the Sooners got started. This came when Jones threw Morrison, after the latter had recovered his own fumble behind the Oklahoma goal line.

Here, however, Owen's eleven opened up on its forward passing game, and before the period ended Swatek went over for the first touchdown and White kicked goal. Aerial plays and rushes gave the Sooners the score.

The Oklahomans took the lead in the third period and held it for the remainder of the contest. This time it was Left Halfback Hill who went over the line, forward passes again aiding the Sooners in bringing the ball close to the Jayhawker line. White again kicked goal. In the fourth period, Davis scored and kicked goal.

The contest was one of the cleanest witnessed on a local field. There were only three penalties, two against Oklahoma and one against Kansas. The total yardage of the penalties tottaled only 25 yards.

BLACKBURN COLLEGE DEFEATS PRINCIPIA IN LAST 2 MINUTES OF GAME

The football eleven of Blackburn College defeated the Principia Academy team of St. Louis at Carlinville yesterday afternoon by a 6-to-0 score. The only score came in the fourth quarter. With only 2 minutes to play Foley of Blackburn threw a forward pass to Dorsey, who caught it on the 12-yard line and went over for a touchdown. Quarterback Foley missed goal.

Blackburn held the advantage in the first half, but the Principia team came back strong in the third and fourth period. Neither eleven was able to get closer than to within 26 yards of the other's goal line by straight football, but the one forward pass in the fourth quarter gave Blackburn the victory. Joe Foley, who played at Great Lakes with Jimmie Conzelman, the former Piker, was the individual star for Blackburn, while Jimmie George, Lester Reiman and Capt. Carson performed well for Principia.

Blackburn College has lost only one football game this season and that to Shurtleff College. The score was 17 to 0. The Blackburn team defeated Western M. A., 28 to 6, McKendree College, 26 to 0; Charleston Normal, 28 to 0.

PUNCHLESS PIKERS BEATEN BY DRAKE BULLDOGS, 14 TO 6

Visitors' Aerial Attack Nets Two Touchdowns, One After Washington Fumble—Locals Score on Forward Pass.

WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY gridiron hopes received a third blow in as many weeks when the Pikeway eleven went down to a 14 to 6 defeat before the Drake University team of Des Moines, Ia., on Francis Field yesterday afternoon. With their loss the local collegians slipped to sixth place in the Missouri Valley Conference standing.

Washington cannot attribute its defeat to the elements as was the case in the Oklahoma game or to poor generalship as demonstrated at Ames. Yesterday the local team lost because it did not have the punch to put over a victory. It showed very little improvement over its form of last week, but looked much better because Drake was not a great deal superior.

And after all is summed up it seems that the real reason for Pikeway reverses can be told briefly. There is not a spark plug for the offensive and for that reason the attack is sluggish. Time and again the Red and Green started auspicious marches, but with an intercepted pass or a penalty or a rushing loss, Rider's men seemed to loose their snap and the attack was stopped. Washington did not seem to be able to fight back in the face of misfortunes or failure. The Piker machine needs a Jimmy Conzelman or a couple of Sinn Feiners.

Two breaks had a lot to do with the ultimate outcome. However, these "breaks" were due to Pikeway shortcomings and cannot serve to alleviate the sting of defeat. After the locals scored their touchdown, the try at goal was missed and Drake was still on the long end of the score, 7 to 6. Captain Potthoff missed the attempt, but it was his first goal effort of the year. Griesedieck has been doing the kicking, but he had just left the game and a change in the usual program was necessary.

Thompson's Fumble Costly.

The second break came shortly after the opening of the third canto. Washington had shown a great improvement in the line and held the Iowans for three line bucks on their 20 yard line. Then Niggemyer, kicked to midfield and Thompson received. Tommy caught the ball on the bound out when tackled, fumbled it. A Bulldog covered it and Drake took the offensive in midfield. The second touchdown was scored immediately after. This fumble took a lot of the fight out of the Pikers. They had just started to take back that one point advantage, when it was increased to eight points. They couldn't recover from the blow.

The outstanding Pikers were Mathes and Shanley. The halfback was the only consistent gainer in the backfield, and had enough fight to make the entire attacking force look like it was scrapping. Griesedieck went out early with an inquiry and Johnny Grant replaced him. Grant tore things wide open for a while, but he tired rapidly and Drake forwards began to throw him for losses. As to Captain Potthoff, he has not yet hit his stride, if he has one. Time and again he was tumbled as soon as he hit the line and it is doubtful if he gained 20 yards the entire game.

Shanley and Kremer Play Brilliantly On the Wings for Washington Machine

Shanley on end made many brilliant tackles besides contributing the lone touchdown. He and Kremer looked mighty good on the wings as the figures show that Drake returned kicks for less than half the yardage returned by Washington's safety men. Kraehe, Hafner, and Singleton frequently broke through for tackles, but just as often the Pikeway defenders hit the ball-carriers and allowed them to travel on after the impact. Washington's entire play, offensive and defensive, can best be characterized as spasmodic.

Tommy Thompson directed the destinies for the first time this season, and although his fumble paved the way for the second Drake touchdown, he must be commended. His choice of plays was quite good, although on one or two plays he employed the forward pass without discretion. He was not safe on his punt catches, but when he did get the oval he returned nicely.

Pass Nets Touchdown.

Drake took the offensive right after the opening of play. The visitors had kicked off and Shanley returned nicely from his 20-yard line for 40 yards. After gaining seven yards the Pikers fumbled and Drake attacked. They gained 35 yards on line play and were going strong, when Niggemeyer called for a pass which was intercepted by Potthoff. Just why passes were brought out of the bag when the backs were smashing the local line puzzled the spectators.

Later in the period Drake received a punt on its 25-yard line and started the march which led to their first score. Eight line bucks and end skirts gained 35 yards and then a pass, Niggemeyer to Heath, put the ball on the red and green 20-yard mark. Another pass was tried but intercepted by Thompson five yards from his line. This was on Drake's third down and it is a question whether Tommy would not have done better to bat the ball down to incomplete it.

Shanley then booted from behind his goal to his 28-yard line. One buck failed and then a pass, Niggemyer to Long, was good for a touchdown. Besides being a neat throw, this pass was completed because of a beautiful catch by Long. Two men were on him, but he nabbed it just as he crossed the line. Niggemyer added the subsequent point.

Thompson and Shanley Execute Forward Pass for Piker Touchdown

Washington's touchdown came early in the following period. Drake had punted and held the Pikers for two downs on their own 30-yard line. However, a 15-yard penalty gave the St. Louisans' first down near midfield. A pass was then successful, but Drake braced and held, forcing Shanley to boot. The visiting safety man expected the ball to cross the line so he could claim a touchback, but it played dead on the 3-yard line, when Drake had to scrimmage. Niggemyer immediately returned the compliment and Thompson ran back the kick to Drake's 30-yard line. Two line bucks gained four yards, and then Thompson and Shanley executed their pass. The end took the ball from in front of the center and then cut to the left side of the field. He crossed into the promised land, just inside of the north boundary. Then the goal was missed.

The second Drake score came early in the third period. It has been related how Thompson fumbled on his 45-yard line and allowed the opposition a new life after they had been held. On the first play Hornaday was offside and the ball went back to midfield. Then entered before the public eye Mr. Clayton, a small but wil-knit halfback, who replaced Allen.

Niggemeyer dropped back to a punt formation and Clayton dashed out to the left wing. The Piker secondary defense spotted Clayton and went for him, but they were too slow. He leaped from the midst of them to snare a forward pass and then was away with the wind. He dodged, ducked and traveled to the four-yard line. It was here that the fleet Hafner reached him and dived at his legs. He connected and sent Clayton flying over the sidelines. Washington held valiantly for two line bucks but Niggemeyer squirmed through on the third. Clayton then booted the fourteenth point.

The stands prepared for a wide open attack on the part of Washington as dusk was descending but it came not. To the bitter end the Piker backs bucked at the line of beef, but they generaly bucked in vain.

The Post-Dispatch has prepared a mathematical ranking of men tennis players for the purpose of comparison with the official ranking of the St. Louis District Tennis Association, which was determined by a majority vote of a special committee. In the mathematical ranking, players qualified by taking part in two or more tournaments this season and the actual game scores against opponents were averaged. Matches lost and won were considered in placing the players. Defaults and upsets were counted in the final calculation where any two players were apparently even as a result of their season's score.

Fred O. Josties, winner of four local events this season, is clearly entitled to the No. 1 position. He lost to Drewes once and defeated Wray Brown twice, whereas Drewes lost to both Josties and Brown once. Josties also received a default from Drewes in the municipal final. Rollie Hoerr was placed third and Wray Brown fourth in the first ten. Jones, Satterfield, Haase, Heuerman, Reppert and Bryant follow in the order named.

As compared to the committee ranking, there is only one first-ten change of players, Bryant taking the place of Gautier. In the position of the first 10, Brown, Hoerr and Jones remain the same, while Satterfield is moved up from 10 to 6, Haase is dropped to 7, Ted Heuerman is moved to 8 from the ninth position. Reppert is changed from 7 to 9. Fred Josties and Ted Drewes are changed about. There are a total of seven changes of position in the first ten. In the second ten Clyde Frazier and Gordon Fennell replace Ed Harris and C. D. Hamilton. Every ranking position is changed in the second ten.

In the 1919 official ranking for men the mathematical basis was used by the Ranking Committee, which held five meetings in order to complete its work. This year Hoerr and Jones played more tennis and were ranked. The same is true of Arthur Reppert. These three men, together with Herbert Bryant, replace Elmer Schwarz, Arthur Niemoeller, Walter Finger and Robert Metcalf, who appeared in the first ten last season.

Red Watson Here To Defy 'Peewee'

Youthful New Orleans Bantam Thinks He Can Trim the South Broadway Pride.

"Red" Watson, a 17-year-old New Orleans ring product, accompanied by his manager, is in the city hot on the trail of Peewee Kaiser, of the South Broadway Athletic Club. Watson wants a match with either Pewee or Patsy Flanagan or almost any other main-event timber the city can sponsor. They all look alike to the fighting "Red," who tears in fast and doesn't know what the word clinch means, his manager declares.

Watson appears to be a promising boy on his record. Like Kaiser he came up through the amateur ranks and has only appeared in six main events, professionally.

His most recent bout was with Pal Moore, whom he fought last Monday at Memphis. News clippings show that Watson knocked Moore down on all fours, in the first round, and held his foe even in the second round. After that the high-geared Moore engine got to work and outpointed Red.

It was Watson that flattened the former national amateur bantam champion Ashton Donza in the fifth round, at New Orleans. It was Donza's professional debut and his last appearance for some time.

Watson is a southpaw, normally, but fights with either foot extended as the occasion demands. He will be 18 years old next December and has been fighting only two years. He weighs 115 at 3 p. m. or 118 ringside for his oponents.

OKLAHOMA NET TEAM DEFEATS PIKERS IN FOUR OF FIVE MATCHES

NORMAN, Ok., Nov. 6.—The Piker tennis pair came back strong in the last two matches played here today. Val Satterfield, who lost to Kirtland Parks yesterday, defeated Ben Parks in the closest and hardest fought match of the five. Val took the first set, 6—3. Parks came back and won the second set, 6—3. The St. Louis lad proved too much for the Oklahoman in the last set, winning, 6—3.

Wray Brown met Kirtland Parks for the first match today and lost the first set, 6—2. In the second set Wray battled hard and piled up four straight victories over the younger Parks. Parks took a new lease on life and won six straight gam

The Sooners won four of the five matches played. Only one double was staged, which resulted in a 6—4, 7—5 Sooner victory.

WESTERN M. A. BEATS M'KENDREE TEAM, 61-0

Western Military Academy's football eleven swamped the McKendree College team at Alton yesterday afternoon, scoring a 6 to 0 victory. The Cadets scored 21 points in the first quarter, 13 in the second, 14 in the third and 13 in the final period. The Western line opened wide gaps in the McKendree defense. Lane at center, Sommer at quarterback, Gregory at full and Fite at end, starred for Western. The Cadets will play Soldan at St. Louis next Saturday.

More Than 3,000,000 Persons Saw Football Contests Yesterday

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.

WITH Harvard playing Princeton, the other big Eastern teams in action and the Western teams struggling for their championships, today may be called the beginning of football's world's series.

Approximately more than 3,000,000 persons throughout America were spectators at the contests. More than 100,000 witnessed the games in the New York district. At Cambridge 44,000 saw Harvard and Princeton battle to a 14-14 tie.

The Yale bowl held 20,000 watching the Bulldog beat Brown, 14-10. At the Polo Grounds 30,000 saw Dartmouth whip Cornell, 14-3. Columbia was beaten by Swarthmore before 10,000 at South Field to the tune of 21-7. More than 3000 saw Union defeat New York University at Ohio Field.

Such attendance figures have never been reached before, and they will be increased in the three more Saturdays of play. Football is on the crest of the wave.

Stallings Quits As Braves' Pilot

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—The resignation of George Stallings as manager of the Boston National League baseball team was announced tonight by Walter E. Hapgood, business manager of the club. Stallings has been with the Braves for eight years. His last five-year contract expired this fall. No reason was assigned for the resignation and no statement was made as to Stallings' future plans. Hapgood said that a new manager probably would be elected inside of a month.

Alabama Defeats Vanderbilt, 14-7

Talty O'Connor, St. Louis Boy, Shines in Triumph Over the Commodores.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 6.—Breaking down every ancient tradition connected with the affair, Alabama gloriously defeated Vanderbilt, 14 to 7, in one of the closest, most gruelling and hardest fought games played in Birmingham in a long time.

It was no case of a stronger machine decisively whipping a weaker opponent. There was no underdog in the game. Even in defeat the Commodores won glory by their uphill fight to a victory which they never attained, missing it only by a few inches.

Stretching over a period of about 17 years the Commodores and the Crimsons have played four previous games, everyone of them resulting in a victory for Vandy.

Talty O'Connor, a St. Louis boy, was one of the brightest stars of the game. His end running and line plunging gained many yards for Alabama, while his kicking was a decisive factor in the defeat of the Commodores. Doc Kuhn made several good gains.

McKinley Holds Yeatman to 7-7 Tie; Central Noses Out Soldan, 7 to 6

North Siders Display Well Balanced Machine and Smash Holes in Crimson Line—Missed Goal Kick Results in West Enders' Third League Defeat.

CENTRAL barely defeated its traditional foe, Soldan, 7 to 6; and McKinley held the powerful Yeatman eleven to a 7 to 7 tie, yesterday afternoon in two of the most thrilling games played at High School Field this year

In the Central-Soldan game, each team scored a touchdown, but Soldan missed the goal kick. The teams appeared about as evenly matched as two teams could be, each playing at times a great offensive game, and both fought hard. Soldan was better on the punts, although Ravenscraft, who did all of the kicking, failed when a kick after touchdown meant the staving off of defeat.

At the opening of the game, Soldan played like demons. The ball was brought on straight football tactics to Central's 10-yard line less than five minutes after the opening whistle. Central held for downs but on the kick, Soldan regained the ball on the 25-yard line. A pass, Hennessey to Schriner, brought the ball to Central's 10-yard line, where Central again held. The kick was a poor one, but Halfback Ware of Soldan touched the ball as it bounded on the 20-yard line, and a Central man fell on it. The ball was carried to Soldan's 35-yard line before the quarter ended.

Trumm's Run Nets Score.

Central acquired new energy in the second period, and Fullback Floun made a beautiful end run to Soldan's 12-yard line. But Ware intercepted a pass after Central had been held for two downs, and ran to his 30-yard line. Left Tackle Ravsenscraft, on a fake kick, made 20 yards, but Central got the ball on downs. Central was held, and Soldan attempted a pass, which Floun intercepted, and ran from midfield to Soldan's 25-yard line. Halfback Trumm made 20 yards around left end, and Floun carried the ball through tackle for the remaining five yards. E. Fisher kicked goal.

Central kicked off in the second half. Soldan could gain nothing through the Central line, and on at attempted kick, a Central man blocked the ball and Grant fell on it on Soldan's 20-yard line. Soldan was again fighting, and Central unavailingly tried line plunges. Soldan kicked on gaining the ball, and Quarterback Fisher ran back the punt 35 yards to Soldan's 15-yard line. Soldan narrowly escaped being again scored on, when Central was penalized for holding. Trumm, indeed, succeeded in racing around left end for what would have been a score, but the referee called him back and gave Central the ball on the 30-yard line. Soldan got the ball on downs and kicked to the 50-yard line. Quarterback Fisher again made a beautiful run on receiving the punt, to the 25-yard line. Central attempted a place kick, but a Soldan man blocked the ball and it bounded to the 55-yard line.

Ravencraft Misses Goal.

At the beginning of the last period, Soldan got the ball in midfield. Waugh got through a hole in the line and ran 30 yards before he was downed. The next three plays gained nothing, and a completed pass, which netted 9 yards, was not sufficient to make first down. Central was kicking as poorly as it did in the first quarter, and Soldan caught the punt on the 20-yard line. But Soldan was again held for downs. Central kicked again, this time, the ball going to the 35-yard line, from where two passes from Schriner to Pfaff netted first down on the 15-yard line. Weil was put on at end, and on his first play, broke through the line, only to fumble.

Central kicked, Soldan getting the ball 40 yards from goal. Waugh, playing at fullback in place of Harlow, made two gains through the line and Weil caught a forward pass from Schriner, making it first down on the 10-yard line. Weil went around right end for a touchdown. There was less than 2 minutes to play and the Soldan stands were wild. Ravencraft, apparently unnerved by the rushing Central team, missed the goal.

It was Soldan's third successive defeat of the year. Yeatman beat Soldan, 9 to 2, and Cleveland won, 14 to 13.

Yeatman, Though Held to a 7--7 Tie, Shows the Better Balanced Eleven

Yeatman was retarded in its race for the championship by McKinley in the 3 p. m. game. McKinley played a wonderful offensive game, but its line held poorly at important moments; whereas Yeatman played a well-balanced game. McKinley's touchdown followed a desperate 35-yard pass from Schaefering to Kinsey, while Yeatman's score resulted from straight football plays that showed superiority.

McKinley started well, and it looked for awhile as though Yeatman would be overwhelmed. Fullback Kinsey, who is undoubtedly one of the fastest backs in prep school football, reeled off a 40-yard run around end, after which Halfback Wood made 25 yards around the other side. Wood then brought the ball on a 10-yard run to Yeatman's 10-yard line, but Yeatman braced and succeeded in holding the South Siders for downs. During the rest of the period neither side gained much and the quarter ended with the ball on Yeatman's 43-yard line.

In the second period, Yeatman lost its initial timidity, and by three successive first downs on runs by Klausner, Hannegan, Nickels and Cox, brought the ball to McKinley's 12-yard line. A penalty set Yeatman back to the 17-yard line, and a place kick was missed. On regaining the ball on the 50-yard line, Cox made 20 yards around left end and threw a pass to Hannegan that put the ball on the 10-yard line. Nickels made five yards, and Hannegan went over for a touchdown, Klausner kicked goal.

Kinsey Showed His Speed.

After Yeatman's kickoff, Kinsey repeated his stunt of the first period and reeled off another 40-yard run around end. The half ended with the ball in McKinley's possession on the Yeatman 15-yard line.

McKinley kicked off and held Yeatman for downs. Tackle Jestes, who was playing by far the best line game for McKinley, blocked Yeatman's kick and fell on the ball on the 10-yard line. Yeatman began fighting and although Kinsey made four yards on the first down, succeeded in holding McKinley with the ball only 6 inches away from the goal line. Yeatman kicked out of danger. Yeatman held for downs and on recovering the ball carried it to McKinley's 15-yard line, where a fumble enabled McKinley to kick to midfield, when the quarter ended.

McKinley got the ball on downs, and attempted a line buck. It did not succeed, so Kinsey played near the right side of the field and Schaefering called for a pass formation. It was a desperate attempt, but Schaefering hurled the ball out to the right and toward the opponent's goal. Kinsey leaped up from a group composed of himself and three Yeatman players and seized the ball. He was thrown on the 20-yard line. Two plays netted 7 yards, and then Schaefering passed to Jestes behind the goal for a touchdown. Schaefering kicked goal.

Although more than half of the period remained, Yeatman was clearly up in the air. Instead of trying straight football, with end runs and line bucks, Quarterback Cox called for a series of nearly hopeless passes, only one of which succeeded, and the game ended without further score.

The defeat will not put Yeatman out of the running, although it is a serious setback, while McKinley saved itself from being put entirely out of the race.

HERMAN IN NEW YORK LOOKING FOR MATCHES

Pete Herman, the bantam champion, has arrived in New York from New Orleans looking for matches. Herman says he has been matched by the International Sporting Club to meet Joe Lynch in a battle for the title. No date has been set for the bout as yet because the International has not decided upon a battle ground. Herman also expects to meet Jimmy Wilde before the I. S. C., provided the little Englishman comes this way again. If Wilde does not return to America Herman declares he will go abroad and meet him in England. Herman broke off one match with Wilde that was scheduled to be held in England.

Jack Lawler to Face Worthy Foe In Eddie Shannon

HAS FOUGHT 237 BOUTS

Brother Displays Newspaper Clippings to Back Up Claims of Prowess.

Lightweight Eddie Shannon, who will box Jack Lawler in the eight-round feature bout of the National Sporting Club's show at the Armory tomorrow night, worked out at the Business Men's Gymnasium all last week, and demonstrated how he has piled up the list of victories with which he is credited in a ton of newspaper clippings which his brother and manager, Al Shannon, brought to town.

Shannon is credited in these press reports with having won and successfully defended the lightweight championship of the New England States and of the Pacific Coast. Starting in San Francisco, his home, Eddie has boxed all over the United States, wherever glove contests are permitted. He has met all the top-notchers with the exception of Jackson, Tendler and the Mitchells, and Eddie's manager asserts that he has been on the trail of those leading lightweights for more than a year.

St. Louis fans can best judge Shannon's prowess by his showings against Harvey Thorpe, the rugged Kansas City miller; Charlie White of Chicago, Benny Leonard, champion, and Eddie Fitzsimmons, one of the recent sensations in Eastern glove circles.

Clippings from reliable dailies show Shannon was credited with a draw against White in December, 1919. The New York World, commenting on Shannon's fight with Leonard, says Eddie, who took the fight at the last minute as a substitute, gave the champion the surprise of his life in the early rounds, landing left and right to the head with regularity before Leonard knew the fight had started. Leonard got to Shannon in the sixth and his brother threw in the sponge. Manager Al Shannon said Eddie had suffered two fractured ribs in a workout before the Leonard fight and had to maintain a low guard to keep Leonard away from the injured sector. He showed clippings to verify his statements.

Clippings also were produced telling how Shannon held Thorpe to a draw decision, with several papers giving Shannon an edge over his rugged opponent, who had a weight advantage of nearly 10 pounds. In commenting on Shannon's bout with Charlie White, several writers said Shannon showed a better left than White, always touted as having about as good a southpaw as there is in the ring.

Changed Style Against Fitz.

Shannon is 23 years old and has fought 237 bouts, according to his manager, and has lost only six. A goodly number of his victories, by the same authority, have been via the knockout route. While he has been fighting the lightweights and heavy lightweights, he is normally below the recognized limit of the division, scaling around 131 pounds.

Jack Lawler, who will oppose Shannon, also prepared for the bout at Cook's gymnasium.

Matchmaker Roger Cornell announced the other bouts on the program as follows: Tom Cory vs. Eddie Taylor, both of St. Louis, 145 pounds; Johnny Thompson, Houston, vs. Johnny Lucas, St. Louis, 130 pounds; George Butch, St. Louis, vs. Mickey Laughlin, Columbus, O., and Jack Callahan vs. Tony Stallhaus, both of St. Louis. The bouts, with exception of the eight-round main event, will be four-round affairs.

"Carpentier a Wonder, but No Match for Dempsey"--Edgren

Boxing Critic Asserts Frenchman Is All He Was Said to Be in Skill, Hitting Power and Splendid Self-Confidence—Analyzes Levinsky Bout.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1920.)

A LOT has been written about Georges Carpentier during the past few weeks. Carpentier has fought in America. And still the American sporting public doesn't know just what to think of the dashing French champion.

I have made a rather close study of Carpentier in and out of the ring and I don't hesitate to say that he is the best fighting man sent from overseas; at least since the time of Charlie Mitchell. He is all he was said to be in skill, hitting power and splendid self-confidence.

Carpentier didn't show his best fighting wares in the Levinsky affair for several reasons. First, Levinsky was practically a "set-up" for him. In other words, Levinsky was a has-been, who had grown fat, sluggish and unambitious—a burned-out old-timer, who wouldn't have made much of a fight with anyone. He was especially poor against Carpentier because he was certain he was going into the ring for a beating. There was no joy in Levinsky that night. He was leaden-footed. He walked slowly when he took his corner, like a chief mourner at a funeral. He didn't smile, and when the fight began he contented himself with using what skill he had to avoid a knockout. He didn't fight. This put it up to Carpentier to do all the work and there is no harder situation for a fighter to make a showing in.

Just what ability the Frenchman had may be judged by a remark of Dan Morgan, Levinsky's manager, who had been betting that Levinsky would last the 12 rounds. In the second round Morgan turned to Jack Britton, who had also wagered on Levinsky, and said: "Jack, our money's gone."

Showed Amazing Speed.

Carpentier carried the fight to Levinsky, showing speed that at times was amazing, and to be compared to the action of no other heavyweight we ever had except Jack Dempsey. Having to finish a man who wouldn't lead and give a chance for an opening or any counter hitting, Carpentier grew tired in the third round, and for a moment it looked as if he might blow up. But in the fourth he renewed his dashing attack and knocked Levinsky out in a little over a minute, although Levinsky covered like a turtle drawing into its shell.

It may be thought that Carpentier wouldn't last long with a first-class man because he tired in the third round. But there were reasons for that. The public didn't know that Carpentier had a bad cold for four days before the bout. To break the cold he was given a series of hot baths, which reduced his weight. Carpentier's announced ringside weight was 170½ pounds. His real weight was 160½ pounds. I happen to know that he weighed only 170¼ pounds when he began training for the fight.

Carpentier Used His Head.

Besides all this, Carpentier tired in the third round from making a furious attempt to break down Levinsky's guard and put him out. Before Carpentier's mind was a picture of Dempsey knocking Levinsky out in three rounds. He wanted to at least tie that exploit. When he dropped his hands and held his chin out for Levinsky to hit, it wasn't in a spirit of bravado he wanted Levinsky to lead so that there'd be a chance to hit with him, at a chin that wasn't covered by a raised left shoulder and a right glove and forearm. Carpentier's mental process was easily seen. He was in a hurry to win, and he couldn't win quickly from a man who wouldn't take a chance. He left himself open to make Levinsky fight.

In the fourth round Carpentier's fighting brain showed again. He couldn't make Levinsky meet him half way fighting or come out of his stubborn defense. So he changed his plan entirely, rushed Levinsky against the ropes, and crowding him as hard as he could, hit four short blows over the guard. He couldn't reach Levinsky's covered chin, so he hit him a little higher on the head, knocked his head back, got one opening at last and dropped him with a sharp hook on the neck. Levinsky stayed down.

This isn't a story of the fight. All that was printed over a week ago. It's a dissection of Carpentier's fighting style. I'll say that Carpentier uses his brain in a fight, or he is directed by the "master mind" of his manager, Deschamps, whom the English call a hypnotist.

The Toledo Parallel.

As for Carpentier's weakening from his own exertions in the third, it may be remembered that Jack Dempsey weakened in the third at Toledo from the terrific expenditure of energy trying to knock Willard out in the first two rounds. However, Dempsey did a lot more than Carpentier. He knocked down a 245-pound champion seven times in a round. Dempsey told me after that fight that he nearly "shot his bolt" with those knockdowns. Like Carpentier, he rested a little and then finished it.

Many people were disappointed with Carpentier's lack of defense. He boxed "wide open." They said if he boxed that way with Dempsey he'd be knocked out in a few seconds. That's true. But perhaps Carpentier wouldn't be so careless of Dempsey's blows. He was wide open with Levinsky when he found Levinsky wouldn't take a chance by leading blows. He was wide open with Le- fenseless to entice Levinsky into hitting at an easy mark. Carpentier depending on his own greatly superior speed to beat Levinsky to the punch. He couldn't do that with Dempsey.

Dempsey-Carpentier Match.

The trouble with making a Dempsey-Carpentier match lies only in the difference in size between the two men. Dempsey is naturally about 20 pounds heavier when trained down fine. He is much stronger, much sturdier, and with it fully as skillful and fully as fast as the Frenchman. In brain there is little to choose between them. Carpentier thinks like a flash. So does Dempsey. Jack's quick thinking is the most interesting part of his fighting. He wins his battles in a round or two by quick thinking. In fact, he plans his fight so perfectly as it goes along that it looks, afterward, as if he had it all mapped and scheduled from start to knockout. He never makes a false move or wastes a punch. He knocked Fulton out with four blows, two planned and two delivered while Fred was actually falling.

He whipped Willard with the first two blows struck, a terrific right under the heart and a no less terrific left hook on the right cheek bone, meant for the eye tooth, but landed an inch and a half back of it. Willard was helpless after those two blows. The rest of it was merely the formality of knocking him down until he would stay down. Dempsey knocked Carl Morris out at New Orleans with the first blow struck. But in two previous meetings he had learned Carl's slow mental process, and he knew just how to work him into leaving an opening for a one-punch knockout.

If Carpentier was nearly a match for Dempsey in size and strength he might have a good chance to win the championship, pitting his flashing attack against Dempsey's more cautious and deliberate action. But as the men stand today I doubt that the Frenchman would last long in a championship battle with the man who has knocked out his opponents so easily that he no longer has any-one to fight.

Georges Carpentier and His Manager Depart for France

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.

GEORGES CARPENTIER, who yesterday signed a contract to meet Jack Dempsey next spring for the world's heavyweight championship, ended his second stay in America today. Accompanied by his manager, Francois Descampes, he sailed for Havre on the steamer France.

OLYMPIAN SOCCERITES TO OPEN SEASON WITH DOUBLE-HEADER TODAY

The Olympian Soccer League, a Louis, will open its season today at High School Field, Grand and Laclede, with two games. No admission will be charged to the contests, despite the heavy rental price and a bill of close to $700 to equop players of the four teams. The lowest estimate places $16 as the charge to furnish the needfuls for one player.

The games today bring together the Hamilton-Browns and Browns in the first clash and the Hoovers and Vegacos in the second. Connie Reed will referee. The managers are Robinson, Quinn, Norman and Donahue.

A physician will be on hand to take care of any players injured. G. J. Barrett is president of the circuit.

What we are looking for is a maximum wage with a minimum cost of living. Boy, page the millennium!

We take it that when those fishing smacks are ready to weigh anchor they never lack for scales.

Harvard has decided to not enter the Intercollegiate Boxing Association. If there is any fighting to be done she can do it on the gridiron.

The gridiron boxing rules call for clean breaks. Not to mention sprains, bruises and abrasions.

Rollie Zeider wants to be an umpire in the Pacific Coast League. We're for him. There's nothing crooked about Rollie but his legs.

Besides, Rollie would be able to scent trouble a mile off and be ready to meet it half way.

It is rumored that Hal Chase, Eddie Cicotte, Buck Weaver, Chick Gandil, "Hap" Felsch, Claude Williams, Joe Jackson, Fred McMullin and "Swede" Risberg will play in the Outlaw League next year.

At that, Herring is only a lightweight, according to the scales.

Millers Oppose Foley's Men in Soccer Feature

If the St. Louis Screw Co. team beats the Scullin eleven and the Innisfails hold the Ben Millers to a tie in the soccer double-header at Cardinal Field this afternoon a three-cornered tie for first place will exist in the St. Louis Soccer League race.

Only two points separate the Scullins, Millers and Screw company, and it is therefore possible for these clubs to be deadlocked by sundown tonight. The Innisfails have been a disappointment to date this season, chiefly because Willie Foley's forwards have been unable to get past the defense of the opposition. In the four games played to date only one goal has been tallied by the Innisfails. It is necessary for Foley to dig up some goal-shooters. He plans to try Snyder, a recruit halfback, in his forward line today.

Much interest is centered in the game between the Scullins and Screw company teams, which will be the second on the program, because of the good showing made by these teams in their respective games last Sunday. Each won by a 2-0 score. The Scullins on form should win this game but McCarthy's youngsters surprised by defeating the Innisfails last Sunday and may uncover another victory today.

The victory of the Scullins over the Ben Millers last Sunday enabled the Steel Workers to assume the leadership. This was welcomed by many soccer fans who had feared that the Millers would make a runaway race for the championship.

The Ben Millers, who meet the Innisfails in the first game at 2:15 o'clock, will line up without "Hap" Marre, the star forward of the club. Marre drew a week's suspension for delaying last Sunday's game after being ordered out of the contest by Referee Paul McSweeney. His absence will handicap the Millers as Marre has been responsible for the three goals tallied by the club to date.

The teams will play 35-minute halves beginning today. Phil Kavanaugh, who will referee the first game, has been instructed to start the first game at 2:15 o'clock whether the players are on the field or not.

Local Baseball Officials to Go To Kansas City

Quinn and Rickey Are Scheduled to Depart Tonight for Minor League Gathering.

Officials of both St. Louis clubs will attend the meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs to be held at Kansas City, starting next Tuesday. Business-Manager Quinn of the Browns and Manager Rickey and Scout Barrett of the Cardinals are scheduled to depart for the Kaw City tomorrow night.

Phil de Catesby Ball, owner of the Browns, will go to Chicago to attend the special meeting of the American League next Monday, while Samuel Breadon, president of the Cardinals, and J. C. Jones, a member of the board of directors, departed last night for the Windy City to attend a special meeting of the National League today. It is expected that all three will attend the minor league gathering, going direct from Chicago.

Manager Rickey of the Cardinals was not in the city yesterday, as since early in the week he has been in the neighborhood of Houston looking over spring training camp sites. This probably means that the club will not return to Brownsville next spring, but go to some other place in Texas. However, he is expected to arrive here some time today.

New Manager Not Named.

Chances are that the new manager of the Browns will not be named at the minor league meeting. Quinn said yesterday that there was no rush in this important detail.

"Before naming the new manager, we will have to study the qualifications of each of the men under consideration and then select the one we think will be able to do the most with our players. Then there is a possibility that a good man will bob up at any time."

John Logan, president of the Mobile club of the Southern League and Cap Neale, business manager of the Louisville team were in the city yesterday, trying to make trades for players with the Browns. They will go to Kansas City.

Both May Make Trades.

Quinn stated that although no trades were on the "irons" at present, it did not mean that the Browns would not do any trading. All the managers will be there and if they have anything that the Browns need and are willing to make a suitable deal then there is a possibility that some new tossers will come to the local A. L. club.

Sportsman Describes Successful Day's Outing in Western Canada Among Extensive Prairies and Marshes.

By Dr. A. A. Alford

(Copyright, 1920.)

THE last touches of summer had faded and calm and many colored autumn was about to reign supreme among the grain fields, and on the marshes of the Canadian West.

It was the time of year when the lure of the wilds calls with outstretched arms to the man that is the lover of dog and gun, to leave his civilized haunts to journey out into the vast uncovered prairie.

In this region our greatest sport is undoubtedly goose shooting. We decided to go. As to our party, it was the same old one of many years, still hung together. Captain in command, Bob as first lieutenant, with Bill and myself as adjutants, made up the party.

We left the old ranch at 4 a. m., as we had a strip of road to head off before the Wawa tribe would leave the lake for breakfast. It was our object to locate the flight in the morning and get in for the fun at the afternoon flight. We soon had two hours of darkness and 30 miles of road unraveled, but still there was road ahead, but 7 o'clock found us in a good position to see what the ideas of the feathery biplanes were that morning.

We would take in the situation while we ate breakfast. Breakfast this time had to take the place of dinner, so accordingly there was an excavation in the grub box when operations on it were concluded. We now felt better toward ourselves, but worse for the geese.

A Regiment Appears.

A regiment came from out the gray horizon—they were miles away and with the glasses it was impossible to tell how their minds were made up. "Believe they are coming our way," said Bob. It was true enough. Miles had passed and they were at last in our field.

It was good to see those great birds coming on after being away from them for two long years. On they came closer and closer until they were yards away. Wings soared, legs outstretched, yes, even now their toenails were in sight. Would the suspense ever be over? Alas! What changes soon take place! What a moment ago was a great battalion of grays moving along in order were now scattered, boring and gyrating off in every direction, after the contents of four double-barrel shotguns had done their work. After excitement, smoke and geese had cleared away, what next? Five lifeless grays, dead in a stubble. "Pretty good for a start," said Cap, and all agreed.

The afternoon sport had begun. Did it feel good? I can vouch for that. We were ready to hit anything with feathers on, after that sort of a start. Bob still stayed at the outlook. In a second orders were "Mark south!" We looked around and there they were coming along nicely. Five big fine fellows, those. "Can we get the flock?" put in Bob. "Be a gentleman," put in Bill, "three will do." The little bunch were flying in a sort of choppy fashion. Those fellows had heard the previous cannonade and you could not blame them for being shaky. They made up their minds, however, not to alight but to fly over the decoys in their pursuit of the previous flock. A splendid shot they offered us, 40 yards up, four guns, eight shots, and a solitary goose kept on going north. "Guess everybody's got his eye today," and it looks so.

Three hundred yards out were a hundred wavies, working up against the decoys. "Those devils won't decoy," put in Bob, but we gave them a chance and in less time than it takes to change your mind they were upon us. A long drawn out undulating flock at our gun ends. When the atmosphere cleared—not much damage done—a single white snowball had faded, that was all.

"Same darn luck," shot off Bob, "Those white janglers skin us every time even when we get them in range."

"I don't see how I missed mine; he was right at the end of my gun; those shells must be bad," put in Cap.

Things slacked. I peered through the stubble which fringed the top of my pit. A pair of white chaps came nosing along, stubble high, right in the direction of our blind. Were they going to decoy? No, no chance, they were out scouting, and our blinds, thanks to luck, happened to be in their invisible course. Bang! Bang! Only two shots from Cap's gun and the living "snowballs" were lifeless among the decoys.

We were through for the day. Gathered up the munitions and with guns, geese, decoys and whatnot packed on our shoulders, we were soon on our way to the auto.

Nine out of two flocks looked good.

BLEWETT HIGH ELEVEN DEFEATS COUNTRY DAY

The Ben Blewett Junior High School eleven defeated the St. Louis Country Day football team, 32 to 0. The Blewett team showed a strong attack, Bauchens, Coffee and Gamm forming a dashing backfield which hit the Country Day line for consistently substantial gains. Gamm led in the scoring with three touchdowns, while Coffee and Bauchens each made one. Gamm and Coffee each kicked a goal after touchdown.

Five Patrol Wagons Called to Rout Fans From Dormitory Roof

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.

FOOTBALL, after a setback, apparently is returning to its own, for about 100,000 persons today saw Western Conference elevens in action in the greatest of collegiate sports.

Chicago set the record for attendance today with a crowd estimated at 32,000, the largest gathering that ever attended a Conference game. Standing room was at a premium. Roofs of flat buildings nearby were crowded to capacity.

At Hitchcock Hall, one of the dormitories at the Chicago University, a crowd estimated at 2500 climbed up the fire escapes to the roof. The Fire Department was summoned to drive them down by turning on a stream of water, but this procedure was deemed dangerous, so five patrol wagons loaded with police were summoned and the crowd finally was driven from the structure after 25 had been taken in custody by the officers.

BOSTON SALTS RECKON AS HOW THE ESPERANTO MIGHT LIKE A REAL RACE

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—Boston fishermen are not inclined to admit that the victory of the Esperanto over the Nova Scotia Schooner, Delawana, established the Glouchester boat as the champion of the North Atlantic fishing fleet and tonight they sent a challenge to the Cape Ann salts to race the Esperanto against the Boston Fisherman Josephine Decosta. The challenge is for one race or for the best two out of three.

After extending congratulations to Capt. Marty Welch, the Boston Committee in its letter of challenge said: "Believing we have here in Boston a much faster boat, we hereby challenge the Esperanto to a race or races, at once, with the schooner Josephine Decosta, over a course and conditions to be arranged, the winner to hold the international sailing championship among the fishing fleets of the American Continent."

Fred Chetwynd, captain of the schooner, said his boat came in 12 hours ahead of the Esperanto in beating back from the banks laden with fish a few years ago.

NEW MISSOURI THEATER TO OPEN TOMORROW AFTERNOON

A. M. Hyde, Governor-elect, Senator Spencer and Mayor Kiel on Program for Addresses.

The Missouri Theater, Grand and Lucas avenues, erected at a cost said to be $1,250,000, will open at 2 p. m. tomorrow with addresses by Arthur M. Hyde, Governor-elect; Senator Spencer and Mayor Kiel. The opening motion picture attraction will be the Paramount feature, "Behold My Wife," starring Elliott Dexter and Milton Sills.

The building is the second largest motion picture theater in the world and will seat more than 4000 persons. The seats are placed in the parquet and two balconies. In addition there are two rows of box seats in the first balcony.

The interior is finished in marble. Above the lobby is a rotunda, consisting of three lounging rooms. A nursery is also located on the second floor and a matron will be provided to care for children. Sanitary drinking fountains are placed at convenient points.

The screen is so arranged that all seats face it directly, avoiding any side views and the distortion of the picture these create. An orchestra of 40 pieces and a pipe organ will furnish music.

CHIEF OF GARMENT WORKERS, BACK FROM RUSSIAN VISIT, TELLS OF BOLSHEVIK RULE

Benjamin Schlessinger Says Soviet Conditions Are Better Than Is Generally Believed and That Jews Have Absolute Freedom.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Benjamin Schlessinger, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and the first American trades unionist to tour Russia since the Root commission, reviewing conditions in that country, is of the opinion that Bolshevism is the only thing possible in Russia, though it would be impossible in the United States.

He further declares that conditions in Russia are infinitely better than reports of correspondents and relief workers would indicate; that while there is a lack of food, starvation does not prevail, and that the condition of the Jews, while economically bad, is no worse than that of their Gentile neighbors, and is infinitely better than it ever could be under the old regime.

Lithuania, where food is plentiful and cheap, he described as seeming to the Jews there resident as "the promised land." Compared to wages, food is much cheaper in Kovno and the surrounding territory than in New York.

Lenine, he says, is far from being the savage autocrat described by correspondents and indicated in his writings, while Trotzky seems to be the idol of the Moscow masses. Emma Goldman and Berkman, on the other hand, are almost unknown in Russia, so little known that it was with difficulty he learned their whereabouts in the Ukraine.

Schlessinger reached Kovno from Berlin on Sept. 14, and spent five days between that city and Moscow, making brief stops in many places. He left Moscow Oct. 6, reaching Petrograd Oct. 9. On Oct. 14 he left Riga and reached New York Thursday last.

Schlessinger's organization, which has a membership of 160,000, is the largest of the needle trade unions and the most conservative. In order to head off possible reductions in wages through the influx of new workers from Europe it conceived some months ago organizing the immigrants before they left the other side rather than waiting for them to get into the trade before attempting to unionize them. To this end he was sent abroad a year ago and again early in the summer by the executive head of the organization.

At the same time he was instructed to visit Russia and obtain first-hand evidence of conditions there and the workings of the Bolshevik regime.

"There were," he said yesterday, "two reasons for this. One was that the only available information coming out from Russia was through newspaper correspondents. None had come through strictly trades union sources. We thought it would be better if we had some information from one who is a trades unionist and who would measure things with a trades union yardstick.

"I first tried to get to Russia through Esthonia. There I found it harder to get a vise for my passport than for the traditional camel to get through the eye of a traditional needle. Then I gave up the idea of entering that way and left Revel. It is not easy to leave Revel, as many correspondents have found out. The boat for Stockholm leaves but once a week.

"Lithuania is at peace with Russia and the Soviet Ambassador not only vised my passport, but provided me with a courier who spoke English. He also provided me with a private car to Moscow. Private car sounds pleasant, I know, to American ears, but a private car in America is not the same as the one in Russia. These are without lights and there is no buffet. The wise provide themselves with candles and food before leaving Kovno. There is plenty of food in Kovno at reasonable prices. The equivalent of $1—35 roubles—will buy 12 pounds of lamb, six pounds of chicken, 17½ pounds of white bread, seven pounds of lump sugar, three and one-half bushels of potatoes, four pounds of butter or 35 eggs. This food is of the quality, just as good as you can buy in New York. The average minimum wage there is 350 roubles a week.

"In Lithuania, in Kovno, the Jewish people are enjoying complete freedom. In Kovno the street signs are in Hebrew and Russian, and a Jew is a member of the cabinet—M. Soleveitchik. He is the Minister for Jewish Affairs.

Jews Well Satisfied.

"There the Jewish schools are kept up by the government, just as the other schools are, and everywhere the Jew enjoys equal rights. To him it looks like the Promised Land realized at last. In Kovno and in many other places in Lithuania I talked with many Jews. All had praise for the government and the system under which they are living. None had complaints.

"Our car was attached to a train of 72 coaches carrying soldiers of the Red army, and I had a splendid chance to meet them and get acquainted. Make no mistake, they are loyal to the government. They impress one as men lighted up with an idea, men who believe they are fighting for something big, something that will make conditions better for themselves and others.

"In Russia there is a real lack of food, but no starvation. According to press reports thousands are dying in Moscow and Petrograd. This is not so. The system of food distribution is good. Nor is there the disorder in Moscow or Petrograd that has been reported.

"I never saw a cleaner city than Moscow or Petrograd. The streets are being constantly swept. The rule there is that everybody must work. Thousands of persons, women for example, who never before did a day's work in their lives, are now busy cleaning the streets.

"In Moscow, I had a long talk with Lenine. I found a pleasant gentleman with a keen sense of humor, well informed on what is going on outside of Russia as well as in it. This is particularly true of the United States. He gets American papers and he reads them.

"While I was there the war with Poland was on, but he was not worried. 'Poland cannot fight on forever,' he said. 'In the end the Polish people will long for peace.'

"Constructive work is going on. Near Moscow, Lenine has had built an electric plant. I went through it. Lenine told me this was but one of many electrical developments he had in mind. Within 10 years, he said, Russia will be thoroughly electrified. Plans for this work have been made under the direction of an engineer, who, by the way, is not a Bolshevik.

"Lenine seemed amused by American newspaper accounts of conditions in Russia. At first he said he was amazed that a country like the United States would allow such articles to be printed.

"'I no longer resent them,' he said. 'The more they write about Russia the better. It is advertising.

"'If they ignored us, no one would know about us. You would not have come here; Vanderlip would not come here. (He was referring to Washington V. Vanderlip of California, who recently figured in the news as taking part in Russian affairs.) He is a capitalist, but a very matter of fact man, fair and decent. I would rather do busines with the capitalists of America than of any other country.'

Has Letter From Americans.

"Lenine showed me a letter Vanderlip had brought him signed by 13 Los Angeles business men. It was addressed to 'Your Excellency' and signed 'Your Obedient Servants' 'They call me Your Excellency,' Lenine said wtih a smile, 'and they sign themselves "Your obedient servants.' That, of course, does not mean anything. I suppose it is the way business men address letters.'

"I met Vanderlip later. In fact, we occupied the same box at the Moscow Opera House.

"At first glance Moscow looks like Paris or any other city, with beautiful boulevards lined with trees and fine buildings. But there the resemblance ceases. The shops are all closed. There is no private business, though the names of the old firms are still to be seen. Some of the largest buildings have been taken over as food warehouses from which food is distributed. From these centers one cannot get anything unless he has a trade union card.

"There also is careful provision against one getting more than his share. Thus each person is assigned to one station for his supplies. One living in the local Bronx, for example, could not go to Brownsville for more.

"In Moscow, the city of forty times forty churches, religious life is going on as before, but with this difference—the Government no longer supports the churches or the clergy. Their support is left to the congregation. The Jewish temples are likewise open.

"Did you meet Trotzky?"

"Yes, but I did not see very much of him. After seeing and talking to Lenine there was nothing he could tell me. Lenine is chief. I met Trotzky as I met many other Ministers and under-officials—casually, including such men as Tomsky, head of the Russian Trades Union—the Russian Sam Gompers.

"Trotzky seems well loved. While I was there Clara Zitkin, the German Socialist, addressed a meeting in the Moscow Opera House. The place was packed. She talked in German and Trotzky interpreted. When he arose the crowd simply went wild. I have seen many demonstrations for a public speaker in America—Roosevelt in the Bull Moose days, President Wilson at the height of his popularity—but never anything like the greeting given Trotzky that day."

"Did you see Emma Goldman or Berkman?"

Deportees Not Conspicuous.

"No, I did not. I made inquiries and finally was told that they are engaged in sanitary work in the Ukraine. Everyone has to work, you know. The truth is, neither Goldman nor any of the deportees from this country are at all conspicuous in Russia. They are there—that was about all I could learn about them."

"Would you care to live in Russia under Bolshevism?"

"If I did I would not have returned here, for I could have remained in Russia. While Bolshevism may be a splendid thing, perhaps the only thing for Russia after six years of war, it would not do here. Had I lived in Russia, I would have been a Bolshevist and would have fought in the Red army. Here it is impossible. If changes are to be made here, they will come as Socialists and trades unionists hope to bring them about."

OBSERVATION PATIENTS NOW SEPARATED FROM ALCOHOLICS

New Wards in City Hospital Will Provide Room for Inebriates.

The last of the observation patients at the city hospital were removed Friday to the new men's observation ward in Building A, which will be used for observation cases only, from Ward No. 7, where they have been kept with prisoners, alcoholic patients and drug addicts. The situation has caused considerable trouble between the insane and other patients.

The women's observation ward was removed to Building A last Monday from Ward No. 11, which will probably be used for a store room. The men alcoholics will be cared for in Ward No. 7 until the new clinic building under construction is finished. It will have an improved prisoner ward, and will provide room for a new alcoholic ward, if inebriates become too numerous to be cared for in Ward No. 7.

THE ROUGH STUFF by P. G. WODEHOUSE...

"The Rough Stuff"

Is another of the stories in the series of short fiction by the most popular authors of today.

TWO of the short stories are being printed each week in the Post-Dispatch, one starting on Sunday and being continued on Monday and Tuesday. The other starts on Wednesday and is continued through Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The story that will follow "The Rough Stuff" is "The Runt," by John Taintor Foote. It will begin in the Post-Dispatch next Wednesday.

INTO the basking warmth of the day there had crept, with the approach of evening, that heartening crispness which heralds the advent of autumn. Already, in the valley by the ninth tee, some of the trees had begun to try on strange colors, in tentative experiment against the coming of nature's annual fancy dress ball, when the soberest tree casts off its workaday suit of green and plunges into a riot of reds and yellows. On the terrace in front of the clubhouse an occasional withered leaf fluttered down onto the table where the Oldest Member sat, sipping a thoughtful seltzer and lemon and listening with courteous gravity to a young man in a sweater and golf breeches who occupied the neighboring chair.

"She is a dear girl," said the young man, a little moodily, "a dear girl in every respect. But, somehow—I don't know—when I see her playing golf I can't help thinking that woman's place is in the home."

The Oldest Member inclined his frosted head.

"You think," he said, "that lovely woman loses in queenly dignity when she fails to slam the ball squarely on the meat?"

"I don't mind her missing the pill," said the young man. "But I think her attitude toward the game is too light-hearted."

"Perhaps it cloaks a deeper feeling. One of the noblest women I ever knew used to laugh merrily when she foozled a short putt. It was only later, when I learned that in the privacy of her home she would weep bitterly and bite holes in the sofa cushions, that I realized that she did but wear the mask. Continue to encourage your fiancee to play the game, my boy. Much happiness will reward you. I could tell you a story"——

A young woman of singular beauty and rather statuesque appearance came out of the clubhouse carrying a baby swaddled in flannel. As she drew near the table she said to the baby:

"Chicketty wicketty wicketty wipsey pop!"

In other respects her intelligence appeared to be above the ordinary.

"Isn't he a darling!" she said, addressing the Oldest Member.

The sage cast a meditative eye upon the infant. Except to the eye of love, it looked like a skinned poached egg.

"Unquestionably so," he replied.

"Don't you think he looks more like his father every day?"

For a brief instant the Oldest Member seemed to hesitate.

"Assuredly!" he said. "Is your husband out on the links today?"

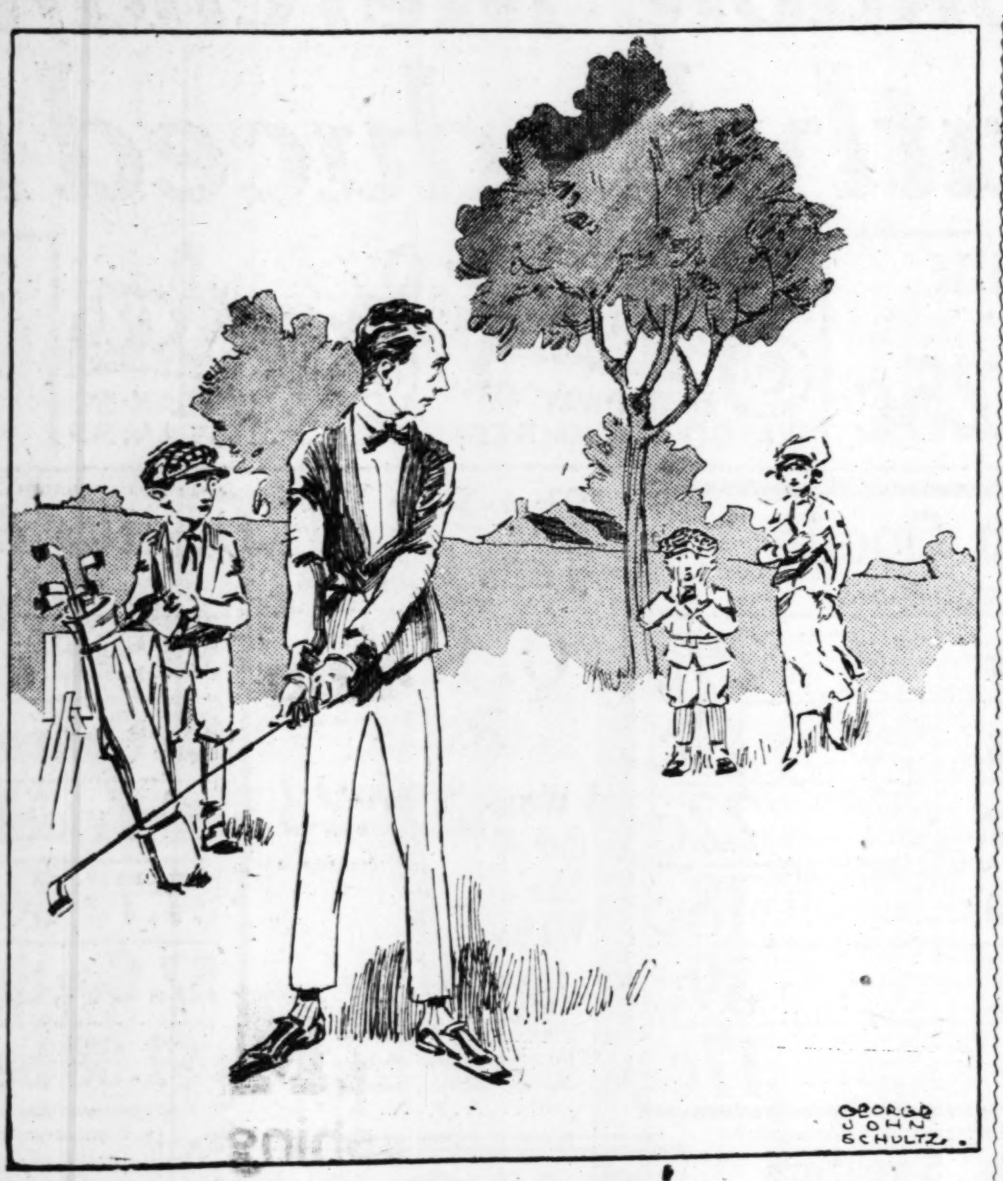
"Your brother is going to England?"

"Yes. Ramsden has such a high opinion of the schools over there. I did say that England was a long way off, and he said yes, that had occurred to him, but that we must make sacrifices for Willie's good. He was very brave and cheerful about it. Well, I mustn't stay. There's quite a nip in the air, and Rammikins will get a nasty cold in his precious little button of a nose if I don't walk him about. Say 'Bye-bye' to the gentlemen, Rammy!"



GEORGE JOHN SCHULTZ.

Ramsden gulped, and then suddenly he saw that the boy was not alone.

The Oldest Member watched her go thoughtfully.

"There is a nip in the air," he said, "and, unlike our late acquaintance in the flannel, I am not in my first youth. Come with me. I want to show you something."

He led the way into the clubhouse, and paused before the wall of the smoking room. This was decorated from top to bottom with bold caricatures of members of the club.

"These," he said, "are the work of a young newspaper artist who belongs here. A clever fellow. He has caught the expressions of these men wonderfully. His only failure, indeed, is that picture of himself." He regarded it with distaste, and a touch of asperity crept into his manner. "I don't know why the committee lets it stay there," he said, irritably. "It isn't a bit like!" He recovered himself. "But all the others are excellent, excellent, though, I believe, many of the subjects are under the erroneous impression that they bear no resemblance to the originals. Here is the picture I wished to show you. That is Ramsden Waters, the husband of the lady who has just left us."

The portrait which he indicated was that of a man in the early 30s. Pale saffron hair surmounted a receding forehead. Pale blue eyes looked out over a mouth which wore a pale, weak smile, from the center of which protruded two teeth of a rabbit-like character.

"Golly! What a map!" exclaimed the young man at his side.

"Precisely!" said the Oldest Member. "You now understand my momentary hesitation in agreeing with Mrs. Waters that the baby was like its father. I was torn by conflicting emotions. On the one hand, politeness demanded that I confirm any statement made by a lady. Common humanity, on the other hand, made it repugnant to me to knock an innocent child. Yes, that is Ramsden Waters. Sit down and take the weight off your feet and I will tell you about him. The story illustrates a favorite theory of mine, that it is an excellent thing that women should be encouraged to take up golf. There are, I admit, certain drawbacks attendant on their presence on the links. I shall not readily forget the occasion on which a low, raking drive of mine at the eleventh struck the ladies' tee box squarely and came back and stunned my caddie, causing me to lose a stroke and distance. Nevertheless, I hold that the advantages outnumber the drawbacks. Golf humanizes women, humbles their haughty natures, tends, in short, to knock out of their systems a certain modicum of that superciliousness, that swank, which makes wooing a tough proposition for the diffident male. You may have found this yourself?"

"Well, as a matter of fact," admitted the young man, "now I come to think of it, I have noticed that Genevieve has shown me a bit more respect since she took up the game. When I drive 230 yards after she has taken six sloshes to cover 50, I sometimes think that a new light comes into her eyes."

"Exactly," said the sage.

"From earliest youth," said the Oldest Member, "Ramsden Waters had always been of a shrinking nature. He seemed permanently scared. Possibly his nurse had frightened him with tales of horror in his babyhood. If so, she must have been the Edgar Allan Poe of her sex, for, by the time he reached man's estate, Ramsden Waters had about as much ferocity and self-assertion as a blanc mange. Even with other men he was noticeably timid, and with women he comported himself in a manner that roused their immediate scorn and antagonism. He was one of those men who fall over their feet and start apologizing for themselves the moment they see a woman. His idea of conversing with a girl was to perspire and tie himself into knots, making the while a strange gurgling sound, like the language of some primitive tribe. If ever a remark of any coherence emerged from his tangled vocal cords it dealt with the weather, and he immediately apologized and qualified it. To such a man women are merciless, and it speedily became an article of faith with the feminine population of this locality that Ramsden Waters was an unfortunate incident and did not belong. Finally, after struggling for a time to keep up a connection in social circles, he gave it up and became a sort of hermit.

"I think that caricature I just showed you weighed rather heavily on the poor fellow. Just as he was nerving himself to make another attempt to enter society, he would catch sight of it and say to himself: 'What hope is there for a man with a face like that?' These caricaturists are too ready to wound people simply in order to raise a laugh. Personally, I am broad-minded enough to smile at that portrait of myself. It has given me great enjoyment, though why the committee permit it to—— But then, of course, it isn't a bit like, whereas that of Ramsden Waters not only gave the man's exact appearance, very little exaggerated, but laid bare his very soul. That portrait is the portrait of a boob, and such Ramsden Waters undeniably was.

"By the end of the first year in the neighborhood, Ramsden, as I say, had become practically a hermit. He lived all by himself in a house near the fifteenth green, seeing nobody, going nowhere. His only solace was golf. His late father had given him an excellent education, and, even as early as his seventeenth year, I believe, he was going around difficult courses at par. Yet even this admirable gift, which might have done him social service, was rendered negligible by the fact that he was too shy and shrinking to play often with other men. As a rule, he confined himself to golfing by himself in the mornings and late evenings, when the links were more or less deserted. Yes, in his twenty-ninth year, Ramsden Waters had sunk to the depth of becoming a secret golfer.

"One lovely morning in summer, a scented morning of green and blue and gold, when the birds sang in the trees and the air had that limpid clearness which makes the first hole look about 10 yards long instead of 345, Ramsden Waters, alone as ever, stood on the first tee, addressing his ball. For a space he waggled masterfully, then, drawing his club back with a crisp swish, brought it down. And, as he did so, a voice behind him cried:

"'Bing!'

"Ramsden's driver wobbled at the last moment. The ball flopped weakly among the trees on the right of the course. Ramsden turned to perceive, standing close beside him, a small, fat boy in a sailor suit. There was a pause.

"'Rotten!' said the boy austerely.

"Ramsden gulped. And then suddenly he saw that the boy was not alone. About a medium approach-putt distance, moving gracefully and languidly towards him, was a girl of such pronounced beauty that Ramsden Waters' heart looped the loop twice in rapid succession. It was the first time that he had seen Eunice Bray, and, like most men who saw her for the first time, he experienced the sensations of one in an express elevator at the tenth floor going down who has left the majority of his internal organs up on the twenty-second. He felt a dazed emptiness. The world swam before his eyes.

"You yourself saw Eunice just now; and, though you are in a sense immune, being engaged to a charming girl of your own, I noticed that you unconsciously braced yourself up and tried to look twice as handsome as nature ever intended you to. You smirked, and, if you had a mustache you would have twiddled it. You can imagine, then, the effect which this vision of loveliness had on lonely, diffident Ramsden Waters. It got right in amongst him.

To Be Continued Tomorrow and Concluded Tuesday.

TRUTH CUTS NEGRO'S SENTENCE ONE YEAR

Judge Faris Had Intended Giving Man Three but Makes It Two When Prisoner Tells of Past.

Judge Faris was in a philosophical mood in the Federal Court yesterday morning, and he moralized at some length upon the rewards of virtue and the tribulations of the wicked, in passing sentence upon two defendants who pleaded guilty.

Leroy Cole, 21 years old, a negro, had pleaded guilty to robbing the postoffice at Orchard Farm, St. Charles County, of $198, and was up for sentence.

"Ever been in trouble before?" asked the Judge.

"Sure has," answered Leroy.

"Where?" pursued the Court.

"Down in Mississippi," replied Leroy. "Got three years down there for breaking into a store."

The Judge turned to the District Attorney. "Did you know this before?" he asked, and the prosecutor said it was news to him. The Judge beamed.

"As proof that I appreciate your truthfulness and honesty in telling me this," said he to Leroy, "I will say that I had intended giving you three years in prison. Instead I shall make it two years. Always tell the truth."

The next prisoner was Robert Booth, 20 years old, charged with transporting a stolen automobile from St. Louis to Vincennes, Ind. The prosecutor had Booth's record. He had been in the reformatory once.

"Let me give you some advice," said the Court. "Crime never pays. Not one man out of five million can make it pay. I advise you, in the time that I will give you for meditation, to map out a straight course for yourself, or you will be spending all your life in penitentiaries." He gave him 18 months.

HEAD OF GELATIN FIRM FINED $350 ON 14 COUNTS

$25 on Each of Food Law Violation Charges Also Assessed Against Company, but Fines Are Stayed.

The W. B. Wood Manufacturing Co. and W. B. Wood, its president, were fined $25 on each of fourteen counts in the United States District Court yesterday for violating the pure food law by shipping adulterated and misbranded gelatin. The fines against the company were stayed, but Wood will have to pay his.

The fines were assessed after Taylor R. Young, attorney for Wood and the company, filed a nolo contendre plea, admitting the adulteration and misbranding, but declaring that it was done by A. T. Lockhead, a stockholder of the company, who was in charge of the mixing room, who wanted to get control of the company through a receivership and adulterated and misbranded the product for that purpose, placing a layer of pure food gelatin at the top and bottom of each barrel and filling in between with technical gelatin, or glue.

Young stated that Lockhead was successful in bringing about a receivership but that in the trial of the case he was forced to sell his stock to Wood, deductions being made for the amount it was estimated that he had injured the firm by the adulteration.

District Attorney Carroll told Judge Faris that Lockhead had said that he adulterated at the instance of Wood. Agents of the Department of Agriculture, who investigated the adulteration, told him that it was done with Wood's knowledge.

Judge Faris said that, as he was in some doubt about the facts, he would make the fine only $25 on each count. The maximum would have been $200 on each count.

TRADE UNION BANK PLANS TO BE DISCUSSED TUESDAY

Suggestion Is for Capitalization of $500,000 in 10,000 Shares.

The plan of local labor leaders to establish a bank in St. Louis, to be conducted on a co-operative plan by trade unionists, was outlined at a meeting of representatives of Central Trades and Labor Union and the Building Trades Council, at a meeting held at the latter organization's hall, 2651 Locust street, Friday evening. No definite action was taken and it was agreed to think further of the project and meet at the same hall, at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, for further discussion of the plan.

It is contemplated that the bank have a capital stock of $500,000, to be divided into 10,000 shares of a par value of $50 a share and disposed of to members of labor unions at $62.50 a share, thus creating a surplus of $125,000. As soon as sufficient stock has been sold, it is proposed to create a trust fund to assist in building workingmen's homes. This will be done by direct financing or through a loan-installment system.

Under the plan, anyone will be permitted to carry accounts in the bank, and after a fixed dividend has been paid to the stockholders and regular interest on savings accounts, the net earnings will be applied to savings and checking accounts.

Two labor bank directors, William McCaleb of Cleveland, O., and Frederick Howe of Washington, D. C., have offered to assist in establishing a bank here.

E. F. OAKLEY JR. MAY SUCCEED TO POST HELD BY SIDENER

Vacancy Expected to Exist Jan. 1, When Sidener Becomes Circuit Attorney.

Ernest F. Oakley, Jr., an assistant in Circuit Attorney McDaniel's office, is considered by Democratic politicians to be in line for the position of Prosecuting Attorney of the Court of Criminal Correction, which is expected to become vacant Jan. 1, when the present Prosecuting Attorney, Howard Sidener, will become Circuit Attorney.

The appointment is expected to be made by Gov. Gardner, who will not go out of office until Jan. 10. If he should leave the matter to the incoming Governor, Arthur M. Hyde, a Republican would get the place. Oakley is a Yale graduate, and is a son-in-law of John P. Leahy, lawyer and a leader in local agitation for Irish independence. His work under McDaniel has been in the criminal division of the Circuit Court, in the Court of Criminal Correction and the Coroner's office.

Parents and Teachers to Meet.

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association of the McKinley High School will be held in room 211 of the McKinley High School building, 3 p. m., Monday. Miss Eva G. Thieson will talk on "Denmark." Parents and others interested in the welfare of the school are invited to attend.

MRS. BRYS HELD ON HOMICIDE FINDING IN KALUCKI CASE

Woman Who Shot Man She Claims Slapped Her Present, but Does Not Testify at Inquest.

DETECTIVE SERGEANT GIVES HIS EVIDENCE

Frank O'Hare Says Dead Man Wore Soiled Gloves That Seemed to Have Marked Prisoner's Face.

Mrs. Valerya Brys, 32 years old, of 1005A Cass avenue, was ordered held, following a Coroner's verdict of homicide yesterday, into the death of Paul S. Kalucki, 1007 Cass avenue, real estate dealer and steamship agent. Mrs. Brys shot Kalucki through the head Friday morning, after he slapped her, following an altercation with his wife about the slamming of a screen door.

Mrs. Brys, wearing strips of court plaster on her lip, cheek and forehead, was present at the inquest, but, on advice of her attorneys, did not testify. Her bond of $5000 was continued.

The court plaster was supposed to cover marks on the woman's face, caused, according to her story to the police, by a slap which she said Kalucki gave her, and which provoked her to shoot him. None of the witnesses at the inquest beheld the alleged blow.

Saw Coal Dust on Face.

Frank O'Hare, a detective sergeant, said that when he saw Kalucki's body, the hands were covered with old white gloves, soiled with coal dust, and that there were black marks on Mrs. Brys' face, as if the gloves had touched it. There were also slight abrasions on her lip, cheek and forehead, he stated, which looked to him like finger prints, as if Kalucki had grasped her.

The Kalucki and Brys families use the same back porch. Mrs. Mary Woytus of 1009 Cass avenue testified that from the porch she heard "rough speaking" between Kalucki and Mrs. Brys, but did not understand what they were saying because she did not know Polish. She peeped out, she said, and saw Kalucki wearing "an angry look," but, on account of an intervening wall, could not see what he was doing with his hands.

Shortly afterwards, the witness related, she heard a shot. She saw Mrs. Brys standing at the top of the porch steps with a revolver in her hand. At the bottom lay Kalucki's body, with the head on the ground and the feet on the third step.

Widow Does Not Testify.

Mrs. Mary Kalucki, the widow, did not testify, but was quoted by O'Hare as saying that her husband did not slap Mrs. Brys, but merely pushed her away. Mrs. Kalucki had told the police that Mrs. Brys suddenly pushed her screen door open, so that it struck Mrs. Kalucki's hand. A quarrel ensued, and Mrs. Kalucki called her husband. He told Mrs. Brys she had no right to fling the door open abruptly and that she must stop annoying his wife.

Kalucki then started downstairs, she asserted, but returned when Mrs. Brys attacked his wife. He pushed Mrs. Brys away and then the Kaluckis started down the steps. Mrs. Brys, according to Mrs. Kalucki, went into her kitchen, emerged with a revolver, cried: "I'll shoot you!" and fired two shots.

Kalucki was 51 years old. Mrs. Brys is divorced. She has two daughters, 8 and 13 years old.

POSTOFFICE ROBBERS GIVEN 30 MONTHS IN PENITENTIARY

Judge Faris, in Sentencing Men, Says Crime Wave Must Be Stopped.

Gerolamo Sala, Guy Prizzia and Mike de Marke were sentenced to two and one-half years in Leavenworth prison in the Federal Court yesterday for robbing the Postoffice branch at 1015 North Seventh street on March 20, of $298.

Judge Faris, in sentencing them, said:

"A wave of crime is sweeping the country which in some manner must be stopped. Many since the war seem determined to live by robbing the other fellow. They no longer want to earn their living by the sweat of their brow, but take from someone else what he has earned by the sweat of his brow."

WASHINGTON U. GETS OLD BOOKS

1000 Volumes Published in Last Three Centuries Donated.

The library of Washington University has received a donation of 1000 volumes of English books published in the three preceding centuries from C. F. Sparks of 4529 Lindell boulevard, who acquired them more than 20 years ago at a sale of the libraries of the Montague and Fontayne families in England. The books will be on the shelves about Nov. 15.

Each of the books contains the bookplate of the family from whose library it came to this country, through a Liverpool bookseller. The latest book was published 1820. They are bound in calf and vellum.

RED CROSS TO HAVE ENROLLMENT CAMPAIGN

1000 Workers Will Use Ground Floor of Kinloch Building as Headquarters.

St. Louis will be enrolled in the American Red Cross for another year during the days of Nov. 17 to Nov. 25, according to official announcement given out yesterday at the office of the St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross in the Equitable Building. Headquarters for conducting the business of this gigantic enrollment have been opened in the war-time Red Cross sewing room on the ground floor of the Kinloch Building, Tenth and Locust streets, and all of the 1000 or more enrollment officers, enlisted for the campaign, will work from that headquarters.

Frank V. Hammar is chairman of the committee in charge of the roll call. Other members of the committee, each of whom has a subcommittee, are Mrs. Benjamin F. Bush and a corps of women in charge of booths in office buildings, hotels, department stores, and the Union Station; Herbert D. Condie, in charge of the roll call of the industries; E. J. Berkley and E. J. Russell, whose committee will call the roll in the business district comprised in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh wards; John Ring Jr., chairman of publicity and advertising; Ward Goodloe, whose committee will direct the roll call in the county, outside of Webster Groves; A. O. Wilson, head of the Speakers Bureau; Miss Lillie Ernst, in charge of public schools; Mrs. J. B. Rule, in charge of supplies; Miss Olivia Brueggeman, whose committee will enroll the foreign-speaking St. Louisans; Mrs. Frank de Garmo, in charge of the women's patriotic organizations; R. C. Kroll, in charge of enrollment of the trades and labor union; William Rolfe, enrollment of municipal employes; Chief Martin O'Brien, head of the police committee; Chief Panzer, enrollment of city firemen, and V. H. Stempf, treasurer of the campaign.

The work of the Red Cross in St. Louis since the war, has demonstrated to the people that the organization is as necessary in peace as in war time, according to those men who have volunteered for service in the roll call this year. Thousands of cases of illness, want, family troubles, rehabilitation of convalescent soldiers, adjustment of compensation, troubles of soldiers and their families, public health services of various kinds, finding jobs for ex-service men, baby welfare work, and similar work, not forgetting the stupendous work of the St. Louis Chapter during both of the influenza epidemics, is evidence, these men and women say, that the Red Cross is a peace-time necessity, and is the reason they have volunteered their help to continue the organization as heretofore.

Annual membership in the Red Cross is $1. The roll call is a nation-wide undertaking, and every city in America will enroll its citizens at the same time that St. Louis is making its roster.

FRANCE TO BURY AN UNKNOWN SOLDIER IN THE PANTHEON

Dignitaries of Republic Will Attend Honors to Body Found at Verdun.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—The body of an unknown French soldier who fell in battle will, on the anniversary of Armistice day, Nov. 11, be escorted from Verdun, the scene of France's most heroic stand, along the whole front of Champagne and the Marne to Paris, where it will be deposited in the Pantheon with all solemnity.

During the last stage of the journey from the Arc de Triomphe to the Pantheon, a distance of more than three miles, the body will be followed by President Millerand, Premier Leygues, all the Ministers and France's three Marshals, Joffre Foch and Petain, all of them on foot.

The body to be thus typically honored will be chosen from nine bodies of unknown French soldiers exhumed from different parts of the battlefront. The coffins containing these bodies will be taken to Verdun where a detachment of soldiers who fought in the war will be drawn up.

One soldier will designate the body he wishes to be taken to the Pantheon. It will then be placed in an automobile and taken over the battlefront to the Bois de Boulogne where the funeral cortege will be formed. It will contain two chariots, one containing the remains of the unknown soldier, the other bearing the heart of Gambetta.

The chariots will be preceded by delegations of veterans, by wounded soldiers and by the flags of 400 French regiments. They will be followed by the President of the republic, the Ministers, the Marshals and a guard of honor escorting flags of the regiments which were surrendered during the war of 1872.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the bladder is irritable; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, thus ending kidney and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

SALE OF CHRISTMAS SEALS OPENS DEC. 1

Special Programs Arranged for Health Week to Aid Fight on Tuberculosis.

Missouri is steadily reducing its death rate from tuberculosis, according to figures made public yesterday by Dr. W. McN. Miller, executive secretary of the Missouri Tuberculosis Association. Dr. Miller's report shows there were 3616 deaths from this cause in the State during 1919, as compared with 5113 in 1911.

Not only has there been a marked improvement in the eight years, but each year represented by the activities of the association has been notable for a lower mortality than the year preceding. It is hoped the 1920 total will be 3500 or less.

Dr. Miller attributes the reduction in the death rate to the campaign of education carried on by the association, especially through the schools of the State. This work is carried on throughout the year, being directed from headquarters in the Pontiac Building in St. Louis. Sanitation and hygiene are the cardinal features of this educational campaign.

In order to finance the work which the association is carrying on, largely with volunteer assistance, tuberculosis Christmas seals will be placed on sale this year, as usual, throughout the State. With the proceeds of the sale of these seals the fight against tuberculosis is carried on.

In order to call attention to the sale of the seals, and the object for which it is done, Health Week will be celebrated, December 1-8, during which special programs will be offered in the schools. A playlet "The Imps and the Children," will be given by the children as a feature of these exercises, which have the approval of the school authorities.

Are Your Bifocals Satisfactory?

Defective Glasses Are Dangerous

DR. F. J. GUILBAULT
OPTOMETRIST
and OPTICIAN

There is just one thing more dangerous to defective eyes than neglect, and that is defective glasses.

Many people have had especially unfortunate experience with double vision glasses. This is because bifocals require the utmost measure of skill in their selection and fitting.

Guilbault's bifocals, properly prescribed and carefully fitted, always give satisfaction and are the most comfortable and efficient glasses you can buy.

My sixteen years' successful practice in correcting defective vision through carefully selected lenses, and the endorsement of over 30,000 satisfied clients, is a very good reason why you should give my services a trial. You will not be disappointed.

MISBRANDING OF BAKING POWDER IS HELD ILLEGAL

Court Rules Health Authorities of Arkansas Can Prosecute Royal Baking Powder Co.

Health authorities of Arkansas are permitted to prosecute the Royal Baking Powder Co. for misbranding "Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder," under a decision handed down here yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The misbranding consists, in the view of the health authorities, sustained by the Court, in retaining the general form of the label and the trade name under which the product achieved a reputation with cream of tartar powder as its acid ingredient, although phosphate has been substituted.

When phosphate was substituted the label was changed to the extent of stating that phosphate was used, but the health authorities held that the retention of the general form and "cream" in the trade name was calculated to mislead purchasers. Prosecutions were begun and the company sought an injunction. Failing in the lower court it appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

In the opinion, written by Judge Stone, attention is called to the fact that the company for years advertised cream of tartar as healthful and claimed that other acid ingredients were deleterious. The crucial question, he held, was whether the label was deceptive after the change from cream of tartar to phosphate. He said: "When a certain symbol, name, mark or label has become established in the public mind and confidence as having a certain definite quality, it is obvious that the average buyer relies on it and does not scrutinize the package."

It was not by any particular skill in manufacturing that the product got its reputation, he held, but almost wholly on its acid ingredient. The public bought it for its healthy, efficient tartrate power. If there had never been an old label the new one would have been unobjectionable.

A program of appropriate and special features has been arranged in connection with the circus acts. The management announces that more than 2000 general admission seats are available at both the afternoon and evening performances.

Upwards of 1000 children, students and wards of various St. Louis institutions, saw the circus during the week.

November Meeting of W. C. T. U.

Personal experiences of women in voting the first time will be related. Mrs. W. A. Chivvis will speak on child welfare from the standpoint of a Juvenile Court worker. Mrs. Payne will discuss legislation to be considered at the coming session of the State Legislature, particularly bills relating to women and children. Arrangements will be made for participation in the Armistice day memorial parade and Red Cross membership roll call.

Sufferers From Piles Avoid Danger!

Statistics prove that a large percentage of Deaths are due to Chronic Diseases, especially to some form of Rectal Trouble, as well as to Stomach, Bowel, Liver and Intestinal Disorders. Therefore such conditions are a serious menace to life. It is suicidal to permit their progress of destruction, when relief is so easily obtainable. Do not say again, "Tomorrow," for tomorrow or next week may be too late. Come to me now and take no further chances.

Every week quite a number of people, whose homes are scattered all over the Mississippi Valley, but many, too, from away states, men and women in different stations of life, are made happy by me, by being dismissed. Cured, sent on their way to enter life anew and to participate in the full share of joys and blessings each mortal is entitled to. Without complete health such conditions are impossible. Make no mistake, do not wait until it is too late. This is the best time of the year to take a trip to St. Louis, at the Scott Building any day except Sunday, between 9 and 4 o'clock; come and I will do the rest. You will in the future bless the day you came to me. Again let me assure you that my prompt, faithful and skillful services are at your command.

Severe Case of Bleeding and Protruding Piles Cured Without Knife or Anesthetics.

To Whom it may Concern:-

This is to certify, that during the month of July, 1920, Dr. W. P. Henrich successfully and completely cured me of a very severe case of Blind, Protruding and Bleeding Piles of long standing.

After suffering untold pain and trying most every kind of cure for Piles, I finally took up Dr. Henrich's mild and successful cure and now feel like a new man.

To those who are suffering from this dreadful disease, I most heartily recommend Dr. Henrich's mild and permanent cure, which is indeed without the use of the knife or anesthetics and absolutely painless.

AMENDMENTS NEED CAMPAIGN TO MAKE THEM EFFECTIVE

Road Bonds and Constitution Measures, Apparently Passed, Only Provide Basis for Future Action.

OPINIONS CONFLICT ON THE ROAD LAWS

Differences Have Arisen at Each Session of Legislature—Prohibition Appears to Be Ratified.

With it virtually certain that the $60,000,000 road bond issue amendment and the new Constitution amendment carried in Tuesday's election, the next step for the organization supporting them is the preparation of campaigns to make them effective, neither amendment does more than provide a basis for further action.

The road bond amendment merely authorized the Legislature to vote bonds from time to time for the building of hard-surfaced roads, $60,000,000 being the aggregate of the bonds which the Legislature can vote. The location of the roads and all details of their construction are for the Legislature to decide.

Conflicting interests on road laws have appeared at each session of the Legislature in recent years, and because of these differences of opinion it has been found difficult to draw road bills which meet with general approval. The work cut out for the Federated Roads Council, which had the management of the bond issue campaign, is the preparation of a plan for a comprehensive system of roads, which will meet the approval of the largest number of the members of the Legislature. This necessarily will mean the expenditure of a portion of the money in every county in the State.

Election Planned for August.

The New Constitution Amendment Association soon will begin plans for a special election to be held next August, when there will be submitted to a vote the question: Shall there be held a convention to revise and amend the Constitution? If the proposition carries at the special election, the Governor is required by the amendment which apparently was adopted Tuesday to call an election for the selection of delegates to the convention.

Under the amendment the convention will consist of 34 Republicans, 34 Democrats and 15 delegates at large, chosen without regard to politics. The 34 Republicans and 34 Democrats will be chosen by senatorial districts, one each from each district in the State.

The convention will be in Jefferson City. The constitution it draws, or the amendments, if it should determine to change the present Constitution by amendments instead of drawing an entirely now Constitution, will then be submitted to a vote of the people to determine whether it shall be adopted.

It also seems certain that the prohibition enforcement law, passed by the last Legislature, and submitted to a vote under the referendum, was ratified. This provides a State enforcement law for the national prohibition amendment, but it contains many features not in the Volstead law.

The measure prohibits the manufacture, sale, giving away or transportation of intoxicating liquor, which is defined as any liquor containing more than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol.

Any person who may suffer damage to person or property by an intoxicated person is given the right to recover such damages in money from the person or corporation from whom the liquor was obtained, and the Attorney-General and prosecuting attorneys are authorized to institute suits to have declared a nuisance any building, and the ground it occupies, in which intoxicating liquors are illegally kept for sale.

Right of Search Given.

The right of search and seizure is given the Sheriff of any county upon the filing of an affidavit by the Attorney-General or Prosecuting Attorney, though it is provided this right shall not extend to buildings used solely as private dwellings.

Advertising of intoxicating liquors is prohibited.

A first violation of the law is punishable by a fine of from $100 to $1000, or by imprisonment from 30 days to one year in the county jail. Subsequent violations are punishable by a fine of not less than $300 nor more than $1000, or by imprisonment not less than three months nor more than one year in the county jail.

Returns from the counties on the other amendments submitted at Tuesday's election are not sufficient to show whether they carried or were defeated.

Thyrsus to Present Play.

The initial production by Thyrsus, the dramatic society of Washington University, for the current season will be "The Witching Hour," by Augustus Thomas. It is to be in the auditorium of Mary Institute, the late November date to be arranged. Leading roles are to be taken by Miss Frances Hayes, Thomas Dawson and Richard Drake. Misses Charlotte Coombe, Louise Jamieson and Frances Dakin, Jack Becker, Dudley Thomas, Howard Poole, Emerson Conzelman and Terry Boyd are other members of the cast.

COFFEE AND SPICE CO. FINED FOR MISBRANDING PEPPER

The Hanley & Kinsella Coffee and Spice Co. was fined $25 in the Federal Court yesterday for selling imitation pepper misbranded as H. & K. compound black pepper. John S. Leahy, attorney for the company, said old labels were used by mistake.

Judge Faris asked what the imitation pepper was made of. Leahy said it was pepper, capsicum and cornmeal.

"How much of it is cornmeal?" asked the Judge.

Leahy said the mixture was about 50 per cent pepper.

AUTOPSY SHOWS ALLER DEATH CAUSED BY SELF-POISONING

Body and Brain of Jewelry Salesman Display No Sign of Violence.

A postmortem examination of the body of Henry S. Aller, 44 years old, of Ferguson, a wholesale jeweler, who ended his life Thursday at the American Hotel, which was made following the inquest Friday, disclosed that Aller died from self-administered poison, and that his body and brain were entirely normal, showing no signs of violence having been inflicted.

Testimony of friends of Aller at the inquest indicated that Aller probably had been mentally unbalanced, due to a blow on the head which Aller said had been inflicted by robbers who slugged him and took $3500 worth of jewelry on a road in St. Louis County last Monday night.

Dr. T. L. Carriere, who made the examination, reported no signs of violence to the body or brain.

The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide, and Coroner Vitt ordered the postmortem examination as a precaution.

As told Friday, an investigation of the business affairs of Aller is being made by concerns with which Aller had transactions, it having been disclosed that he was involved in financial difficulties.

HEARING FOR PIERCE IN BANK JUDGMENT

U. S. Court of Appeals Holds His Complaint in $700,000 Case Should Be Reviewed.

H. Clay Pierce, wealthy oil operator, is to have a hearing in the United States District Court as to his allegations that certain counterclaims exist entitling him to an offset against a judgment of $700,000, which was rendered against him in favor of the National Bank of Commerce, and affirmed by the Missouri Supreme Court.

This decision, handed down yesterday in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, is the latest development in litigation which has continued for five years.

The original suit involved 10,000 shares of the capital stock of the Nashville Terminal Co., which the bank claimed as collateral for a loan of $700,000 advanced to the company. Pierce, who had possession of the stock, denied that it had ever been pledged to the bank.

A judgment against Pierce was returned by the St. Louis Circuit Court, and affirmed on appeal to the Missouri Supreme Court. Pierce then sought in the United States District Court an injunction against the execution of the judgment, and entered a complaint that, owing to the existence of counterclaims, the amount of the judgment should be reduced. Judge Faris dismissed both the complaint and the petition for an injunction.

The United States District Court, in today's decision, upholds Judge Faris in dismissing the petition for an injunction, and reverses him in dismissing the complaint. It held that Pierce should be heard, since certain equities alleged by him might entitle him to relief, in the form of a reduction of the total amount of the judgment.

The complaint will now be heard by Judge Faris at a date not yet set.

Why Be Skinny?

It's Easy to Be Plump, Popular and Attractive

It's easy to be plump, popular and attractive instead of being thin, angular and scrawny. Almost invariably the trouble is due to weak nerves and consequent failure to assimilate your food. You may eat heartily, but owing to the lack of nervous energy and impoverished blood you don't get the benefit from the food you eat. All of this can be remedied very quickly by taking with each meal a five-grain tablet of Blood-Iron Phosphate. This quickly strengthens the nervous system, enriches the blood and increases its oxygen-carrying power, and in a remarkably short time the average thin, weak, nervous man or woman begins not only to put on flesh, but also begins to look and feel better. Sleep, appetite, strength and endurance are improved, dull eyes become bright, and, unless afflicted with some organic complaint, there is no reason why, if you take Blood-Iron Phosphate regularly, you should not soon look and feel much better and many years younger. Deposit $1.50 today with Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson, Johnson Bros., or any other druggist for enough Blood-Iron Phosphate for a three weeks' treatment. Use as directed, and if at the end of three weeks you aren't delighted go back and get your money. Your druggist, a man you know, is authorized to give it to you.

POLICEMAN UPHELD IN SHOOTING CASE

A Coroner's verdict of justifiable homicide in the discharge of duty was returned yesterday in the case of Elijah N. Burkett, an ironworker, 48 years old, 7231 Bulwer avenue, who was shot and killed Friday at 2 p. m. by Patrolman Henrich Kelting of the Mounted Police District in the restaurant conducted by his wife, Mrs. Della Burkett, at 7208 North Broadway.

The testimony was that Burkett had been drinking and that he was advancing on the policeman with a knife when shot.

The policeman had arrested Burkett upon his wife's complaint that he was disturbing her peace. Burkett broke free from the policeman, seized a butcher knife and was advancing toward Kelting when the latter fired.

Burkett's funeral will be held from Mrs. Burkett's home. The couple had been recently separated. They have five children, two of whom are married daughters.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS PLANS VICTORY LUNCHEON

Event Will Celebrate Granting of Suffrage and Success in Election of Judges.

The St. Louis League of Women Voters is planning a luncheon one day in Thanksgiving week to celebrate the granting of suffrage to women and the local victory of women to eliminate political influence from the courts. Governor-elect Hyde has promised to be present and speak, provided the date, which has not been set, does not conflict with any previous appointment.

The project will be laid before the Executive Board of the league Tuesday for consideration, and if approved, a date will be set for the luncheon, which will probably be held at Hotel Statler. It has already been indorsed by the Board of Presidents.

The Board of Presidents and the Executive Board will probably set a date for the proposed membership campaign. The league has a registered membership of about 12,000, and it is planned to increase this to 100,000 before Jan. 1. There have been many applicants for membership since the recent successful campaign.

SHARP BREAK IN INDUSTRIALS ON STOCK MARKET

Taken as Indication Wall Street Does Not Look for Speedy Improvement in Fundamental Conditions as Election Result.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"That the markets should have failed to advance either on the expectation or achievement of this week's sweeping Republican victory at the polls has caused little surprise. Few but the most guileless speculators could have expected the presidential election to immediately alter the face of affairs. But, on the other hand, the extreme weakness which many industrial stocks have displayed was hardly foreseen. Even if the election failed to produce an advance, why, it may be asked, should it have been followed by these sharp breaks in the industrials? As a matter of fact, the election probably had little to do with the matter one way or the other, though Nov. 2 may have served as a convenient turning point in a market which was ripe for a change, just as the end of the year, Labor day and similar dates on the calendar sometimes mark the turning over of a page in the market's chronology. The decline in the industrial stocks is itself the best of proof that Wall Street looks for no speedy improvement in fundamental conditions as a result of Mr. Harding's election. Whatever hopes may be entertained of a 'business-like administration at Washington' or a more practical view of our world real relationships, with a new party in control of the Government, the financial community during the past week has had a feeling that the essential questions confronting the markets have remained about as far as ever from permanent settlement. The rapid decline in foreign exchange rates and the renewed weakness in commodities like grain and cotton have served as reminders that one of the most pressing problems of the moment is the relation of our markets to Europe. The difficulties in which many classes of producers and business men find themselves have given emphasis to the talk of a revised tariff, a more liberal policy in regard to bank credits, or a change in the methods of taxation. Measures of this sort may be urged on grounds of immediate need, but the financial community has had an uncomfortable feeling that data on which an intelligent policy can be based are largely lacking; that final solution must depend largely on the course of events abroad; and that whatever may be done now along these lines will hardly cut to the root of the difficulty.

Mixed Situation Found.

"The situation is not put in a much clearer light by the fact that, while the downward adjustment of prices and curtailment of output have proceeded rapidly in many departments of business there have been signs of recovery elsewhere. A review recently published by the Philadelphia Reserve Bank indicated a very striking irregularity in conditions. In retail trade, as a whole, sales were reported to be still ahead of the corresponding totals last year; demand for iron and steel was decreasing, but demand for both anthracite and bituminous coal exceeded supply; building materials were stagnant, but there was a large demand for cement; the cotton and woolen markets were lifeless, but paints were in demand; the shoe and leather markets were 'flat,' but a steady stream of small orders for silks was reported. But prices were firm at the low level.

"Little can be inferred from this as to how far the process of business readjustment must still proceed before a basis of general recovery is established. Moreover, the numerous 'barometers of trade' on which Wall Street used to rely for indications of the future have largely ceased to function. Railway earnings must be judged in the light of the recent large increase in freight and passenger rates, rather than by the physical volume of traffic. Bank clearings are affected by declining prices, so that they bear an uncertain relation to the physical volume of trade. The steel market is obscured by the fact that one-half of the industry, comprised by the 'independent' companies, is reducing its high prices and finding little new business in the process, while the other half, represented by the steel corporation is able to maintain a firm market and may possibly find a fresh influx of orders before the question of prices becomes a practical condition.

Signs of Change.

"It is not easy, therefore, to determine just what signs will make their appearance to indicate that if the commodity markets are not yet ready for a general upward movement in reviving activity, they are at least approaching the end of their decline. An easier position at the banks, with a rise in the Federal Reserve ratio of cash on hand, may be a clue, as indicating that the process of marketing the crops has passed the moment of greatest strain, and that business enterprises which the banks have been compelled to support with liberal loans are once more able to stand on their own feet. After that, there will still remain the question of our export markets and our financial relations with Europe; but these are matters that will come up in the more distant future."

CURB MARKET IS DULL, TRADE PROFESSIONAL

Lower Levels Established in Oil List—Mining Issues Also Off.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The curb market today was heavy and prices were reactionary. There was the usual short session and practically all the business was transacted by the professional element. The traders were against the market and sold rather freely. As there was no important buying in evidence, quotations receded, with some of the Standard Oils being materially lower in the bid and asked prices. Insiders were out of the market and only a few commission houses had orders, generally on the selling side.

Lower levels were established in the oil list, Simms Petroleum on moderate offerings selling down to its previous low record. Guffey-Gillespie, International Petroleum, Elk Basin, Merritt Oil, Producers & Refiners and many others which have been active recently were lower.

General Asphalt started with a decline of more than a point, rallied a fraction on covering of shorts by some of the traders and then reacted again after the covering had become completed. United Retail Candy, Tobacco Products Exports and United States Steamship were heavy, although declines were small.

Business in bonds was less active and price changes were irregular.

Mining shares were lower in sympathy with the trend in other departments.

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—This week's developments have effectually eradicated any remaining notion that there are influences directing the movement of securities except two—the trade reaction and the credit stringency. The presidential election came and went like the great industrial crisis in England a fortnight ago and made no impression one way or the other upon Wall Street happenings. They were things which for a time assumed considerable importance in the minds of many observers, but in the end it has been proved that they did not seriously count. The vital problems calling for solution at the present time are these: First, how much longer has the readjustment or what is commonly known as deflation in business got to run and how far has it been discounted in the tremendous fall in prices during the past 12 months? Second, what are the consequences to be anticipated from the liquidation which has taken place and which still has to occur in commercial lines and when will the fruits of this liquidation commence to be shown in reduction of bank loans, increase in the supply of free capital and lowering of interest rates?

The best judgment in financial circles at the close of the week is that in many directions the worst that may be expected from the deflationary process in industry has already been experienced, but that in other directions price-cutting and consequent reduction of profits has some distance to go. The stock market has endeavored to mirror this judgment in the renewal of the selling movement in a good part of the industrial list while manifesting increasing resistance and even stability in other parts. There has, for example, been strong pressure brought to bear against the steel group because of admission by representative steel men that steel prices, especially those fixed by the so-called independent companies, will have to be revised downward more than they have. Shares of the textile manufacturers have gene lower than ever because of the unpleasant discovery that sharp as was the recent price-cutting, it has not availed to bring in new business. Stocks of companies depending upon the demand from farmers, like the fertilizer and agricultural implement concerns, have been extremely weak for the obvious reason that the break in grain and cotton and other farm products has hit the agricultural communities hard and will undoubtedly react upon their buying power for next season. On the other hand, the fall in copper prices has gone far enough to attract new buying in quantity, both from home and foreign sources, and the copper surplus is being rapidly cut down. Hence the copper stocks are standing up relatively well against the downward tide. The price of raw sugar is so well down toward cost of production that it cannot very well go appreciably lower. This condition is revealed in the action of the sugar shares which no longer show the sensitiveness they did a month or so ago.

The Credit Situation.

Regarding the second leading question which is that of the credit position, it is not surprising that there should have been no decisive improvement during the last three months. Bank loans through this period have remained stationary for the very simple reason that where any slack was released by liquidation in manufacturing industry and in the speculative commodity markets it was promptly taken up by the seasoned demands of the crop movement. That we have gone through three months when ordinarily bank reserves are shrinking as the result of financing the crops with only a trifling impairment of the bank reserve ratio for the country as a whole, is certainly a notable achievement. It demonstrates beyond cavil the advantages of the Federal Reserve System as against the old regime where each section was bidding against the others, seeking only to protect itself. We have escaped another crisis like that of 1907 simply because there has been a central regulating agency with power to force the centers, which were relatively well off, to help out those which were relatively weak.

The renewed decline in foreign exchange has been a feature of the week of considerable interest, but it does not have the practical importance that the downward movement had a year ago. This is for two reasons. First because Europe had remaining securities that it could lay its hands on to sell back to our market, and second, because depreciated exchange rates have not had the result which was so freely predicted in the autumn of 1919, namely, a great slump in our export trade. Theoretically countries whose currency is so far below par as those of Europe should stop buying from creditor nations until the balance of commodity exchanges was equalized. But these theories have just been again rudely upset, as they have been many times before the publication of the September trade figures which showed that Europe bought more from America and sold less than it did in August and that the net excess of our exports over imports so far from diminishing, was on the increase.

The Bond Market.

The bond market was very little affected by the weakness in stocks. Where there is normally a close association between the movement in bonds and that in the corresponding shares as in the railway convertible issues, were somewhat lower as a rule. This was true, for instance, in the Southern Pacific convertible 5s, which broke sharply when Southern Pacific stock was breaking and later rallied with the rally in the latter. On the other hand, the Chesakeape & Ohio convertibles were not influenced by the heaviness in the railway section of the stock market. The 4½s at 76 and the 5s at 88¼ were substantially at the same prices as those at which they left off yesterday. Investment rails scarcely budged at all in face of the heavy selling in the share list. Two typical instances were the Kansas City Southern 5s at 55 and the Rock Island refunding 4s at 68½. Both of these issues have had recently quite a bit of an advance and the prices named represented within a half point of the best that they have reached.

The new Westinghouse 7s rose on the day. At 96 they were within a half point of the highest reached on the day when they were brought out with such astonishing success. Government bonds were quiet and steady with the French 8s at 102 and 101⅞.

WHEAT VALUES REFLECT SLACK FOREIGN DEMAND

Rapid downward swings in the wheat market during the past week accompanied an apparent falling off in European buying.

Bears in the wheat market were persistent sellers regardless of assertions that this country was now on a domestic basis and that holding by farmers was likely to affect values. Lack of any sign of urgent foreign buying in the United States tended to make the bears aggressive, and this was especially the case after sensational breaks had occurred in transatlantic exchange rates. Besides, talk was current that rural offerings had been somewhat enlarged, and notice was taken of the fact that Canadian wheat had been brought here by water. Further depression of wheat values resulted from estimates that production of coarse grain had been 20 per cent larger than last year despite 3-per-cent decrease in the number of animals on farms.

Scantiness of receipts at some primary points largely counterbalanced in the corn and oats trade the reports of a superabundant yield.

Provisions were firmer, assisted by liberal shipments and stronger quotations on hogs.

SPECULATION WILL REMAIN IN CHECK, VIEW IN LONDON

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—There is a belief here that the Republican victory in Tuesday's election is likely to increase American prosperity and the activity of Wall Street. This feeling, however, is tempered by recognition of the fact that the Federal Reserve Board will doubtless continue its policy of firm money rates. Speculation will be restrained, because one cardinal feature of the situation is unaltered, namely, that lending centers like New York and London cannot afford to encourage speculative tendencies in the face of world-wide demands for capital. Senator Harding's personality is comparatively little known here, but it is believed that his election marks the return of America to a robust common sense policy, in which the humanitarianism expressed in Wilson will not be lacking. Business quarters here are not at all perturbed by Harding's reference to our debt to America, because nothing better is desired than a good, sound business arrangement which always in the long run makes for mutual understanding and respect.

The coal strike is nominally settled, but probably only 50 per cent of the miners will return to work immediately. The extremists, however, cannot remain refractory long owing to shortness of funds.

Financial Conference Urged.

The Morning Post is urging that the moment is suitable for a great financial conference of capital and labor to be called by the King. Opinions in the business world as to the advisability of the suggestion are equally divided. But it is generally recognized that the present problems of finance and labor are of supreme importance and that the ultimate financial and economic supremacy will depend largely on which country succeeds first in arriving at a skillful solution of these problems.

The new unemployment act here is exciting grave dissatisfaction as constituting a fresh encouragement to slackers. The election of Banington Smith to directorship in the Bank of England is interesting as affording a fresh indication that that institution is desirous of making its board representatives of international as well as local finance.

Smith has had a wide experience, with many Government appointments, and is an expert on the finance and commerce of the near East and of India. The Express has a highly interesting article by Lord Beaverbrook advocating cheap money. Beaverbrook has considerable influence with the Cabinet.

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The foreign exchange market during the past week was one of a further crumbling away of rates, with quotations on many continental centers yielding to new low records. Italian exchange was steadily pressed on the market. It was believed at times that weakness in sterling and French exchange was due to sales of commodity bills, especially cotton, but inquiry failed to confirm these statements, and it was insisted that the declines were due more to absence of buying than any other factor. It could not be learned that there had been any special offerings of cotton bills, although the statement was made in one quarter that France and England had both been in the market as buyers of cotton. Sterling exchange was at its weakest today, when demand sold down to 3.37, the lowest point touched since last February. French exchange was also heavy. German was also in supply marks yielding today to 1.20. At the end of the week there was pressure against Spanish exchange. In spite of heavy sales of securities furnishing a demand for exchange on Holland at times the rate fell.

Saturday there developed a condition of semi-demoralization. Exchange on nearly all points was pressed on the market, and the leading position was one of offerings without nearby bids. New low records were again made on Italy, Spain, Holland and Switzerland. Sterling continued its downward movement, dropping 7¾ cents. Quotations today:

WHEAT AND CORN LIST AT CHICAGO SHARPLY LOWER

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—All grains were affected today by the statement of Julius Barnes, former Director-General of the United States Grain Corporation before the American Farm Bureau Federation yesterday, wheat suffering its greatest setback. At the finish wheat was down 5¾c to 8¼c with December $1.90 to $1.90¼ and March $1.87 to $1.87¼; corn was off 1¾c to 2½c; oats showed a net loss of ¾c to 1¼c, and provisions ranged 15c to 55c lower.

Sentiment in wheat was extremely bearish, general business and economic conditions throughout the world being the main influence. The statistical position of wheat while undoubtedly strong attracts little attention in view of the fact that Argentine and Australia are now competing with the United States in wheat for the world's market and the foreign demand for domestic wheat has fallen off materially. At the low point today December showed more than 21 cents under the high of Wednesday and the December-March spread narrowed to around 3¼c at one time against 8¼c at the close Wednesday. Country offerings were not large and shipping sales here aggregated 130,000 bushels.

Corn broke sharply under general selling and closed about the inside figures of the day with prices on the deferred deliveries about the lowest on the crop.

Oats followed other grains and declined readily.

Provisions declined on selling by scattered longs on the weakness of grains.

Receipts of cattle were only moderate at the St. Louis market the past week and the first two days of the period registered sharp advances in all departments. During Tuesday's session beef steers and virtually all butcher stock were 25@50c and in many places still higher than the close of the previous week. Reaction occurred Wednesday, however, and market continued downward remaining days this week, ending Friday in a near-demoralized state.

The slump in the trade late in the week more than eliminated all of the initial improvement and market closed lower on practically all grades. Beef steers Friday were from $1@2 under high time Tuesday or right at 25@50c lower than the close the previous week. Butcher stock, including yearlings, cows and heifers, were from 50c@$1 under Tuesday and steady to 25c lower than the close the preceding week. Bulls also closed with all and more of the early advance lost.

A short load of mixed steers and heifers topped all sales for week at $16. Beef steers topped at $15. Friday was the worst day of the week and comparatively few native steers were actually moved that day. Eastern dressed beef markets rallied slightly as temperature dropped, but this factor did not prevent the break in live beef here which was the result of an indifferent demand from killers late in the session.

Receipts of cattle comprised largely fat grass stock or short-fed cattle, therefore supply of stockers and feeders was limited. Country demand was also narrow and light business was transacted. Stockers showed strength early in the week in sympathy with the upturn on killing beef, but finished with all, and in some cases more, of the early advance lost.

Veal calves advanced to a $15.75 top Wednesday and the level was maintained the fore part of Thursday. By Friday the top had dropped down to $14.75 and trade was a good $1 under high time. Southern canner yearlings finished about steady for week.

Hogs React Upward.

Hog prices worked to a sharply higher level the past week, although some of the advance was taken off in the final session. Values after the decline Saturday were still 75 to 85 cents higher than the close of the preceding week, with pigs and rough hogs $1 to $1.25 higher. A greatly improved demand from both shippers and the big packers and a slight cut in receipts were strengthening factors. An unusual feature was that pigs sold in many cases higher than choice good weight hogs, this being due to the urgent demand from East for light cuts. Naturally receipts of lights were stimulated and a large proportion of the run consisted of stock weighing under 150 pounds. The closing top on hogs was $14.65, comparing with a $13.65 top last Saturday. Bulk of the hogs sold during the week within a range of $13.75@14.50. Pigs sold largely from $14@14.50 and roughs from $13@13.25.

Sheep and Lambs Lower.

Market reacted on lambs after striking a 25 to 35 cent higher level the middle part of the current week, and at the close values were 75c to $1 lower on good lambs and 50 cents lower on plain kinds and culls. On high day, which was Wednesday, the top on lambs was $13.60, comparing with a $13.25 top at last week's close. At the close this week best lambs were listed from $12@12.50. Heavier receipts the latter half of the week and lack of support from city butchers were bearish factors. Receipts for the period were 15,550, as against 10,144 the preceding week and 15,029 the corresponding period of last year.

Another Dull Week for Horses.

Trade in horses at St. Louis the past week was again exceedingly light; in fact, selling was at a standstill a larger part of the session. The national election kept many buyers as well as shippers back and dealers had anticipated little activity.

The past is but one of the many dull weeks encountered by horses here recently. Market has been through a period of depression extending back six or eight weeks, during which time demand fell off seriously and values crumbled on all classes of horses. With the market ruling lower each week, commission men discouraged shipment of stock to market.

Encouragement is seen in reports from the South that congestion of supplies has been relieved and the passing of election is also said to have removed a bearish factor from the trade.

Mules Remain Unchanged.

Suply and demand are still restricted in the mule alleys and market continues unchanged. With the passing of national election is it hoped that market will react favorably, though there are no signs at present that would give assurance of any immediate improvement. Consequently commission dealers are not, as a rule, encouraging shipments without first being communicated with.

BEARISH TREND OF COTTON NEWS WEAKENS MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The cotton market showed renewed weakness and a further severe decline today, with January contracts selling off to 18.60c, or 68 points net lower and more than 3½c per pound below the high point reached on the end-October recovery. The general list closed steady at a decline of 35 to 72 points.

The factors chiefly responsible for the continuation of the selling movement were considered practically the same as those mentioned yesterday during the late trading. They included reports of increased spot offerings in the South, more active hedge selling, continued depression in the goods trade, and apprehensions that the weakness of foreign exchange would further curtail demand for export. The sharp break in grain may also have contributed to the weakness, as some of the local cotton traders took it as indicating that holding movements could not be expected to fully sustain prices during the height of a new crop movement, but the feature was the heavy southern selling and reports of an easier spot situation.

The market opened easy at a decline of 20 to 58 points and at the low point showed net losses of 55 to 70 points, with December selling at 19.10c and March 18.48c. Closing prices were within a few points of the lowest, although there was considerable covering or profit taking for over the week-end. Reports from the West indicated that recent colder weather had increased retail trade to some extent and expressed more hopeful views of the business outlook, but sales of print cloths at Fall River for the week showed only a very slight increase, being estimated at 20,000 pieces.

HYDE TO PUT HOST OF DEMOCRATS OUT OF LONG-HELD JOBS

Something Like 2000 Persons on State Payroll Beginning to Wonder What They're Going to Do.

MANY SINECURES FOR THE VICTORS

Some of Incumbents to Profit From Law That Enables Them to Hold on for Another Two Years.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 6.—Something like 2000 State employes, Democrats long in the public service, some of them simply drawing monthly salaries, and some of them actually working, are beginning to wonder what they are going to do when Gov.-elect Hyde and all the other Republican-elect State officials take office early in January.

For the first time in the history of the State there will be a complete housecleaning of State departments and a complete contingent of new employes in the Capitol. There will be but two exceptions, as the offices of Auditor Hackmann and State Superintendent of Schools Baker will change slightly, if at all, they having been in the control of Republicans.

The change will mean that all the sinecures and "soft jobs" will be held for the next four years by Republicans instead of Democrats. A few of the State's employes have been on the State payroll almost without interruption for 35 or 40 years. Many of them have been there for 20 years or more.

A Paradise for Easy-Goers.

It is probable that nowhere is there to be found as easy jobs as those in the Missouri State Capitol, unless it be in the City Hall in St. Louis or the City Hall in Kansas City. From 8:30 or 9 in the morning until 4:30 or 5 in the afternoon, with from one to two hours for lunch, and seldom anything said if the employe is late in the morning or quits early in the afternoon, is the rule about the Capitol. There is, of course, work to be done, but there are plenty to do it, and two or three missing clerks are not noticed.

The State employes are scattered all over the State; in fact, there are more outside of Jefferson City than in the capital. They are invarious State departments in St. Louis and Kansas City, in State institutions, educational, penal and eleemosynary, in many parts of the State. They draw in salaries all the way from $500 to $5000 a year, with a few heads of departments in the capital getting $5500.

Gov.-elect Hyde will have many places to fill, although, with an eye to advantage, the Democratic administration in recent years have changed the law in many instances to provide for terms of office to end in the middle of the Governor's term, instead of at the beginning. This will have the effect of holding several Democratic heads of departments in office two years of Hyde's term. However, at the end it also will have the effect of holding the Republican appointees over two years into the next administration.

In his own office Hyde will have the appointment of a secretary at $2800 a year and two stenographers at $1500 each.

Some of the Big Jobs.

Among the other appointments he will make will be:

A successor to Bank Commissioner Enright, $3500 a year, with 17 employes.

A successor to Speed Mosby, State Beverage Inspector, $3000 a year; 13 employes.

A successor to John A. Lee, State Building and Loan Supervisor, $2400 a year.

A Game and Fish Commissioner to succeed Tim Birmingham, $3000 a year; 19 employes.

A Hotel Inspector to succeed J. H. Dickbrader.

Land Reclamation Commissioner to succeed Doc Brydon, $2500 a year.

Adjutant-General to succeed H. C. Clark, $3500; five employes.

Nine employes of the Mine Inspection Bureau.

Oil Inspector to succeed Omar D. Gray, $3500; 10 employes.

Three members of the Public Service Commission to succeed John Kennish, Noah Simpson and Edward Flad, $5500 each; 39 employes. In this department also is R. Perry Spencer, counsel of the commission, at $4500.

Tax Commissioners to succeed Roy D. Williams, $4000, and W. A. Dallmeyer, $3500; five employes.

Presidents of five normal schools at $5000 each, with many employes.

Two members of the Prison Board to succeed William R. Painter and Henry Andrae; about 300 employes.

Opportunities for Women Are Great in the United States.

There is no country in Europe or in all the world in which women are so respected or where they occupy so prominent a place in the community as right here in our own country.

Where is the old-fashioned man who said, "Woman should attend to her household duties and let politics and business alone"?

I was delighted to see the women last Tuesday at the polls casting their first votes, and to notice the intense interest they are taking in politics.

We have in this establishment young women acting in various capacities; some in the Office, Advertising and Sales departments; others decorating furniture and many in our Upholstered Furniture Factory, sewing, cutting covers and making fancy pillows.

For some kinds of work, where patience and artistic taste and skill are required, women fill such positions much more competently than the average man ever could.

PART THREE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 7, 1920. PAGES 1—16

The Government and Inland Waterways

By FRANK T. HINES

Late Brigadier General, U. S. A., Chief of Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service.

THIS is the first of a series of five articles on the present inland waterway traffic situation, written by Gen. Frank T. Hines, formerly Chief of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service of the War Department, and which will be published in five successive Sundays in the Post-Dispatch.

Gen. Hines recently resigned from the army to become operating vice president of the Baltic Steamship Corporation of America, and to lend his efforts toward the upbuilding of the new American merchant marine. His present position therefore makes his discussion of inland waterway transportation the more valuable, since he has viewed this important problem from both military and commercial angles.

These articles, which will treat in detail the activities of the Federal Government toward the development of the waterway transportation during and following the war, are in no sense waterway propaganda. They contain the constructive thought of an authority on this subject, and as such will be of absorbing interest.

DURING the war the Government built not only the immense fleet of vessels which is now forming the nucleus of the American merchant marine. It also started the construction of a smaller but none the less important war emergency fleet of boats for service on inland waterways.

Had the war continued two or three years, which at one time seemed not at all improbable, we would have witnessed large shipments of supplies moving from inland points all the way to Europe by water, transferring from barges to ocean freighters at deep-sea ports.

The close of the war, however, found the Government project for developing water transportation to such an extent but partially realized. Few of these war emergency boats had been finished by the shipbuilders on Armistice day. In the meantime Government-operated barge services were being maintained with chartered equipment on a number of waterways, carrying slow freight and thereby relieving the railroads for faster movements.

But with the war over, it became necessary to decide what the Government should do with these new boats which were still under construction, what should be done with the barge lines started by Uncle Sam and which, unlike the railroads, had no former owners to take them back.

These problems were the more difficult because of the ambitious program upon which the Government had been obliged to embark in order to provide in the waterways a real ally to the railroads for handling the nation's wartime traffic.

River craft, embodying many new features, had been designed. Terminals for loading and unloading cargo had been laid out. Arrangements had been entered into under which shipments might move part way by rail and part by water on a single bill of lading. The whole undertaking, often referred to as an "experiment," contained interesting possibilities for peace-time as well as for war-time commerce. And it actually was experimental, at least so much so that no organization outside the Government could be expected to take these projecs in such an uncompleted stage and carry them to a point where it could be definitely shown whether they were profitable or not.

Is waterway transportation actually cheaper than rail transportation for moving certain classes of commodities? If so, what are those commodities, and how much cheaper can they be handled over rivers and canals? With cheaper water rates, cannot communities located away from the river bank also share in the benefits of reduced tariffs? These were the questions which the public was asking, and which it was believed the Government's experiment with inland waterways should answer.

RECENT increases in rail freight rates, as well as further increases to be expected soon, make the waterway proposition even more important today than it was two years ago.

Then, too, the waterway is being looked to as more than merely a source of cheaper transportation. It is obvious that by diverting heavy movements of raw materials from congested railroads to the freer water routes, many units of our too limited rolling stock may be made available for other service. Potentially, at least, the waterway offers possibilities for relieving the traffic congestion of every community, whether near rivers or miles inland.

This whole subject is by no means a new one. Possibly no other single proposition of interior development has been so consistently before the public for the last century or more as this matter of waterways. Possibly no other single public question has called forth so much heated discussion, inspired so much propaganda, both pro and con, and been so generally a plaything of politics.

In its final analysis this whole problem, today as well as in the past, resolves itself down to the extent to which domestic transportation by waterway may be utilized more economically than other modes of transport. And this all-important phase of the question is one which in the past, either through ignorance or prejudice, was most often overlooked.

It remained for the late war to sweep away bias, to eliminate extremists on both sides of this discussion and to reduce the whole transportation organization of the country to a sound basis of maximum utility. It was only under such circumstances tha the true value of water-borne transportation with relation to our railway and highway traffic, could be most impartially demonstrated. And an analysis of the experience of that period clearly indicated that there is a very definite role for the waterways to perform in the service of commerce—a humble role, possibly, but certainly an important one.

As to the value of such wartime experience as may have resulted in more definitely establishing the real economics of waterway transportation, it seems apparent that any method which tends to simplify or facilitate the process of transportation as a whole contains much of value for every class of society, particularly at times like the present when existing facilities are sufficient to transport no more than the absolute essentials of commerce. Then, looking into the future, it is equally apparent that as population increases and civilization heightens, a continuation of national prosperity must depend more and more upon the ease with which movements of traffic are effected.

From every angle under which a more intensive utilization of transportation on inland waterways may be considered, the subject seems fraught with importance for both ourselves and our posterity. It may therefore be of some value to review the experience of the Government in the operation of these waterway transportation services both during and following the late war, to attempt to deduce from that experience a policy for the continued and extended use of waterways, and to define the proper relation of the Government to this important question.

Retracing first the earlier attempts of the Federal Government toward waterway development, it may be recalled that prior to the creation of the Council of National Defense, but one comprehensive survey of the possibilities of inland water routes as traffic carriers had been undertaken—that instigated by President Roosevelt in 1910, the "Inland Waterways Commission."

THE investigations of this committee, carried out at the private expense of a splendid group

A Home-Made Gray Hair Remedy

You can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look many years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

THE GOVERNMENT AND INLAND WATERWAYS

BY FRANK T. HINES

of well-informed, public spirited citizens, resulted in the accumulation of a wealth of invaluable data covering the existant status and traffic possibilities of our network of navigable and potential water routes.

The findings of this committee were elaborately submitted to the readers of public documents, in some 800 pages. Like many equally informative and valuable Government publications, however, there is no direct evidence that the report has ever been either extensively read or acted upon.

From 1910 to 1916 but little was done by the Government for the improvement of waterway transportation, aside from the routine river and harbor improvement work of the Corps of Engineers of the Army. In the latter year, with the creation of the Council of National Defense, came the forerunner of the present permanent waterway bureau.

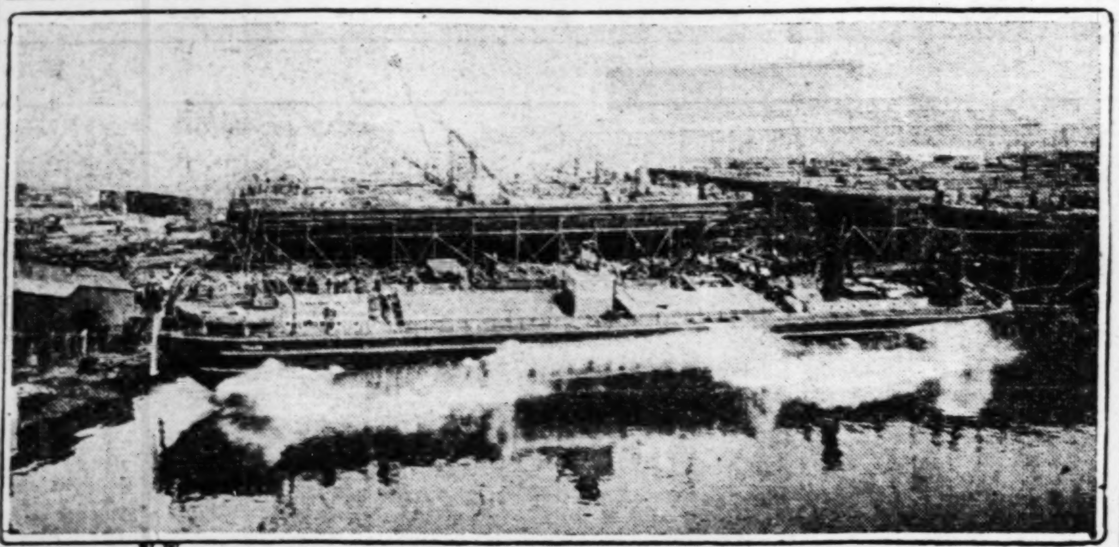
Under the Council of National Defense, which had for one of its objects the more effective co-ordination of domestic transportation agencies, there was established a "Committee on Inland Waterways." This committee consisted of a number of the best qualified students of the subjects whose services were at the time available to the Government. Yet, the functions of the committee being somewhat abstract, if not perfunctory, it is doubtful if the work thus undertaken would have had very concrete results had the war not intervened, demanding as it did a maximum service from every transportation agency.

Under the pressure of wartime conditions of 1917, the Committee on Inland Waterways embarked first upon an aggressive campaign, similar to one being conducted at the same time by the Department of Commerce, having for its object the stimulation of public interest in domestic water transportation. The exact results of this early work of the committee are not today clearly evident. At least it had the effect of impressing the council itself with the necessity for a more general use of interior water routes.

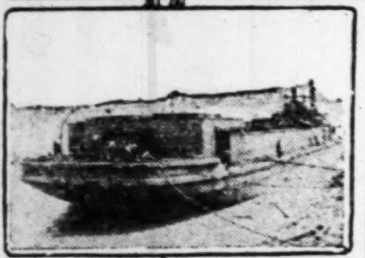
During the summer and fall of 1917 the committee turned its attention to the survey of some of the more important individual waterways, presenting to the Council of National Defense reports which were instrumental in later developing a definite governmental policy toward waterway transportation.

WITH the coming of the Railroad Administration and the actual co-ordination under Government control of all public transportation agencies, the waterway problem was forced still further toward a permanent solution. With the previously active competition between railroads and waterways at least temporarily suspended, there seemed to be presented an unprecedented opportunity for a testing out, on a basis of strict utility, of the relative merits of water-borne transportation.

Barges Built by the Government For Use on Inland Waterways



STEEL SELF-PROPELLED CARGO BARGE FOR USE ON NEW YORK STATE BARGE CANAL



THE "BIRMINGHAM" BUILT IN ST. LOUIS FOR SERVICE ON THE WARRIOR RIVER.

While a superficial examination of by-product of the war, an opportunity was thus presented for the waterways to "come through" and again firmly intrench themselves in the public service, closer investigation soon showed that the proposition was not so simple. The waterway in itself had too long been confused with a waterway transportation system. In the hour of great need the truth was forced home that a navigable channel bears the same relation to a going water traffic organization as a roadbed does to a railroad system. Without floating equipment, terminals, public confidence and similar factors so necessary to an established public carrier, the speedy revival of waterway traffic became a formidable under-

For example, even an energetic application of the resources of the whole Government was unable to create a fleet of power units for service on the New York State Barge Canal until many months after the war emergency had passed, while six towboats for the Lower Mississippi, designed in the summer of 1918, will not be in operation until months after the second anniversary of the armistice.

Notwithstanding the many obstacles which a thorough study of the situation showed to handicap any broad scheme to develop waterway traffic as an emergency ally to the railroads, the immediate need was so great, the utility of the waterways so apparent, that the Railroad Administration had no alternative but to make the best of an admittedly bad situation and to attempt the development of waterway traffic to the greatest practicable extent.

The aid of the Committee on Inland Waterways was accordingly enlisted to this end, and that body shortly transferred practically in toto from the Council of National Defense to a similar but somewhat broadened status under the Railroad Administration.

In passing, it is interesting to note the most logical utilization of the prior activities of another governmental agency toward a similar objective—a co-ordination of effort which is unfortunately so often lacking in departmental undertakings.

Under the Railroad Administration, the work of the Committee on Inland Waterways soon began to produce tangible results. Upon the completion of a thorough survey of the traffic possibilities of the more important traffic routes, the Director-General requested the committee to present a working plan by which the establishment of permanent freight services on the Mississippi and the Warrior rivers and on the New York Barge Canal could be assured, it being realized that these three routes alone could be of material aid in relieving the critical domestic traffic situation.

BY FRANK T. HINES

AN examination of the several phases affecting traffic on these three water routes revealed conditions eloquent of the demise of waterway transportation.

On the Mississippi, that splendid natural outlet of our entire inland empire, upon which millions in Federal appropriations had been expended and which should have been teeming with commerce, scarcely a craft was stirring. More than that, the floating equipment of former days had largely disintegrated, leaving available for immediate operations but a small number of inefficient units, wholly impotent to shoulder a proportionate share of the commodities urgently awaiting movement.

Of the combination of circumstance which had brought about this stultification of Mississippi River traffic, it is needless to here refer in detail. Unfair railroad competition was in part responsible. Lack of public demand and absence of active private initiative were likewise at fault. And, too, the want of a definite governmental policy with regard to the purely traffic phases of the waterway problem contributed a share. These and other factors together wrought a situation which was anything but favorable to the immediate development of a river traffic of material proportions on the Mississippi.

On the Warrior River a modified but similar situation was met. The principal utility of this waterway lies in its situation as an economical outlet for the coal, ore and lumber of Central Alabama. The coal was particularly needed for the fueling of transports and other ships at Mobile and New Orleans harbors. Private waterway operations in this Alabama coal trade had been suspended for some years, owing to unfair railroad competition, as well as to navigational obstacles.

With regard to the New York State Barge Canal, an equally discouraging condition existed, arising, however, out of somewhat different circumstances. Here waterway traffic was in the process of transferrance from the old to a new route; from the Erie Canal to the reconstructed Barge Canal.

The new waterway was the costly solution of the State of New York to the problem presented by the decay of traffic over the old Erie Canal. Unfortunately, however, the new route was still uncompleted at the outset of the war. Boats of a type for most efficient operation upon it had not been begun. There were actually available for immediate operations, some 800 barges of the type in vogue in former days, but that was all. Other factors indispensable for the immediate initiation of commodity movements, particularly eastbound grain, were notably lacking.

(In a succeeding article Gen. Hines will tell of the steps taken by the Government to establish actual waterway services on the Mississippi and Warrior rivers, and on the New York Barge Canal.)

Article 2—Story of the three important waterway services started during the war and still being operated by the Government.

Article 3—Description of the new boats built and building for operation on inland waterways, explaining their unique features, capacities, and when those still undelivered will probably be placed in service.

Article 4—Story of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service, the new Government waterway bureau, what it has done and what it should do toward the national improvement of waterway transportation.

Article 5—The future of inland waterway transportation—a frank discussion by Gen. Hines of what he believes to be the proper role of the waterways in the future, and how it may best be attained.

GERMAN PRESIDENT IGNORED

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—The change which has taken place in the attitude of Germans toward official personages was illustrated the other day at Templehof Field, where the German Emperor formerly twice a year reviewed the troops of the Berlin garrison. President Ebert visited the field a few days ago to watch the filming of a motion picture, but instead of the adulation which used to be accorded to the Emperor, the crowd of 4000 costumed performers failed to recognize the President, jostled him and gave him scant show at the sandwich counter.

The German President wandered about unaccompanied and stood for a while beside the camera man while a scene was photographed. Later he made his way against the edgs of a crowd witnessing a "riot scene." When the crowd was ordered out of camera range, Herr Ebert received no consideration from the jostling spectators. One of the crowd who recognized him called attention to his presence, but few gave him any notice.

MILLERAND WALKS UNATTENDED

PARIS, Nov. 6.—President Millerand has amazed some of the old residents of Paris by appearing on the streets of the city apparently without a guard. Scores of persons recognized the French President when he walked the other day from the Elysee Palace through the Champs Elysees toward the Seine and his progress was marked by a succession of bows. Not a detective was in sight.

This is in sharp contrast to the practice of most former Presidents. Few of them ever have ventured forth alone and in most cases they have been surrounded by a strong guard of detectives or police. M. Millerand's democratic conduct in this respect has caused much comment and increased his popularity.

How to Keep the Face Young and Attractive

The way to ward off old age is not to fear it, not to allow one's self to be oppressed by the dread of advancing years. Use only legitimate preventives and avoid trying experiments with preparations that have not stood the test of time. An entirely safe and very effective way to keep the complexion young-looking and beautiful is to apply ordinary mercolized wax at bedtime, using it like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. This gradually absorbs the withered, faded cuticle, which is replaced by the more youthful, pink-tinted underskin. One ounce of this wax, to be had at any drug store, is enough to completely rejuvenate a worn-out complexion.

Crow's feet and other wrinkles, the first signs of advancing age, may be removed by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. It is used as a face bath.

Fewer Men Teachers in Illinois.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 6.—Under the title, "The Passing of Man Teachers," State Superintendent of Public Instruction Blair has issued a table showing to what extent men have been forced from the teaching profession by the trend of salaries. Back in 1880 men teachers were 39.7 per cent of the total, in 1900 there were still 26.0 per cent of them men, but now the number is reduced lower than one-fourth. Last year only 12.3 per cent of Illinois' teachers were men.

6000 CHILDREN HERE ENTER HEALTH CRUSADE

Hygienic Movement Introduced in Schools to Interest Pupils in Fight on Disease.

Six thousand children in St. Louis County have entered the Modern Health Crusade, the new American game of good health which is sweeping the country and which is making a sturdy next generation of much greater physical fitness than that of the present, in the opinion of experts on health matters in the United States. The movement has been introduced into the schools of the county by the St. Louis County Tuberculosis Committee, an organization composed of the Kirkwood Welfare Association, the Webster Groves chapter of the Red Cross, the St. Louis chapter of the Red Cross, the St. Louis County Welfare Committee and the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis, and this joint committee has placed Mrs. Virginia Harriss in charge of the work throughout the county.

The Board of Education of St. Louis has adopted the movement and is introducing it into the regular work of the schools under the direction of Dr. James Stewart, superintendent of hygiene, and the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis is co-operating with the School Board in promoting an interest in the crusade through its health talks to parent-teachers' and school patrons' organizations. St. Louis is one of the three first-rank American cities to adopt the crusade officially for its schools. The others are Washington, D. C., and Detroit.

Adaptation of Old Idea.

The Modern Health Crusade is an adaptation of the idea of the medieval religious crusades. The dragon "Disease," which stands at the gate of the Castle of Good Health, is the enemy which the young crusaders go out to fight, and their weapons are simple daily acts which by constant repetition become habits that promote good health. Some of these are sitting and standing straight, washing the hands before eating, keeping the fingers, pencils and other implements of school work out of the mouth, taking regular baths, sleeping with the windows open, eating wholesome food and not drinking coffee, drinking plenty of water, brushing the teeth regularly, taking enough exercise, covering the mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing and similar routine acts.

Rewards in the way of degrees of knighthood are given the children after certain periods of perfect performance of the "chores," which stand for the deeds required of the ancient candidates for knighthood. Two weeks' good record brings the rank of page. Five weeks' perfect score gives the degree of esquire, 10 weeks' work entitles the child to the accolade and the rank of knight, and the highest degree attained individually, that of knight-banneret, or knight entitled to carry his own pennant, comes after 15 successive weeks of good health deeds. Each degree has its badge, or insignia, which is bestowed by the teacher in a little ceremony in the presence of the entire school, and these are looked upon by the children as tremendously desirable and the ownership of them sets a child very high up in the opinion of his fellows. One interesting thing about the Crusade, and one which appeals strongly now, is the fact that girls as well as boys may become knights.

Schools to Enter Tournament.

Once a school has attained knighthood for all its crusaders it enters the national tournament for good health and works from that time, on the same general lines as the individuals worked before, for the honor of the school in the great jousts of the United States. The school then becomes a company of knights enlisted under the banner of the double-barred cross, the emblem of health, fighting for the health of their community and their nation.

The Modern Health Crusade was invented by Charles M. DeForest of Washington, D. C., as a result of his efforts to build up his naturally frail little son to sturdy health. Knowing children well he felt that tales of chivalry and games patterned after the stories of the old times which children love to hear told, would accomplish infinitely more than any set of rules he might lay down. The Crusade idea was so fascinating to his own little son that he passed it on to other parents, and then to teachers, and finally to the National Tuberculosis Association to be used in its general nation-wide health education program. Now nearly 5,000,000 American children are Modern Health Crusaders, every one working first to gain his degrees of knighthood, and later, when he has passed the imaginative stage, to promote the health of his community, State and nation.

Plans of the crusade extend considerably further than the two or three years in which the elementary idea appeals to the school boy or girl. The child learns personal and home hygiene in the early stages of the crusade. Later, when he is in high school and college he is a Knight of the Round Table of Health, the highest stage of the movement, and takes up the question of community hygiene, sanitation, compliance with health regulations, moral and social questions and other problems now vexing the minds of public-spirited men and women. The foundation laid by the creation of simple good health habits in childhood will result in later years, it is expected, in an army of sturdy, sane, public-spirited men and women, whose work for general public good will give America better public health than that of any country in the world.

"Only One Easy Way To Remove Superfluous Hairs"

How to "Dissolve Away" Hairs—A Superfluous Hair Remover Without The Trouble and Skin-Spotting. A Method Used by Those Who Know.

By Madame Maree

THERE is now no further excuse or necessity for going about with superfluous hair when there is such an easy, sure and delightful way to remove it. The way to do it is to "dissolve away" the hairs. This is done by moistening the hairs with sulfo solution. This can be obtained at any drug store. In a few moments the hairs are seen to crinkle up and dissolve, so that you can wipe off the hairs completely with a swish of the finger. It leaves the skin absolutely clear and clean, and leaves no spot or redness whatever. Using a face lotion could not be any easier. There is nothing to mix or make ready. It is almost magic in its action. By all means use it.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

AGEING.—You will be able to remove most of your wrinkles if you will faithfully use a cream made by mixing one tablespoonful of glycerine and the contents of a two-ounce package of eptol in a half pint of water. The way it works is this: The pores of the skin are made smaller and the texture of the skin is refined. As the skin becomes more plump, the wrinkles, large and small, promptly vanish. The eptol is to be had from the drug store. This is the new way, and you will save a lot of time and trouble by adopting it from today on.

BACKWARD.—Here is a formula which has the remarkable power of forcing hair to grow, and it is quickly absorbed by the hair roots. Short, thin hair simply means that the roots of the hair are not getting the nourishment which they should have. To a half pint of bay rum and a half pint of water, or if preferred, to a full pint of witch-hazel add the contents of a one-ounce bottle of beta-quinol, which you can obtain from any drug store. Within a short time your hair should stop falling, and you should see a remarkable difference in the length and thickness of your hair.

MISS P. G.—There are fatty scales which form on every scalp, and which can only be removed by dissolving them. If you use a teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of water, as a head-wash, it will remove all these accumulations which retard the growth of the hair. It will also make your hair very silky. There is enough for over a dozen shampoos in a twenty-five cent package of eggol. This will let your hair breathe and help it to grow beautifully.

HOPEFUL.—You surely can get rid of those blackheads in a few moments. Just sprinkle a little neroxin on a wet cloth. Rub the blackheads with this and in a few minutes you will find they have entirely disappeared. Your druggist can supply you with the neroxin. This may sound very remarkable, but it is true.

* * *

MRS. R. G. O'C.—By using a creamy mixture made by mixing one ounce of zintone and two tablespoonfuls of glycerine in a pint of water, you can produce a very remarkable result in the beautifying of the skin. You will notice in a few days that all the muddiness and blemishes will have faded from sight, and leave instead a complexion of surpassing beauty. Any druggist can supply you with the zintone.

* * *

MARGARET.—Yes, "Fresca Beauty Powder" is producing a sensation. It is made exquisitely fine in order to eliminate chalkiness, and you will find it superb. Drug stores now sell it in flesh, white and brunette tints.

Ice Cream for Voters.

NORTHUMBERLAND, Pa., Nov. 6.—It's a far cry from the "Have a drink on the candidate, boys," of before the Volstead act, to "Ladies, the candidate requests you to eat some ice cream." But that is what happened at the first official rally of the Democratic women of the borough here the other day. John V. Lesher of Sunbury, candidate for Congress from the Sixteenth District, addressed the women. After the meeting adjourned they were his guests at a nearby ice cream store.

SAYS GERMAN LABOR WANTS AN OLIGARCHY

Former Counsel of Union Sees Danger of Conditions Making Life Intolerable.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—A Brunswick jurist, Judge Kuleman, who for 10 years was associated with union labor as legal adviser, charges that German labor has been demoralized by post-revolution conditions and that it is now attempting in its "class egoism" to set up an oligarchy under which existence for the non-laboring classes would be intolerable. The description "free workman," he declares, has come to mean a man who has no respect for law or order, but who in fact believes he is a law unto himself, owing allegiance neither to the State nor to his own organization.

Labor leaders particularly are charged by Judge Kuleman, in an article the Jurists' Gazette, with failure to appreciate the value of keeping faith, and the jurist asserts that agreements between capital and labor no longer have any binding influence on labor. He believes "the tendency to make sudden demands which employers appear incapable of granting is deplorable" and reacts to the great detriment of labor.

"As soon as the workman is dissatisfied about anything, he makes the threat of a general strike," the writer continues. "Consideration of the question whether the differences could be arbitrated or whether the employer is to blame is bluntly declined."

He believes the workman has so misused new-found authority and possibilities that on the whole he is worse off than he was before the revolution. He suggests that the situation may eventually develop anarchical conditions under which life would not be tolerable.

HOUSEHOLD WORK CLASS FEATURE OF TRAINING EXHIBIT

AT THE COLISEUM FROM NOV. 15 TO 20

Movies to Show Preventive Measures for Public Health on Program; Opportunities for Shoppers.

Vocational training as taught in the public schools of the city is to be demonstrated at the Women's Exposition, which will be held at the Coliseum Nov. 15 to 20, under the auspices of the Board of Religious Organizations. The Board of Education will have a number of classes of children transferred to the exposition, and there will be sewing, millinery and cooking demonstrations. Commercial art, typewriting and salesmanship classes will be taught, and two novel features will be a class in household work and one in hairdressing.

A public health exhibit, with movies showing preventive measures and baby clinics in operation, will be another educational section, which will be the first one ever held in the United States confined to women's work, recreations and social service activities. The proceeds are to go for welfare work for St. Louis girls and women. More trained workers are to be provided for the city courts, and community center work is to be enlarged in all parts of the city.

V. P. Queen as Heroine.

Tickets for the exposition have been on sale through church women for the past week, and a sale will also open tomorrow at 1111 Olive street. The advance sale price is 25 cents, which will be raised to 35 cents when the show opens. Society movies, with Miss Ada Johnson, the Veiled Prophet Queen, as heroine; an advertising movie, in which young society girls will appear as models for the gowns, hats and furs of St. Louis merchants; concerts by a symphony band, recitals by the Junior Chamber of Commerce Glee Club, Concordia Seminary Singing Society and members of the Morning Choral Club, a big minstrel show and singing barkers are among the free attractions of the exposition, the admission price being the only charge.

The Women's Exposition will present a great opportunity for Christmas shopping, with many shops stocked with novel gifts from all over the world. Moderate prices will be enforced by a "Fair Price Commission" and there are to be no lotteries or games of chance. Lunches and suppers will be served during the week by the board members of the Catherine Springer Home, a branch of the Women's Christian Association, in order to raise money for their hotel for working women.

Tea Garden and Gift Shop.

The Oriental Tea Garden and Gift Shop, under the direction of the Baptist Auxiliary, will be filled with choice Japanese and Chinese silks, embroideries, jewelry and novelties collected by Mrs. F. E. Kauffman on her trip to the Orient last spring. The Visiting Nurse Association, of which Mrs. John A. Haskell is president, will have the candy booth, with pretty girls makinb homemade taffy every day.

A parcel post booth with unique articles will be in charge of the Mission Free School, with Mrs. A. E. Ewing as chairman. The Neighborhood Association, Mrs. Franklin R. Pierce, chairman, will feature homemade garments of all descriptions for children. The Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority, Mrs. C. A. Houts, chairman, will have Indian pottery made by American Indian women. Mrs. Peyton Carr heads a committee in charge of the quilt booth, in which hundreds of quilts will be on sale.

Thousands of glasses of homemade jellies, jams and preserves will be on sale by the Episcopal women, of whom Miss Ada Winston is chairman. "A thousand dolls and a thousand toys" is the sign of the Methodist exhibit, with Mrs. Nelson Cunliff as chairman, and Santa Claus as barker.

"Miladi's Boudoir" will be filled with articles in charge of the Christian unit, Mrs. Frank L. Scott, chairman. The Unitarian unit, Mrs. George R. Dodson, chairman, will sell soft drinks at the California booth. Mrs. J. A. Calfee, chairman for the Southern Methodist unit, will have native delicacies suitable for Thanksgiving and Christmas gifts, butterfly jewelry and mission bells. The Jewish unit, Mrs. Sam Spiegel, chairman, will have drugs and stationery, and the Evangelical Federation, Mrs. Charles Demuth, chairman, will prepare thousands of homemade cakes for sale.

Needlework and Negligee.

An English garden, with pretty Kate Greenway girls and a gift shop, will be the offering of the Presbyterian unit, in charge of Mrs. William A. Stickney, Mrs. E. M. Treat, Mrs. Clay Jordan, Mrs. F. W. Dubrouillet, Mrs. John Shapleigh and Mrs. J. R. Hickman. The Ethical Society, Mrs. Edward Dicke, chairman, will have the Christmas booth, with novelties in the way of stickers, ribbons and cards. The Congregational unit, Mrs. A. A. Tucker, chairman, will celebrate the tercentenary of the Pilgrim Fathers, with young girls as Puritan maidens. Aprons by the thousands and hot waffles and doughnuts made on the spot will fill their booth.

The Baptist unit, Mrs. Al Rubelmann, chairman, has fancy needlework and negligees. The Epworth School for Girls booth will sell lamp shades, luncheon cloths, trimmings for children's clothing, handkerchiefs and towels. Kingdom House, Mrs. Shapleigh Boyd, chairman, will have a country store, filled with everything from matches to baking powder. The Girls' Industrial Home, Mrs. T. P. Conant, chairman, will sell lamp shades and decorative baskets.

Doctors Stand Amazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong—According to Dr. Lewis Guarantee to Strengthen Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances.

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overwork, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent Physician, to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is sold in this city by the leading druggists, including the Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson stores.

Baby Shunned Because of Eczema!

John M. Shenting, 661 Main St., Lancaster, Ohio, writes:

"My baby boy contracted a severe case of Eczema which covered his face and head. Visitors to our home would shun my child because he looked so terrible. I procured a bottle of D. D. D. In an incredibly short time my boy was cured."

Thousands of letters from grateful users of D. D. D. prove its wonderful results in healing torturing skin disease. The very first application allays the itching and burning. ART NOT SPECIFIED IN TREATY GIVEN BY AUSTRIA TO ITALY

Government Refuses to Make Public Secret Agreement Entered Into by Chancellor Renner.

SOME DETAILS ARE LEARNED, HOWEVER

Section of Reparation Commission Inquiring Into Transaction, as It May Affect Country's Assets.

VIENNA, Oct. 18.—The Government has refused to make public the secret agreement by which Dr. Karl Renner, then Chancellor, agreed to give to Italy many valuable works of art, manuscripts and relics not provided for surrender in the treaty of St. Germain, despite demands by art associations and influential persons for that information.

The Associated Press learns from authoritative sources some details of this matter. While guarded admissions of the Government generally are phrased in the future tense as to delivery of these articles, all are understood to be now in Italian possession.

Seizure began when the Italian Armistice Commission, under Gen. Segre, arrived in Vienna in February of last year, the commissioners contending that under the treaty of the War of 1866 those treasures should have been delivered long ago. Among the articles taken by Gen. Segre were the famous tapestries of Montua, title to which the Austrians conceded and assisted in their delivery.

Art Treasures Involved.

Then began the removal from the Hofmuseum and Academy of Fine Arts of pictures which were brought to Vienna in 1815 and 1838. They had been stored in a church in Venice, having been collected from many churches in Venetian territory. It was done by order of Francis I, then Sovereign of Venice, which at that time was a part of the Austrian Empire. The Austrians bring forward a supplementary treaty to that of 1866 regarding these objects, intended to clear title. They render this clause as follows: "Austria will keep (gardera) the pictures exported in 1838, which his majesty, the Emperor some time ago gave to the Academy of Fine Arts in Vienna and to other galleries in the empire."

It is around the ward "gardera" the Italians center their argument for possession, contending it means "take in custody" or "for safekeeping," not possession or gift. The Austrians say they have document in the state archives to show that in return the Emperor gave to Italy art works worth far more than those in controversy, among them being the priceless collections Manfrin and Bossi.

Manuscripts Also Taken.

The Italians also took from the National Library or other places additional treasures, such as autographs, music books and three manuscripts worth several million dollars, one of which, "The Genesis of Vienna," is said to be the most valuable late Roman manuscript in existence.

With all these objects safe in Italy when the Peace Conference began in Paris, the Italians advanced further claims for works of art from Austria, demanding the pick of pictures from the National Gallery in Vienna and virtually all the bronzes and statues made in Italy, or that ever were in Italy. The objects thus covered were estimated to be worth about 4,000,000,000 gold francs.

Special Treaty Obtained.

Their claims were rejected, however, by the conference, and then began the Italian effort to get a special treaty with Austria to obtain their end. The negotiations proceeded until this spring, when Dr. Renner finally signed it during his Italian visit. Under its term Gen. Segre's seizures are legalized and a large number of valuable objects are ceded in addition.

The most important are the Reliquary of Cardinal Bessarione and the Cross of St. Theodore. The first named is a remarkable specimen of the Venetian Gothic goldsmith's art of the fifteenth century, and the other a unique piece of Byzantine goldsmithy. They are said to be beyond price.

The agreement also gives to Italy a quantity of bronzes, historical relics, manuscripts and other objects and bronzes of the Renaissance, including Donatello's "Angel Playing the Tambourine" and two bronzes by Antico. The whole of the famous Duke de Este collection is included.

Concessions by Italy.

In return, Italy renounces her claims to certain objects, among them the coronation garments of the old German Emperors. Finally, Italy promises her help to save the Austrian collections from the claims of other Powers under article 196 of the treaty of St. Germain.

According to report there was a verbal promise by Italy to assist Austria wherever possible in the boundary delimintations in progress and certain other political assurances.

It is understood the Austrian section of the Reparation Commission is inquiring into the transaction, as it may affect the assets of the country to which the treaty of St. Germain gives title.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

BERLIN DEMANDS MONEY'S WORTH IN FUN AT THEATERS

Many Germans Refuse to Pay High Prices to Sit Through Musty, Antiquated Classic Drama.

"THE LAST WALTZ" OF STRAUS, POPULAR

"The Fiddler of Lugane," Most Lavish Production Since the War, Is a Big Hit.

Special Correspondence to the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—Berlin's new theatrical season, now in full swing, discloses the interesting fact that the revolution has at last revolutionized the character of German theater-goers as well as the popular taste for shows. Many Germans now refuse to spend the necessary small fortune for an evening at the theater in order to sit through a musty, antiquated classic drama.

Increasing high cost of living and theater-going have automatically driven them to abandon the typical Teuton notion that the theater is a Kultur center, and educational institution for the paying public. The paying public is beginning to take quite an American notion of the proper function of the stage. Revolutionized Berliners, many of them, now demand entertainment, and not instruction. Moreover, they demand their money's worth in the way of entertainment and when they don't get it a lively theater scandal is sure to result.

Tuneful Operettas Favored.

Berliners still able to pay the price of admission want first, tuneful operettas and its bright musical comedy with a big dash of sentiment. They will also pay to laugh at really funny and highly spiced comedies, and to be agreeably "scandalized" by "sensational" dramas. The highbrow stuff, ancient or modern, is beginning to play to empty orchestra seats and boxes. Shakspeare alone, as produced by Rheinhardt, is able to compete sucessfully for popular favor.

Therefore most Berlin managers have reformed, and are trying to keep out of the bankruptcy courts by catering to the new popular taste for entertainment. Ten musical shows are running in Berlin at present and drawing good houses. More are coming. It isn't too much to say that Berlin "has developed a bug" for operettas and musical comedies.

Ever-Young Stage Idol.

At the Berliner Theater, Oscar Straus' tuneful "The Last Waltz" has passed its 250th performance and is still going strong. It looks good for another 250 performances, especially as Berlin's idolized soubrette Fritzi Massary, has resumed the leading role. Like Lillian Russell, Fritzi looks young. "Dolled out" in decollete and with the secret aids which skilled corsetieres can give to camouflage the figure, Fritzi, you'd swear, was around 20. A transient impressionable young American correspondent fell desperately in love with "the Massary" and wanted to send flowers, with card attached, via the stage door, until I told him that Berlin's operetta idol was well in the fifties.

I got this straight from the "made-to-order corset" specialist who supplies most Berlin stars with slender, sinuous figures. Incidentally, Fritzi Massary, like most leading men and women of the German stage, felt the urge to go to America and acquire in a few months American dollars, which converted into marks, would represent millions. Like all other Teuton thespians who feel this urge to cross the Atlantic, "the Massary" had big ideas about salary and incidental pickings. She demanded of a leading American producer's European representative $600 a night and all expenses for self and maid. No engagement was made on that basis.

Jean Gilbert, still the most popular composer of operettas in these parts, has two successes running in Berlin. His tuneful "First Love's Golden Days," saturated with sentimentality, packs the West End Theafter night after night.

The slender plot concerns a young Prince who falls in love with a rich peasant's beautiful daughter. Father-Prince, discovering the unequal attachment, does his best to break it up. So does the rich peasant-father, who sees no advantage in being linked up with an impoverished princely house. When the old Prince discovers that the potential father-in-law has real money, not merely German paper marks, but gold and silver coin stowed away in socks, and the hard-headed peasant finds that the young Prince has possibilities for becoming a useful citizen, the way is paved for a happy ending.

Despite the fact that Germany is now said to be a republic, the people still like to see the "old order" on the stage. Perhaps, more so now than ever. There isn't a musical show in Berlin which doesn't contain at least a Baron. Most of them have also Counts, Dukes and Princes and correspondingly titled ladies. The public also wants and gets plenty of musical comedy and militarism—lots of gold braid and flossy uniforms in every successful production.

"The Fiddler of Lugane."

Jean Gilbert's other operetta hit is novel in having a plot. It is called "The Fiddler of Lugane" and the nightly box office receipts gladden the heart of the management of the old Wallner Theater in the tough northern slum section of Berlin. It is also the most lavish production seen in Berlin since before the war; and has the further unique distinction of being the first musical show with an all-star cast—six stars of the first magnitude, including two lured away from the Rheinhardt galaxy. Speeded up, and with the German Prince-hero turned into some more palatable kind of a Prince, say a Czar-Russian Prince, or Prince of some mythical principality, "The Fiddler of Lugane" undoubtedly would prove a Broadway success. In fact, the American rights have already been sold.

The inevitable young and handsome reigning Prince (a passionate, talented amateur fiddler) is surprised at the outbreak of the German revolution in the boudoir of a former lady friend—the leading danseuse at the Princely Opera House. The committee of revolutionaries forces him to sign his abdication there, which fact immediately becomes public and disillusions the Prince's newly married multimillionairess wife for whom the Prince had composed a languishing "Valse Promesse." But before a domestic scene can result, the dethroned Prince, not wanting to depend on his wealthy bride, leaves for the refuge of other de-crowned heads—Switzerland. The Prince gets a job as orchestra leader in Lugano's most fashionable hotel. After two years his wife, who still loves him although she doesn't seem to know it, arrives at the same hotel in Lugano. They recognize each other. Unfortunately the wealthy young grass widow whose love is revived by hearing her orchestra leader Prince husband play the "Valse Promesse," discovers that he has just been mixed up in a fresh intrigue with a woman.

Lure of the Mole on the Back.

Revulsion of feeling makes her promise to marry a comic Persian Prince who has followed her all over Europe and who gives his whole harem, right on the stage, to the hotel manager, in order to clear the way for marrying the heroine; with whom he is infatuated because she has a mole on her back, the first woman of the kind whom the Persian Prince has been able to locate; his quest of the beauty-spotted wife being because the old Persian poet Firdusi says, "that makes the most desirable kind of a wife." The last curtain sees the Prince and Princess happily rewedded.

Other musical shows rejoicing Berliners are "The Girl in the Dress Suit," which has passed its 150th performance at the New Central Theater; "The Csikos Baroness," a Hungarian show at the New Operetta House; "The Divorce Journey" at the German Artists Theater; "Frau Baerbel," a sequel to the tremendously popular "Schwarzwaldmadel," running at the Old Central Theater; the "Dutch Wifelein," with the famous soprano Claire Dux (who has "jumped" half a dozen German and American contracts after deserting the forces of Berlin's ex-royal Opera House), in the title role, filling the Metropole Theater; "Love in the Snow," soused in sentimentality, at the Comic Opera; "Stupid Franzel" at the Thalia; "Her Highness the Danseuse" at the Frederic Wilhelm Theater, and "When Love Awakens" at the Nollendorf Place Theater.

'OTELLO' TO BE SUNG BY CREATORE TROUPE

Massenet's "La Navarraise," New Here, Also Promised During Visit to Odeon.

"Otello," Verdi's opera based on Shakspeare's drama, with text by the famous Arrigo Boito, will be sung here, for the first time in many years, at the Odeon on the evening of Dec. 1. With this work, the announcement is, the Creatore Opera Company will begin an engagement of four performances, on the evenings of Dec. 1, 2 and 3, and on the afternoon of Dec. 4.

There is nothing hackneyed about the other works promised by the temperamental impresario and former bandmaster. Rossini's "Barber of Seville" is announced for the second performance, and Verdi's "La Forza del Destino" for the third. At the matinee there will be a double bill. Instead of the everlasting "I Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," Creatore proposes to offer Wolf-Ferrari's "Secret of Suzanne" and Massenet's one-act opera, "La Navarraise," which has never been performed in this city.

Among Creatore's singers are a few who are more or less dimly remembered here. On the list are Henrietta Wakefield, Athens Buckley, Giuseppe Inzerillo, Nino Ruisi, Agnes Robinson, Lina Palmeri, Ruth Miller, Salvatore Sciaretti and Sarame Reynolds.

Toscanini to Be Here Feb. 10.

An eager anticipation is now confirmed in date and place by the announcement that Arturo Toscanini, with the orchestra of the La Scala Opera House at Milan, will give a concert at the Coliseum on the evening of Feb. 10. Toscanini, formerly director at the Metropolitan Opera House, was considered by many the greatest leader of his time, not only in Italian but in Wagnerian opera. With the present tour he fulfills an ambition of long standing to display his mettle to the American public as a symphonic conductor.

Among other announcements of more than usual interest for the season are those of recitals at the Odeon by Fritz Kreisler, Jan. 14; Sergei Rachmaninoff, Jan. 31; Pablo Casals and Harold Bauer, appearing jointly, on Feb. 4, and Amelita Galli-Curci, on March 29. Lucy Gates and Percy Hemus, with the Little Symphony founded by Georges Barrere, are to give "La Serva Padrona," with which Giovanni Pergolesi established opera buffa in 1733, at the Odeon on Feb. 18. The Detroit Symphony Orchestra, led by the distinguished pianist and conductor, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, will give a concert at the Odeon on April 1.

Three Pianists at Once.

Leopold Godowsky, pianistic wizard; Leo Ornstein, distinguished both as pianist and as revolutionary in composition; Alfred Mirovitch, a new and important young pianist just arrived from Russia, and Marguerite Namara, lyric soprano of the Chicago Opera Co., are to give a joint recital Thursday night at the Odeon, in connection with a player-piano demonstration.

Mirovitch, who was highly praised on the occasion of his recent American debut in New York, and who appears here for the first time, is to play an arrangement of a Bach organ concerto, Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" and Chopin's Ballade in G minor. Ornstein's numbers will be his own remarkable "Impressions of Chinatown," Chopin's Nocturne in F sharp, Schumann's "Arabesque" and Liszt's Twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody.

Godowsky will display his uncanny virtuosity in Liszt's dazzling circus piece, the Second Etude de Concert; in his own "Humoresque," from "Miniatures;" and in Chopin's Scherzo in C sharp minor. Miss Namara will supply two vocal groups, including an aria from "Herodiade." This will also be her first appearance in St. Louis.

WEST CAN'T GET TEACHERS

Many Rural Schools Compelled to to Close on That Account.

BILLINGS, Mont., Nov. 6.—Twenty rural schools in the remoter sections of Yellowstone County, with an aggregate enrollment of about 300 pupils, will remain closed indefinitely on account of the lack of teachers, according to a statement made by County Superintendent Frances Miller. This is a forceful illustration of the dearth of teachers in Montana and the Western States, according to school officials.

The small pay allowed teachers in the rural districts and the fact that many of them are taking advanced work in the seats of learning in the cities is given as one reason for the condition. As teachers cannot be found to supply the demands in the rural districts, it is stated that efforts will be made to consolidate certain districts placing a teacher in charge at a salary which will insure securing a competent instructor.

INDIAN KEEPS FORTY-YEAR VIGIL

It Is Ended Only by Death When He Is Burned.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., Nov. 6.—The 40-year vigil of Philip Lefthand, Indian, said to have been aged 138, over the valley where his squaw was killed, ended today with Lefthand lying in a grave in the little cemetery at Weldon, near Bakersfield.

Forty years ago a cloudburst in the Kelso Valley drowned the aged Indian's squaw. Since then he had refused to leave or to accept the hospitality of a county farm or Federal reservation. He lived alone. A few days ago, however, Lefthand's blankets caught fire while he was sleeping. He was fatally burned, dying shortly after.

DR. CANNADAY
Eczema Specialist for 15 Years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now, your very life may be at stake.

'ED WYNN'S CARNIVAL' AT AMERICAN TONIGHT

First Edition of New Revue Series Pronounced a Wynn-some Production.

As a consequence of the late unpleasantness attending the actors' strike, the theatrical producers no longer loved Ed Wynn as they formerly did. So the irrepressible comedian took his pen in hand, wrote a revue of his own, named it after himself, composed most of the music, spread his name all over the program, produced the show himself, and arranged for his own appearance in every one of its 13 scenes.

The result is "Ed Wynn's Carnival," the arrival of which at the American tonight will mark the genial Ed's first appearance here as a producer. The show has previously been seen in New York, Chicago and Kansas City. About the only thing in the revue for which Wynn does not plead guilty is the staging, which was entrusted to Ned Wayburn of "Ziegfeld Follies" fame.

Real Carnival Scene.

The show opens like a real carnival. There are the tents and the side shows and the barker out in front. Then a pretty girl appears and demands her money back. The barker calls the boss and Ed Wynn answers to the impeachment. A series of beautiful stage pictures follows, the titles of some of them being "The Amphitheater," "Japanella," "At the Cottage Gate," "The Lady of the Pyramids"—in which a scantily clad odalisque emerges from the mouth of the Sphinx and dances—"A Colonial Home" and "The Palace of Nowhere."

In the cast announced for the local engagement, only a few of the original principals are present, in addition to Wynn. These are Lillian Fitzgerald, Ted Roberts, Henry Regal, Simeon Moore and the Mekayos Trio, three Japanese children.

"The Bird of Paradise," Richard Walton Tully's indestructible romance of Hawaii, returns to the Shubert-Jefferson tonight for its annual visit. Florence Rockwell, who has played Luana for several years, once more heads the cast. The play is now in its tenth season.

"Aphrodite" Next Sunday Night.

"Aphrodite," the third of the four resplendent spectacle dramas which Morris Gest has given to the American stage—the others being "Chu Chin Chow," "The Wanderer," and "Mecca"—arrives at the Shubert-Jefferson next Sunday night. On the following evening David Warfield will be seen at the American in a revival of "The Return of Peter Grimm." The ensuing attractions at the Twelfth street playhouse will be Florence Moore in "Breakfast in Bed," "Adam and Eva," a comedy, and Barney Bernard in the latest of the Montague Glass plays, "His Honor, Abe Potash." Warfield will be followed at the American by Chauncey Olcott in "Macushla," and on Dec. 5 will arrive "Monsieur Beaucaire," made over into an operetta.

Blossom Seeley, in an act called "Miss Syncopation," leads the bill at the Orpheum this week, with a company including Bennie Fields, Sam Miller and Gene Cass. Albertina Rasch, a dancer of distinction, with her own company, will contribute a number. Toto, the famous clown, is also featured in a bill that includes Lyons and Yosco in a musical skit; Kane and Herman, Guy and Pearl Magley, Nelson and Barry and Bartholdi's birds.

Features announced at other vaudeville houses are: Rialto, Lew Dockstader, in "An Added Starter in the Race for President;" Columbia, Thomas Dempsey, in "Tango Shoes;" Grand, "Once Upon a Time," a farce; Empress, Liletta and the Hawaiian Serenaders; and Loew's Garrick, "The Overseas Revue," with a company of 30. The Gayety promises "The Sporting Widows," and the Standard, "Girls from the Follies."

SHOESTRINGS FOR CRAVATS

Boys in Maryland High School Combating High Cost of Living.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Nov. 6.—Determined to beat down the high cost of neckties, according to several, the students of the Hagerstown Male High School are wearing ordinary shoestrings for neckwear instead of the high priced silk ties.

More than 100 youths, when they appeared in school the other day, had discarded silk ties and wore black, tan and white shoe laces around their necks, tied in four-in-hand and bow styles. Ordinary pins, hundreds of which can be purchased for a few cents, were used instead of scarf pins. A number of the boys are also wearing paper collars that can be bought for a few cents each, turned over when soiled on one side and then thrown away.

For less than 10 cents each boy has fully equipped himself with neckwear.

ELK BREAKS NECK IN FENCE

Iowa Prize Exhibit in a Park Was Becoming Troublesome.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 6.—The large bull elk which was one of the most prized animals at the city zoo in Stone Park came to a sudden and unexpected demise one afternoon when his horns became entangled in the wire fence. In endeavoring to free itself from the fence the elk broke its neck.

Last week the keeper, while feeding the elk, was charged by the big bull and had to climb a tree for safety. The elk pranced about beneath the tree for an hour or more until the shouts of the keeper had attracted another worker at the park. The second worker attracted the bull's attention long enough to allow the tired keeper to escape.

One day a baby elk was born, but enjoyed only a short life, as the bull elk charged on it and killed it. The elk had been in the zoo for several years.

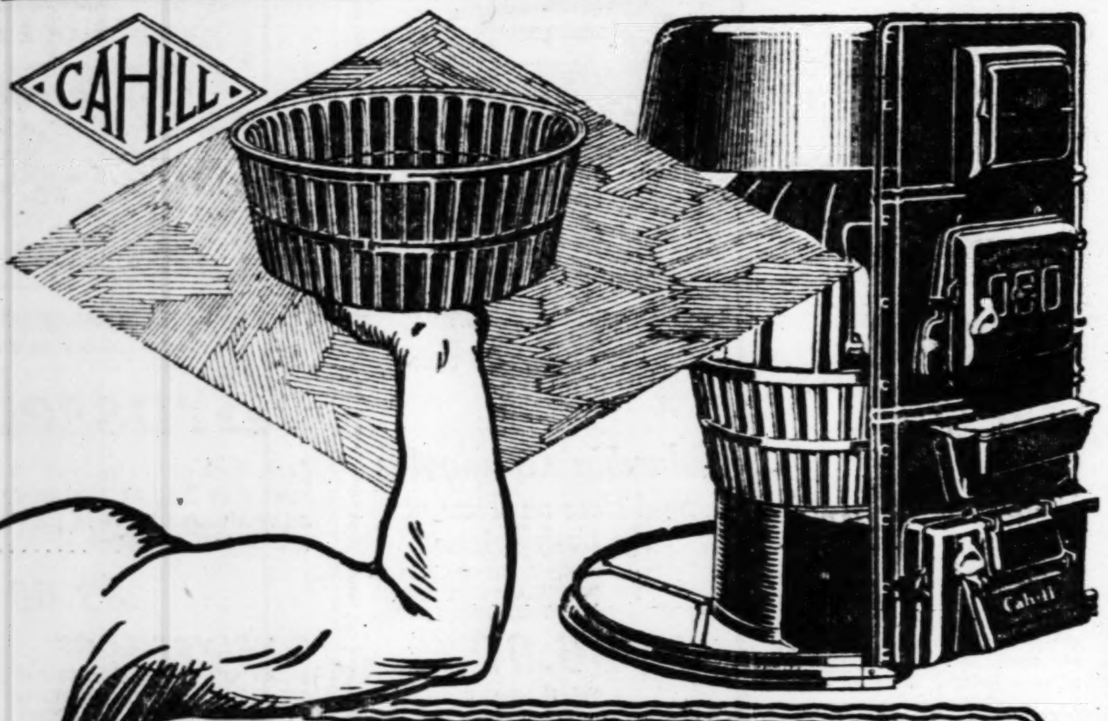
Knit Underwear Salesmen

To the Retail, Drygoods and Furnishing Goods Trade

We have several openings for men who are now employed in a similar capacity and have already demonstrated their ability to sell underwear to the retail merchant. Our lines are well known and considered among the very best. In fact, this is positively the strongest combination of lines shown the retailer today. A salesman's volume of business depends entirely upon his ability and willingness to work, as every merchant handling underwear, no matter what kind, is a prospect. To a man who is a real producer we will guarantee a salary that will be satisfactory in addition to commission on shipments. We will only be interested in men who can produce the best of references and records of their past performances. Applications will be held in strict confidence and will be accepted until November 15th. Box W-81, Post-Dispatch.



Castings are the Sinews Of a Furnace

The modern and sanitary method of heating homes, churches, schools, factories and stores. One register heats the whole house. Simple to install, economical and easy to operate. Uniform heat in every room, constantly circulating.

Write For Free Booklet fully describing Cahill Pipeless Furnaces and giving valuable information about heating problems.

CASTINGS are the part of a furnace that come in contact with the fiercest heat—that crack and wear out first in most furnaces. Cahill Furnaces excel because the castings in them excel. They are unusually heavy, thick, and carefully fitted and finished. They will retain heat longer than most furnaces, thereby saving fuel, requiring less attention, and giving more uniform heating. The heavy Cahill castings are also more durable than castings less sturdily made. Examine the castings in a Cahill Furnace and you will agree that is is "built for long service and constant saving."

Cahill Pipeless Furnaces

The Cahill Furnace is the result of 40 years manufacturing experience, and embodies the same manufacturing ideals which have given to Cahill Grates and Fireplace Fixtures an enviable reputation for quality and dependability.

THE BEST COUGH SYRUP IS HOME-MADE

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain graunlated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Slpendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

How to Revitalize Wornout Exhausted Nerves

Your nerve power depends on plenty of good, rich, red blood of the kind that organic iron—Nuxated Iron—helps make. Nuxated Iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on iron filings. Nuxated Iron does not injure the teeth nor upset the stomach; it is an entirely different thing from ordinary metallic iron. It quickly helps make rich, red blood, revitalize wornout, exhausted nerves and give you new strength and energy. Over 4,000,000 people annually are using it. Beware of substitutes. Always insist upon having genuine organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Look for the letter N. on every tablet. Sold by all druggists.

TODAY'S 'POP' OPENS NEW SYMPHONY SEASON

Novel Works on Program for First Regular Concerts Next Friday and Saturday.

With today's popular concert at the Odeon, and the first pair of regular programs next Friday afternoon and Saturday night, the Symphony Orchestra opens its forty-first season, and Director Zach begins his fourteenth year as director. The orchestra will be found to have the same number of musicians as during last season, 81; but of these 23 are newcomers or returning players who have been absent from the ranks for longer or shorter periods.

Director Zach's ambition, proved in former seasons, to provide as much unfamiliar music as possible, is reflected in the program for the first pair of concerts. Scheduled are two compositions which will be labeled "first time here"—Charles Martin Loeffler's "Pagan Poem," after the Eighth Eclogue of Virgil, and Caesar Franck's "Symphonic Variations," for piano and orchestra Heinrich Gebhard, as soloist, will play the piano part in the Franck number, and also a piano obligato in Loeffler's work.

In "The Pagan Poem," the Boston composer delineates a passage in which an enchantress, by means of spells, seeks to allure back her recreant lover. The poem has a refrain, "Draw from the city my songs, draw Daphnis home!"

Trumpets Behind the Stage.

This is represented by a trio of solo trumpets, which are heard faintly at first behind the stage; as the lover, bound by the charms, draws nearer and nearer, so do the trumpets grow louder and louder, until, with his arrival, the witch varies the refrain triumphantly to "Forbear! from the city—forbear now, my songs—Daphnis comes;" and the trumpets, emerging at last upon the stage, burst into an exultant fanfare. This work also has a part for solo English horn.

The remainder of the program will be devoted to Weber's overture to "Der Freischuetz" and to Schumann's First Symphony, to which he himself gave the title of "Spring." It was written in a passion of longing for the vernal season which overtook the composer during the first winter of his marriage.

New Coleridge-Taylor Suite.

There will be no soloist at this afternoon's "pop" concert, the feature of which will be a suite by Coleridge-Taylor, never before played here. The program follows:

Marche Slave ....Tschaikowsky
Overture to "The Bat"........Strauss
Petite Suite de Concert—
Coleridge-Taylor
1. La Caprice de Nannette.
2. Demande et Reponse.
3. Un Sonnet d'Amour.
4. La Tarantelle Fretillante.
(First time.)
Selections from "La Boheme"..Puccini
Valse de Concert, Op. 47...Glazounoff

At the second pair of regular concerts, Nov. 19 and 20, Eefrem Zimbalist, violin virtuoso, will introduce a concerto new to this city, the third of Jenno Hubay, who has been called the Leopold Auer of Czecho-Slovakia. Another novelty will be Rimsky-Korsakoff's overture on Russian church themes, "La Grande Paque Russe," or "The Russian Easter." It is based on passages from the Psalms and from the Gospel of St. Mark. Mozart's overture to "Le Nozze di Figaro" and the Fourth Symphony of Brahms will complete the program.

The Ladies' Friday Musical Club will again this year distribute free symphony tickets to deserving music students. Application should be made in writing to Mrs. David Kriegshaber, 4939 Washington boulevard.

COUNTESS OF COTTENHAM, BRITISH BEAUTY, IS AN AMERICAN

Former Patricia Burke, a California Girl, Noted for Devotion to Hunting.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 6. — Patricia, Countess of Cottenham, a Diana of the hunting field, is an American by birth, the daughter of the late John Humphrey Burke of Los Angeles, Cal. She passes the entire winter riding to hounds in the 'Shires.

Lady Cottenham is the widow of the fourth Earl of Cottenham, who took her as his second wife in 1916; he died last year. At the wedding Walter Winans, who was often called "the best known American in Europe," who died lately, gave the bride away.

Lady Cottenham, of striking beauty, has always been greatly admired in British and European society. It was reported that she was betrothed to Prince Ferdinand of Bourbon; then to Juan de Ropes de Ayala, Marquis de Fuensanta, and a cousin of the King of Spain. Next it was rumored that she was engaged to Prince Ludovico Pignatelli d'Arragon, and, soon after, that she would have married a nobleman who was killed at the front.

New Spanish Stamps Issued.

It comprised stamps of 13 different denominations, each of a different color. The upper half of the stamps bear a bust of the King looking toward the left and wearing his crown. DISCOVERED CURE FOR PIMPLES AND ACNE

A Kansas City Chemist Discovered a Simple Home Remedy for Pimples, Acne and Eczema and Makes a Generous Offer

Mr. H. Ward, a chemist located in Ward Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., has discovered a simple home remedy for Pimples, Acne, Blackheads and all similar skin eruptions. To test it he sent some to people who had been suffering from these unsightly blemishes for years, and to their delight they stated that they were easily cured.

Mr. Ward is so proud of his discovery, and has so much confidence in its ability to cure, that he will send a $1.00 bottle postpaid to any one who will write for it. His offer is that he is to be paid for it if it cures. The person using it is to be the sole judge and report results within thirty days' time. If it does not benefit you are out nothing. If you suffer from any of the above diseases write for a bottle today. Send no money—just your name and address to H. Ward, 105 Ward Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

To Give the Hair a Naturally Wavy Effect

Ever since the virtues of the silmerine hair-curling method first became known in this country, druggists here have been having a really extraordinary demand for liquid silmerine. Its effectiveness, its convenience and its entire harmlessness doubtless have been responsible for its increasing use among well-groomed women.

One need only apply a little of the liquid with a clean tooth brush before doing up the hair and the tresses will have a beautiful wavy and glossy appearance which bears no marks of artificiality. The best way is to divide the hair into strands and moisten each of them from root to tip. There is no discoloration, no sticky, streaky or other unpleasant feature. Liquid silmerine is fine also as an aid in shaping "ear muffs" and in keeping them in place over the ears.

The quick, efficient and inexpensive way to accomplish many things in buying, selling, renting, exchanging, is through Post-Dispatch WANTS.

Destroy the Germs and Catarrh Will Quickly Go

If you want to relieve stuffed-up head in five minutes and get rid of crusts in the nose, discharge of mucus, watery eyes, hawking and spitting, start to breathe HYOMEI today.

Catarrh with all its disgusting symptoms is caused by germs or microbes.

Go today and get a HYOMEI (pronounce it High-o-me) outfit, pour a few drops of HYOMEI into the little hard rubber pocket inhaler, breathe it and begin at once to kill the microbes that cause catarrh.

For aggravated cases of catarrh or a cough or a cold or sore throat be sure and use the HYOMEI vapor treatment in conjunction with the inhaler. Here is it:

Every night before going to bed pour a teaspoonful of HYOMEI into a bowl three-quarters full of boiling water; cover head and bowl with towel and breathe for five minutes, the pleasant, soothing and healing vapor that arises.

It doesn't take long for a cold to run into catarrh; use HYOMEI at once and get immediate relief. HYOMEI is an antiseptic that soothes and heals the inflamed condition of the membranes besides killing the germs. For catarrh, acute or chronic, for sore throat, asthma, coughs, colds and croup, HYOMEI is sold by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and leading druggists everywhere on money-back plan.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Any of these books will be sent by parcel post to cardholders on receipt of postage, in order of application.

SKETCHING WITHOUT A MASTER, by J. H. Brown. Gives rules and recommendations for pen and ink work. The primary attitude of the author is that pen and ink is a tonal medium and is not line work pure and simple. He regards line work as a means to an end, but gives the technical information necessary to secure varied effects with the restricted medium.

HOW TO REDUCE, by A. Donnelly. Furnishes seven complete and varied diets, all carefully worked out and proven by thorough trials. Besides diets, exercises are suggested for toning up the system. They are simple and need no special apparatus.

LIGHTING THE HOME, by M. Luckiesh. The author is director of applied science at the Nela Research Laboratories, National Lamp Works of the General Electric Co. The book not only gives the usual practical information regarding wiring, period fixtures, etc., but offers advice on all sorts of lighting problems, and suggests an ingenuous method of "painting with light" by means of controlling colored lights.

SPRING WALK IN PROVENCE, by A. Marshall. The result of the novelist's tramp through Mistral's country. He journeyed in a leisurely and unobtrusive fashion along the old Roman roads, modern motor drives, and up wild mountain paths. Readers who enjoy Marshall's novels will like this charming travel book. The book is well illustrated, and there is an index.

REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA, by R. C. F. Maugham. The author began his work before the war and finished it in 1918. The printing was delayed until 1920, so that he includes a second preface bringing his subject up to date. The book is a general description of the history, commerce, agriculture, flora fauna and methods of administration of the negro republic.

VICTORY OF VENIZELOS, by V. J. Seligman. A study of Greek politics, 1910-1918, with special reference to the policy of Venizelos. The work is based partly on official white books, partly on hitherto unpublished documents, and partly upon information supplied by nonpartisan witnesses of current events in Athens.

SCHOOLING OF THE IMMIGRANT, by F. V. Thompson. A survey of the small accomplishment as compared with the widespread attempt in immigrant education. The purpose of the book is to give as clear an idea as possible of the methods employed by the numerous agencies at work in field, and does not attempt to propose methods for dealing with the complicated question involved.

CASE FOR CAPITALISM, by H. Withers. The author believes that organization under guild monopolies will kill all individuality in production, and will standardize the worker as well as the product of his labor. He shows that greater output of goods cannot certainly be expected under any form of Socialism that has been proposed, and believes greater benefits will result from a reformed capitalism.

THE AFTERMATH, by H. Belloc. Contains "Caliban's Guide to Letters" and "Lamkin's Remains." The first is a sort of glorified guide book to the bypaths of modern journalism. The second is a miscellaneous collection of the verses, letters and opinions of one Josiah Lamkin. The lover of Belloc will enjoy this book.

ORGAN RECITAL TO BE GIVEN AT NEW CATHEDRAL TODAY

Will Be First of a Series There on the First Sunday in Each Month.

A series of organ recitals, to be given on the first Sunday of each month at the New Cathedral by William Theodore Diebels, will begin at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The course is intended to illustrate the history of organ music, and some of the subjects to be treated will be "Bach," "The Romantic Period," "Modern Composers," "Transcriptions," "The Dutch and Flemish Schools" and "The French School."

Today's program will show the development of organ music through the centuries, beginning with a Prelude by Pauman, one of the earliest pieces written for the organ. Because of the stiff action of the organs of that period, the keys were struck with the fist.

The Sign of Safe Sealing

Wise housewives will give this advice to those who do their buying. It is an assurance of getting properly packed foods.

The packer who puts his goods in glass tumblers or jars and seals with a Cap bearing this trade-mark has done his utmost to retain all the original flavor and purity of his product.

Instruct those who do your buying to accept no glass-packed foods without this mark of safe sealing. A quarter century of experience, study and experiment have been necessary to bring Cap making to our present point of perfection.

ILLINOIS' HAY YIELD FIGURES

State Average for Alfalfa Was 2.70 Tons Per Acre.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 6.—West and southwest portions of Illinois gave the best yields per acre of hay this harvest according to detailed figures on the State's production compiled by S. D. Fessenden of this city, Federal agricultural statistician. The central part of the State, however, produced most alfalfa.

State averages show that 1.12 tons of tame hay were raised to the acre in Illinois, 1.20 tons per acre of wild hay, 1.29 tons per acre of timothy, and 2.70 tons per acre of alfalfa.

The best tame hay county was Schuyler, where an average of two tons was produced. Next in rank were Jo Davies and Knox counties, which each gave a yield of 1.80 tons per acre.

Wild hay grew best in Iroquois County, which produced an acre average of 2.50 tons. Four counties, Bond, Calhoun, Lawrence and Clinton, each gave two tons, and Rock Island gave 1.50 tons to the acre.

Jackson County did best in raising timothy, giving 2.50 tons to the acre, to the 2.40 tons of Henderson County. Other good county averages are shown for Brown County, which produced 1.80 tons, for Champaign and McHenry counties, which each gave 1.60 tons.

An exceptional record in production of alfalfa was set by DeKalb County, which gave an average yield of six tons per acre. Alexander and Warren counties each gave four tons, Kane County, 3.90, and Clark County, 3.40.

FRANKLIN COIN OF 1787 FOUND

Penny Bears the Inscription "Mind Your Business."

By the Associated Press.

DOVER, Mass, Nov. 6.—A Franklin penny, the first copper coin to be authorized by Congress, has been found on the homestead of one of the first settlers here. It was struck in 1787 and is one of a few that were coined.

The penny took its name from Benjamin Franklin because of the inclusion in its design of the homely admonition "Mind your business," after a suggestion by him that coins should serve purposes other than those of legal tender.

On one side 13 circles appear linked together, a small circle in the middle with the word "United States" around it, and in the center "We are one." On the other side is a dial with the hours indicated, a meridian sun above it, on one side of which is the word "Fugio" and on the other the date "1787." Below the dial appears the Franklin phrase "Mind your business."

Thousands Cured by Drinking Mineral Water

The Famous Perlax Mineral Springs at Excelsior Springs, Mo., Makes Generous Offer to Sufferers.

Every year as many as 250,000 people visit Excelsior Springs, Mo., to drink the wonderful waters found there. Invalids from all over the country, given up by their home doctors, find health and vigor in the mineral and curative agents compounded far underground by Nature.

Probably the most famous waters are those found in the Perlax Mineral Spring, and many thousands who have suffered from Gout, Rheumatism, Constipation, Liver and Kidney troubles and similar ailments have been permanently relieved by drinking it.

So confident are the owners of the spring that this water will benefit you that they offer to send a $1 carton of Perlax Mineral Salts to anyone who will write for it. When dissolved in water this is equal to ten gallons of Perlax Mineral water. Their offer is that it is to be paid for only if it benefits. The person taking it is to be the sole judge and report results within thirty days' time.

If you suffer from any of the above diseases write for a carton today. Send no money—just your name and address to Perlax Mineral Springs, 310 Perlax Bldg., Excelsior Springs, Mo.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery to others, who took it with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. Wolff-Wilson Co. has been appointed agent for Allenrhu in this vicinity, with the understanding that they will freely return the purchase money on the first two bottles to all who state they received no benefit.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Fat That Shows Soon Disappears

Prominent fat that comes and stays where it is not needed is a burden; a hindrance to activity, and a curb upon pleasure. Many forms of advice to reduce weight have been advanced, such as dieting, hard work, excessive exercise, etc., all of which are either unpleasant or dangerous.

The latest, more modern and pleasant way to take off burdensome fat, is to take, after each meal and at bedtime, a Marmola Tablet. These little tablets are as effective and harmless as the famous Marmola Prescription from which they take their name.

To get rid of fat at the rate of two, three or four pounds a week, simply take one of these little tablets after each meal and at bedtime until you have reduced your weight to where you want it. No wrinkles or flabbiness will remain to show where the fat came off.

They are for sale by all druggists at $1 for a good size box. If you prefer to have them come to you direct by mail, prepaid, in plain sealed cover, send amount to the Marmola Co., 97 Garfield Building, Detroit, Mich., and bid goodbye to dieting, exercise and fat. Be yourself, slim, trim and attractive.

ICELAND PLANS TO MAKE USE OF HER MANY WATERFALLS

Finance Minister Now in Copenhagen to Get Consent to Bill Providing for Project.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 6.—Iceland proposes to utilize her numerous waterfalls in carrying out an extensive program of water-power distribution, and Magnus Gudmandson, the Icelandic Finance Minister, has come here to obtain royal consent to a bill for that purpose. But the country, however, needs capital to carry our this project, he told a reporter of the Copenhagen Politiken.

Speaking of his country's finances, he said that the limitation of imports has had a good effect. Not only are luxuries forbidden, but imports of necessaries are restricted as far as possible without injuring trade. The fishing year has been good, last year's stocks have been sold, likewise the new catch. Wool is still on hand, owing to falling textile prices and decreasing demand.

"We have no large debt, no cripples, no war widows to support, while the nerves of our peole have not been destroyed and our children are not weakened by hunger, so we may face the future hopefully," said Gudmandson.

OIL REPORTED IN NEW JERSEY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 6.—A flurry of excitement is reported among owners of Pine Barrens in the vicinity of Estelville, 25 miles from here, over reports of the discovery of oil upon a farm owned by Harry Rogers. The discovery recalls the pre-war excitement in the Pine Barrens below Millville over the sinking of wells and insistent reports that petroleum had been found 800 feet in the sand. A. E. Wilkinson, farm demonstrator for Atlantic County, is quoted here as declaring that the black fluid Rogers is credited with having discovered at the mouth of a long-abandoned test well upon his place undoubtedly is oil. It does not appear to be as thick as the heavy petroleum of Pennsylvania. Wilkinson said that prior oil discoveries had usually been in the peat beds between Mays Landing and the coast.

The Doctor's Advice

By Dr. Lewis Baker

"So Thin" writes: "I am so thin and pale that it is a constant source of worry and embarrassment. Please tell me how to increase my weight."

Answer: Most unusual results are frequently attained by taking Hypo-Nuclane tablets for several months. Contain ingredients to increase the blood and flesh.

"Invalid Man" writes: "Both my wife and I are just recovering from a long illness. We do not seem to gain strength. We are both nervous, irritable, pale, listless and lack ambition or energy. Life is not very pleasant for either of us."

Answer: Possibly your blood is anemic. Both of you begin taking Cadomene tablets—the best tonic and strength-building medicine I know of.

"Help Wanted" writes: "For over a year I have used hair tonics to cure dandruff, sore scalp and dead, falling hair. This is a case of 'help wanted.'"

Answer: The local treatment that meets my approval is plain yellow Minyol. It quickly stops such conditions. If the blood is impure and impoverished, internal treatment is advisable, too. For this elixir Chin-Cea comp. is excellent.

"Mrs. M. H. V." writes: "I feel it as a duty to write you. Four years ago my husband had a bad cough and found [illegible] relief from all cough medicines [illegible] try. We finally tried the [illegible] prescription and made it up as [illegible] medicine and it quickly cured him. [illegible] also gave me great relief from [illegible] from which I suffer in winter [illegible] you know here in Oregon we have [illegible] rainy instead of snow."

• • •

"Amelia" writes: "Please tell me the safe flesh reducing medicine."

Answer: Arbolone tablets in sealed tubes with directions.

"H. M. R." writes: "Can you [illegible] prescribe medicine which will relieve [illegible] of such distressing symptoms of kidney and bladder as the following: Pain in small of back, soreness in region of bladder, puffing of limbs, etc."

Answer: Those seeking relief from kidney and bladder disorders should begin taking Balmwort Tablets, a very successful formula sold in sealed tubes with full directions.

WHOLESALE GRAFT ALLEGED IN BUILDING ARGENTINA CAPITOL

Newspapers Charged Loads of Material Went in Front Door and Out Back, Disappearing.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 6.—Argentina has been having a graft investigation as a result of which it has been found that 5,500,000 pesos have been "unduly" disbursed by former Government officials who directed payments to contractors for building the Capitol here. The present Government has announced its intention of bringing suits to recover the money improperly paid.

The building, a magnificent structure of classic architecture, marble facings and broad sweeps of marble steps, not unlike the capitol at Washington, is jestingly called in the newspapers "El Palacio de Oro," Spanish for "The Palace of Gold." It was begun in 1897 and was originally to have cost 10,000,000 pesos. It is not yet entirely finished and has cost 27,000,000.

Recently a committee of the National Accountancy Department completed an investigation of the expenditure of the moneys paid for construction of the building and reported that 5,500,000 pesos had been "unduly" disbursed.

Buenos Aires newspapers told years ago of wagon loads of building material that went in the front door of the structure, soon after came out the back door and then disappeared. Charges were made that marble was paid for but concrete used for part of the construction, and other accusations of graft were aired. It was then that the newspapers began to call it "The Palace of Gold."

Embittered with life, a proud aristocrat sneeringly married an Indian squaw. Then sent her home to disgrace his family and sank to the dregs in the lumber camps of the North.

But one day the man in him awoke. Seeking the pitiful creature he had wronged, he found—a radiant, beautiful woman! who—

With the opening of the Missouri Theater, situated at Grand and Lucas avenues, St. Louis takes possession of the most beautiful palace of entertainment in the United States.

Erected at a cost of more than $1,000,000, the finest workmanship of America is represented in the construction and lavish embellishments of the theater. The lobby and entrances, including the Grand Stairways, are of themselves unique in design, decoration and elegance. The mezzanine promenade possesses the delightful atmosphere of luxurious comfort. Every possible convenience has been anticipated.

The Missouri Theater contains seats for 4000 persons, and is the largest theater in the United States west of New York. It at once takes its place as one of the show places of St. Louis.

The policy of entertainment at the Missouri Theater will be to change the program each Sunday, and to present each week a new Paramount Picture in an environment of color, costuming and music.

ILLINOIS FINISHES 310 MILES OF HARD ROADS

Work Done in Year Includes 107 Miles on Chicago-St. Louis Highway.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 6.—A record in road building, beyond which it would be impossible to go without more funds than were at the disposal of the State Division of Highways, was set this year, according to the financial statement and survey of work just issued by State Superintendent of Highways S. E. Bradt.

When working gangs quit work on Oct. 29, 310 miles of hard roads had been built since Jan. 1, 1920, leaving 178 miles of road contracted for but uncompleted. As it is not expected that much more work may be done this year, the schedule of work then completed marks the virtual record for the year. Mileage has been distributed as follows:

Lincoln Highway—51 miles.
Dixie Highway—44 miles.
National Old Trails—64 miles.
Chicago-St. Louis road—107 miles.
Chicago-Waukegan road—6 miles.
State aid work—38 miles.

There are still uncompleted contracts on the above roads approximately as follows:

Lincoln Highway—12 miles.
Dixie Highway—22 miles.
National Old Trails—53 miles.
Chicago-St. Louis road—77 miles
Chicago-Waukegan road — 14 miles.

The financial statement shows that the division awarded contracts for road and bridge work not only to the limit of cash on hand, but also in anticipation of the motor fees to become available April 10, 1921, as well as practically the entire reimbursement from the Federal Government which is not paid in to the State until after work previously contracted for is completed.

"In fact," Bradt's statement reads, "all the funds appropriated both by the State and Gederal governments, regardless of when they are to be available, have been covered by contract. Beyond this we could not go."

MEN DIG FOR MONEY BURIED YEARS AGO

Counterfeiters Hid Genuine Coin Under Tree Beside Lake in Maine.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BANGOR, Me., Nov. 6.—The fact that a fortune lies buried in the dense forest, somewhere along the shores of Moneymaker Lake, between Robbinston and Red Beach, well nigh forgotten by the few residents of that section who ever knew it, was again brought to mind when a Robbinston farmer lad, having strayed some distance from home in search of trout brooks, which might furnish better sport than those nearer the settlements, came upon two men who were digging under some giant spruce trees near the shores of Moneymaker Lake.

The men did not observe him at first and he watched them while they toiled in two or three spots. Later, when he accosted them, they told him they were digging for worms for bait in order that they might fish in the lake. As they had no fishing tackle with them, and as Moneymaker Lake has no fish worth catching, the boy thought this explanation somewhat remarkable.

When he reached home he told of his adventure, and at first none could account for the presence of strangers or for their actions until one of the older residents of the town declared his belief that the two unknown men were seeking for the buried treasure which has lain in secret for almost a century and has defied the efforts of treasure-seekers for years. Long ago many men labored diligently along the shores of the lake, but the search was abandoned, and until this week no one had been known to have hunted for the treasure for a quarter of a century.

Moneymaker Lake is surrounded by a heavy forest growth and is in a somewhat inaccessible place in northern Washington County. It derived its name from a gang of counterfeiters who, early in the nineteenth centry, dwelt in a cabin on the shore of the lake and pursued their unlawful employment of making money, chiefly imitations of silver coin.

Later their names were known to be Ball, Smith and Blaisdell. Here they lived for many years, their presence unsuspected by the people of Red Beach and Robbinston, getting their supplies from the general store of Gates, Brewer & Vose of Robbinston, and sending to their families, who were supposed to live somewhere in Nova Scotia, provisions and clothing. But in spite of the fact that they were counterfeiters they were never known to pass money of their own manufacture here.

The counterfeiters lived in secrecy until one day, almost a century ago, a Robbinston farmer, looking for some cattle which had strayed from his pasture, came upon their cabin unawares and discovered the nature of their employment. He was seized by the three law breakers and carried into their cabin. Ball, the leader of the gang, was in favor of killing the visitor to make sure that there would be no evidence against them.

If Smith had not strongly objected, Ball would probably have killed the farmer, but Smith was determined that the crime of murder should not be his, and a compromise was effected. The farmer was obliged to swear by the most binding oath that he would not reveal his discovery, and was then permitted to go.

The farmer, after his return home, hesitated between his fear of the counterfeiters and his sense of duty for a day or two, and then told the town authorities what had befallen him and what he had discovered. Deputy Sheriff Downes was sent for, and he started for the forest at once, along the route described by the farmer. Before reaching the cabin of the counterfeiters the officer came upon Ball, who was doing sentry duty. Deputy Downes, a courageous man, advanced upon Ball. The latter fired, bringing down the officer at the first shot. Other officers later captured Ball, but Smith and Blaisdell escaped and have never been heard from since. Ball was tried, convicted of murder and was executed.

Before his death by hanging the counterfeiter said that a large sum of money had been hidden by him at the foot of a tree near his cabin, but he defied any one to find it, and refused to tell its exact whereabouts. He said that most of the money was in genuine silver coin, the spurious money having been distributed elsewhere.

As soon as the story became known, and for many years after, hundreds tried vainly to find the hidden hoard.

Effect of Poor Bread.

VIENNA, Nov. 6.—The poor bread which the people have is said to be the cause of an extraordinary increase of intestinal affections in the last few weeks, overwhich the medical fraternity here is much concerned. A peculiar feature of the epidemic is that it is accompanied by skin eruptions similar to those caused by pellagra.

$1000.00 in Prizes

For the Best Title to this Picture

By Charles Dana Gibson

YES, one thousand dollars given away — 1st prize, $500.00; 2nd prize, $300.00; 3rd, $200.00 — and the best part of it is that everyone has an equal chance. Democrat or Republican, pro or anti, married or single—it doesn't make a bit of difference. Perhaps you have never even seen LIFE—no matter, this is for everybody.

For twenty-two years readers of LIFE have been winning prizes by giving titles for pictures. And they've had so much fun out of it, in addition to the money they've received, that this time it has been decided to let the other people who haven't yet had any fun out of LIFE, try a hand.

Think of it! $500.00 in cold cash for writing from one to ten words. Isn't it worth trying? An idea you already have in mind may be the very one that will strike the judges as being the best. Even if you get the smallest prize offered—that alone amounts to $200.00.

Rules of Contest

All that is necessary is to send in your titles before the closing date. The titles are limited to ten words—but if you can put your title in five or even three words, do so. Brevity is usually the soul of wit. Titles may be originals or quotations.

Send in as many titles as you want. Send in the first one that occurs to you now. Later you can send in others. Jot down your title or titles on any sheet of paper, sign your name and mail to the Contest Editor of LIFE.

The final award will be announced in LIFE as early as possible after the close of the contest. Checks will be sent simultaneously with the announcement. In case of ties, $500 ($300 or $200) will be awarded each winning contestant.

The contest is now open. It will close at noon on November 30th, 1920. Remember, all you have to do is to write your title on a piece of paper, sign your name and address and mail it to Contest Editor of LIFE, Dept. 124, Box 262, G. P. O., New York, N. Y. Send in a title to-day—then others, if you think of better ones.

Money Saving Offer

Of course you know LIFE, the sprightly weekly magazine of fun with its many pages of brilliant humor and satire in picture and text—the magazine which has dominated black and white pictorial art in America. LIFE has more regularly contributing artists than any other paper in the world. It is the only magazine to whom Charles Dana Gibson, America's greatest black and white artist, contributes.

To enter this LIFE Contest, you have no entrance fee to pay whatsoever. And LIFE will co-operate with you in making it easy for you to land one of these big prizes by reprinting in its pages in the next few issues the pictures and winning titles of previous contests, besides the present contest picture will be reproduced in a way that will show up the details and facial expressions much better than can a newspaper cut.

You can buy LIFE at your newsstand, 15 cents a copy, but in order to be sure of getting it weekly —if your dealer is sold out—you can accept this special offer and save money at the same time.

Just mail the coupon below enclosing a single dollar bill and you will receive the next twelve issues which also includes the 25c Christmas number. This means that you get $1.90 worth of LIFE for only one dollar.

Perhaps you will be the winner in this $1000.00 contest. Mail the coupon now—this offer may be withdrawn at any moment.

SPIDER TAKES KINDLY TO NEW SURROUNDINGS

Specimen of Cyclosa Comica, Found by Illinois Woman, Satisfied in Captivity.

By the Associated Press.

WHEATON, Ill., Nov. 6.—The tale of a spider that would not be evicted is told by Mrs. Elizabeth Marriott Moffatt of Wheaton. One of the few students of spiders, Mrs. Moffatt thus notes her experience with this little fellow who made itself comfortable regardless of circumstances:

"One day in a public park I found a specimen of Cyclosa conica in an evergreen tree. She was sitting on a vertical line of rubbish—that this species always hangs in her orb web. The rubbish usually consists of bits of dirt and fragments of insects all bound together with web. It is about an eighth of an inch wide and two or three inches long. Concealed upon or behind this the mistress sits watching for prey. The species grows to be about a quarter of an inch in length. The body is elliptical in outline, is grayish in color above and white beneath. At the rear end of the abdomen is a short conical hump like an upturned pug nose.

"Our specimen, with her string of rubbish, was folded loosely into a piece of tissue paper, dropped into a shopping bag and in the evening brought home. By means of a thread I suspended the rubbish with the spider still clinging to it, in an embroidery hoop, hoping that she would accept the hoop as a foundation within which she would build herself a new web. In this I was not disappointed, for the next morning I found that she had constructed an orb as large as the diameter of the hoop would permit, had placed the string of rubbish in more nearly vertical position than my clumsy fingers had been able to do it, and appeared to be quite at home.

"Each morning I would hang the hoop out of doors in the sunshine where insects might perchance blunder into the web, and in the evening would bring it into the house for fear some mishap might befall her. One day I suspended the hoop in a horizontal position to make a photograph with the vertical camera. Even this did not disturb her, for she sat quietly and as far as I could discover "looked pleasant" while the exposure was made.

"Spiders are usually shy creatures, and will escape from captivity if opportunity offers. That my Cyclosa should sturdily cling to her slender string of rubbish during all of the trouble that I made for her seemed remarkable."

DRESS COSTING 12 CENTS WINS SCHOOL THRIFT PRIZE

Girl Boiled Old Oilcloth, Dyed It Pink and Embroidered It With Silk Stocking Ravelings.

By the Associated Press

MURRAY, Ky., Nov. 6.—A dress that cost 12 cents won the thrift prize at the Calloway School Fair here recently, and probably set a record for this and a number of other states.

Miss Eunice McLane, young and pretty, looked very attractive in her gown costing a dime and 2 cents.

This is how she did it:

In her search for available material she found a piece of oilcloth that had been used on the kitchen table for seven years. She boiled it, making it a thin, soft material, bought 5 cents' worth of dye and colored it pink.

Then, wishing to embroider it, she had to pay 7 cents for an embroidery pattern.

She used ravelings of the material to sew the dress up and the ravelings of a silk stocking to embroider it with.

Second prize at the school fair was won by Lillie Grogan with a dress of all new materials costing 56 cents.

Evanston Pastor to Preach Here.

The Rev. Hugh Robert Orr of Evanston, Ill., will occupy the pulpit of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, 5259 Enright avenue, at this morning's and evening's services, in the interest of the National Unitarian Campaign. Dr. John W. Day, pastor of the church, was one of the Unitarian ministers selected by the National Campaign Committee to tour the United States in the interest of the campaign, which is for church extension work and an endowment fund.

White teeth in diseased sockets are doomed

Watch your gums and you can prevent diseased sockets

Thousands of people have wrong notions about saving their teeth. All that's necessary, they think, is to keep them white and free from decay. This is important but it isn't enough.

The vital thing is to keep the gums healthy. Because pyorrhea, the greatest tooth destroyer of all, starts under the gums. The infection that begins in the gum tissue spreads (if unchecked) to the bony root socket.

This root socket is what holds the tooth in place. When pyorrhea germs undermine and destroy the sockets, the entire supporting foundation of the teeth is gone. So they loosen and fall out or must be extracted—though they may be sound and undecayed.

That is why dentists in increasing numbers prescribe Pyorrhocide Powder to keep gums healthy and to restore health to bleeding, receding spongy or tender gums.

In addition to its ingredients which keep the teeth white and clean, Pyorrhocide Powder is medicated with Dentinol, a germicidal and healing agent widely used by the dental profession in the treatment of pyorrhea at the dentist's chair.

Pyorrhocide Powder tones up the gums, stimulates their blood circulation, maintains hardness and firmness, thereby increasing the power to resist pyorrhea infection. Its effectiveness for this purpose has been conclusively proved by thorough tests in clinics devoted exclusively to pyorrhea study and research. That is why dentists everywhere recommend it.

The economical dollar package contains six months' supply. At all druggists and dental supply houses.

Free trial package to prove what real gum health means

Send coupon for free sample of Pyorrhocide Powder. Note how it leaves a refreshed, cleanly feeling of the teeth and gums long after brushing. To you who have used other dentifrices, it will prove a revelation. We will also send our educational booklet on the Prevention and Treatment of Pyorrhea.

A favorite recipe from a famous cooking school

Women who have tried this recipe have been so enthusiastic that we have obtained permission to publish it. Try it this evening. See how pleased your family will be!

Then try Libby's Milk in your own favorite recipes, and for your coffee or cocoa. Wherever your recipe calls for milk, use Libby's Evaporated Milk mixed with an equal quantity of water; where cream is called for use Libby's Evaporated Milk undiluted. Note what a rich, delightful flavor this fine, creamy milk from famous dairy sections gives to everything in which you use it.

Your grocer has it now.

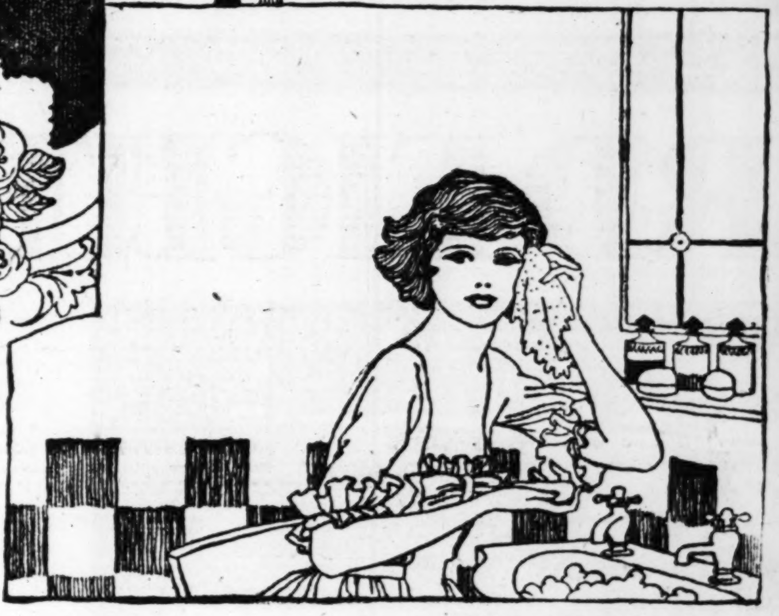
Explaining the moderate price

Users of Palmolive should know why it can be bought at the price of other soaps.

Simply because Palmolive is so popular that it forces production in enormous quantity. The Palmolive factory works day and night, ingredients are purchased in gigantic volume. The result is a moderate price.

Palmolive is sold by all dealers and supplied in guest-room size by America's most popular hotels.



Do this, first—

Use it as a beautifier

SOAP and water has a most important mission in preserving the beauty and fineness of the complexion. It removes the coating of dirt, perspiration and excess oil secretions which, with all traces of rouge and powder, must be washed away every day.

Neglect this daily cleansing and you invite trouble. The tiny pores and minute glands which make up the surface of the skin quickly become clogged and irritated.

This clogging, this irritation, causes enlargement. This is the reason so many skins are coarse. Then when the coarsened pores fill with dirt, blackheads result. Soon they inflame and disfiguring blotches follow.

Do your cleansing with Palmolive

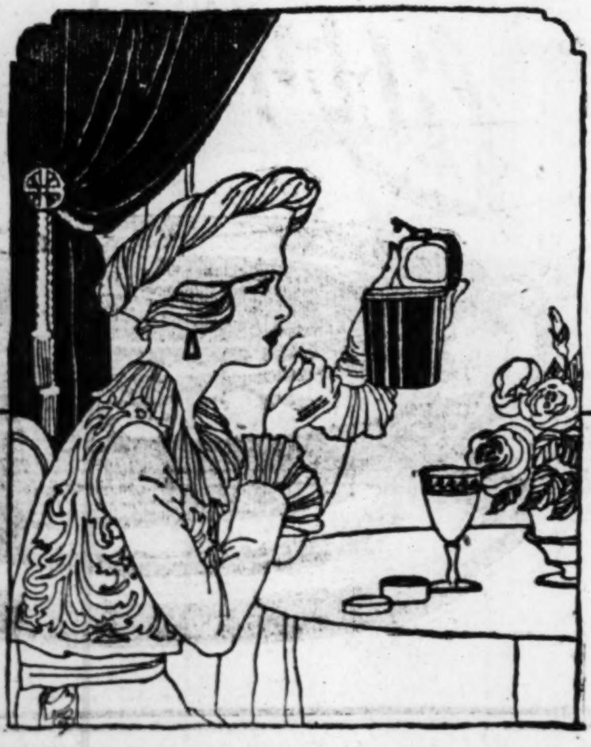
Don't say soap doesn't agree with your skin but secure a cake of Palmolive. Its pure, mild lather is so gentle in its action that it soothes while it cleanses.

If your complexion is excessively dry, apply Palmolive Cold Cream both before and after washing. This supplies the lacking natural oil and keeps the skin soft and smooth.

Contains Palm and Olive Oils

The combination of these oils, discovered 3,000 years ago in ancient Egypt, blended scientifically in a soap, cannot irritate the most tender skin.

Cleopatra knew their value—they served her both as cleanser and cosmetic. Today their scientific combination in Palmolive Soap achieves the final toilet luxury.



and this won't harm you

ZERWECK-GRAYSON CO. ADDS NORWALK TIRES

The distribution of Norwalk tires in St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois was taken over last week by the Zerweck-Grayson Company. The Norwalk line comprises both fabric and cord casings and both red and gray tubes. The Norwalk brand is well known in St. Louis, having been represented here for a number of years.

VESPER BUICK OPENS RETAIL DEPARTMENT

Announcement was made yesterday by the Vesper-Buick Company that they had inaugurated their own retail department, which would be entirely separate and distinct from the wholesale division, although located in the same building at Grand and Lindell.

The establishment of this retail department will not disturb the other three Buick retail dealers in the metropolitan district: the West Side Buick Company, the Prack-Buick Company, East St. Louis, and the Jakes-Buick Company of Kirkwood. It is probable that at some future date other retail establishments will be organized on the North Side and in South St. Louis, thus extending Buick service facilities to each section of the city.

The new retail department will be in charge of H. V. Morrow, as sales manager. E. J. Weber and J. T. Sether will also be connected with the new department.

SOUTHERN MOTOR HAS NOVEL SALES PLAN

A novel special sale on Grant Six cars is being held by the Southern Motor Company, distributors for this line. During the month of November, or until a maximum of 100 cars have been sold, the company is offering the latest models at $200 below the regular list price. This is in addition to the $200 reduction made by the factory on Oct. 7.

The distributor is quite frank in stating that the real reason for this offer is the determination on his part to make the Grant Six better known in St. Louis in the shortest possible time. This special proposition is being limited to Nov. 30, or even earlier if 100 cars are sold sooner, at which time the cost of the car will return to the former price.

A very wide line of special color cars is being offered, among which is the first special Sport Grant Roadster to arrive in St. Louis. This car is finished in canary yellow, and is equipped with disk wheels, windshield wings, cord tires and other conveniences.

LIPPMAN TO ADDRESS THE ACCESSORY TRADE

Members of the Motor Accessory Trade Association will hear an address at their meeting at the City Club Tuesday night on "Motor Tramping in the West, with Side Lights on the Service I Received," by William A. Lippman of the Field-Lippman Co. Mr. Lippman will show a large number of pictures taken by himself on a recent tour to the Far West, and will criticise the kind of automobile service which was measured out to him en route.

Another speaker will be P. D. McCann, educational director of Central Y. M. C. A. His topic is "How the Technical School Can Help Improve Your Service." McCann's particular hobby in his educational work is the automobile school which was founded four years ago for the Y. M. C. A. by the automobile dealers of St. Louis. The meeting will follow a dinner at 6:30 p. m.

By special permission of the manufacturers, for 30 days only, or until a maximum of 100 Grant Sixes have been sold in St. Louis, we will make every buyer a present of practically our entire profit in these cars.

Back of this offer, and the real reason for it, is the determination on our part to make the Grant Six better known and more widely popular in St. Louis—and in the shortest possible time. We are offering this unusual inducement because we believe that this is the quickest way to bring the Grant Six to the position of prestige which it should hold and will hold as soon as people really know what a good car it is.

The Grant Six is by no means an ordinary car.

It has style—the smart lines which every buyer wants.

It has flexibility—a quick, lively car in the getaway, and astonishingly easy to handle because it requires so little gear shifting.

It has power and speed—more power than you'll ever need, and more speed than most owners dare to use.

It is sturdy—from the 5½-inch frame to the last bolt in the chassis, the Grant Six is built for durability.

It is economical—300 to 320 miles on one 16-gallon tankful of gas, 8000 to 10,000 miles on tires, and hardly a gallon of oil to 600 or 700 miles of travel.

If you have not ridden in a Grant, a demonstration would probably be a revelation to you.

This Special Price offer is definitely limited to 30 days—or less if we sell 100 cars in less than 30 days.

SMART ENGLISH WOMEN SMOKED JEWELED PIPES IN THEATER BOX

Irishwoman in Gallery Followed Suit by Lighting Up Clay "Cutty."

LONDON, Nov. 6.—At a West London theater where smoking is permitted two smartly dressed women were seen in a box puffing at jeweled pipes. Soon an old Irishwoman in the gallery followed suit with a clay "cutty."

In a first-class railorad car between Horsham and London a quarrel arose between some nonsmoking women and a woman who refused to put out her cigarette. It ended in one of the anti-smokers seizing the cigarette, gold mounted tortoise-shell holder and all, flinging it out of the window.

"Two guineas costs will meet the case," said the Magistrate.

EXTEND CAMPAIGN FOR MEMBERS

Convention Bureau Also Provides for Associate Members.

The St. Louis Convention Publicity and Tourist Bureau campaign for new members has been extended to Nov. 15, and, owing to the departure from the city of Alvin E. Burger, Charles E. Shanks has been elected chairman of the Junior Chamber of Commerce Committee.

At the last meeting of the Board of Directors an associate membership was provided for, the annual dues to be $5. The bureau officials believe that there are many St. Louisans who want to support the bureau, and be identified with the work, but that an active membership fee restricts many.

Dues for associate membership should be mailed to R. F. McNalley, treasurer, St. Louis Convention, Publicity and Tourist Bureau, 507 Commercial Building.

ACME

"in spite of the rather severe going our ACME has never failed to deliver our goods"

We have been operating our 1½-ton ACME in the soda water business, covering the entire city and points 15 miles out in the county. Our county route, which is covered from two to three times each week, always with a full load, includes a number of steep hills and soft clay roads.

We depend entirely on it to make these county deliveries, and in spite of the rather severe going our ACME has never failed to deliver our goods. We are more than pleased with the uninterrupted service this truck is giving and without hesitation heartily recommend the ACME to anyone contemplating purchasing a truck.

MAN-POWER AND EQUIPMENT THAT MEAN BATTERY SERVICE

The "Cord Tire" Battery
PHILADELPHIA DIAMOND GRID BATTERY
Guaranteed Two Years.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB is credited with saying: "Give me the men and I can make or sell anything." It's Service that we have to sell. So we started out by getting around us the MEN that could make that Service mean something. Men who know their business, men who can show you that they know. Men who are far-sighted enough to make an inexpensive repair when it would be just as easy to sell a new battery. Men who know that only by doing these things can they hope to win and hold the confidence of every car owner in town.

And these men are backed up by the mechanical equipment that makes their work a pleasure to them. This, too, means much to you as a car owner. It means minimum time where a repair is needed and a grade of workmanship otherwise impossible.

And it is a pleasure, too, in this business of ours to be able to look our friends square in the eye and recommend the Philadelphia Diamond Grid Battery, Guaranteed for Two Years, by the manufacturers as well as ourselves.

CONGESTION RELIEF IN OPENING OF WASHINGTON AV.

St. Louis Now Has More Through Traffic Streets Than Other Cities—Move Is on Foot to Make Locust Street a One-Way Thoroughfare.

With the opening of Washington avenue to through automobile traffic, Saturday afternoon, St. Louis has been placed among cities in a class by itself. No other of the large cities of the country have as many through traffic streets to their principal residence sections as St. Louis. Chicago has one through street to the north and one to the south. New York automobile traffic is practically confined to Fifth avenue, and the same congested conditions exist in the other large cities.

With the new thoroughfare St. Louis now has Chestnut street, Pine street, Locust street and Washington avenue leading to the West End of of the city, and all of these are well paved and practically free from street car interference.

New North and South End Streets.

The opening of Twelfth street to Park avenue and the resurfacing of Seventh street from Chouteau avenue south will give the motorists of the city two well-made through highways, also free from street car traffic to the South End. This will greatly relieve vehicular traffic on Grand avenue as motorists who have heretofore driven north on Grand avenue to one of the eastbound streets will find it greatly to their advantage to come by the new-made streets from the South End.

At present there is also a considerable amount of traffic to the north end of the city over High or Twelfth streets to Thirteenth street past the Biddle Market. Thirteenth street is paved with asphalt to its intersection with Broadway at 4300 north, and many cars follow this route to North Market street, St. Louis avenue and other North End streets, which they follow to the northeast part of the city. The opening of the new streets via Fifteenth to the north end, for which property has already been condemned, will not take place for some time, owing to the legal requirements.

Want Locust a One-Way Street.

There is considerable satisfaction among the Automobile Dealers' Association, accessory, tire and battery dealers, whose places of business are located on Locust street, over the opening of Washington avenue. They believe that this will greatly relieve a congestion on Locust street which has been detrimental to their business. For the past two years the traffic on Locust street has been so heavy up to 10 o'clock each morning and after 4 o'clock each evening as to prevent motorists from attempting stops at any of the automobile places on Locust street. It is believed that the traffic will be cut in half by the opening of Washington avenue.

A movement has been started by the automobile trade on Locust street to secure the passage of a city ordinance which will make Locust a one-way street. This idea is not concurred in by all of the people who have business houses on the street, but many believe that it would still further simplify the traffic problem.

ILLINOIS AUTO MEN BUY WESTCOTT AGENCY

Arrangements were completed last week, whereby the control of the United Motor Car Company was secured by W. B. Maulding, L. D. Wilkinson and W. N. Wilkinson, all of whom for the past five years have been connected with the automobile business in Southern Illinois.

The new owners will continue to represent the Westcott line and at present plan to continue to occupy the sales and service station at Leonard and Locust streets.

PASTOR OF CHURCH 48 YEARS

Minister, 75, Agrees to Continue as Long as Health Permits.

WABASH, Ind., Nov. 6.—Dr. Charles Little, aged 75, pastor of the Presbyterian Church here, completed the forty-eighth year of his pastorate Sunday, Oct. 31. Today he will deliver his forty-ninth annual sermon. In the congregation last Sunday were several persons who heard his first sermon here.

Dr. Little has tried to resign his pastorate several times, but the members of the church have refused to consider the resignation. His last attempt to resign was made two years ago. At that time the congregation made such a demonstration that he agreed to remain here for the remainder of his life and to continue as pastor as long as his health would permit.

Eight years after Dr. Little had taken over the pastorate the old church building was razed. Four years later a new building was dedicated. During his pastorate the church has grown from a membership of less than 100 to more than 500.

Dr. Little has held high rank in the State Synod and the General Assembly of the church, having been clerk of the State Synod for 20 years and moderator of the national body.

Dr. Little was born in Granville, O., Dec. 1, 1845. He was graduated from Marietta College before he entered the theological seminary. He is a member of the board of trustees of Western College at Oxford, O.

Extraordinary Sedan Value

PRESENT conditions make the appeal of this Lex-Sedan unusually strong.

This appeal is to those who want to save money; to those who want the newest style closed car; and to those who want guarantees against price reductions!

Clearer than ever before, people now realize that the only way to judge a price, be it lowered or raised, is by what you get for it. Let us show you that you will get more for your money in the Lex-Sedan.

We hope you challenge this statement. The closer you buy and the more you demand, the more we are anxious to demonstrate what represents the greatest closed car value on the market today.

Only Lexington can offer this unusual car.

Ten factories, from foundries to expert body builders, work as one company in the production of this Lex-Sedan. A vastly better car is thus possible, together with great manufacturing economies.

This Lex-Sedan was originated to meet the need for a finer type of closed car to replace the old-style, clumsy, top-heavy, extravagant kind.

It is a lighter car, easier handled, and decidedly economical of gas and tires. There is no excess weight and no overload for the motor.

Let us show you why it is good business to get this Lex-Sedan now—and next year you will be driving the leading style type of closed car.

We urge you to investigate this at once.

A Statement by Edgar Apperson

Pioneer Automobile Manufacturer and President of Apperson Bros.
Automobile Company

OVER a quarter of a century ago—in 1893 to be exact—when my brother, Elmer and I first started in the motor car business, we adopted as a basic principle the policy of building cars to market at fair prices.

APPERSON

As a result Apperson prices have never been inflated; are not now inflated; and never will be inflated.

Our prices always have been and always will be determined by the market cost of raw materials, plus the actual cost of labor and overhead with a fair margin added for manufacturing profit.

That this policy has been appreciated is evidenced by the greatly increased demand for our product.

You have probably noticed the majority of high grade motor car manufacturers have found it impossible to make any price reductions—in fact several have increased.

We guarantee the present Apperson prices until July 1st, 1921.

Judging from the material and labor market, there are no indications that they can be changed then.

HUGE PROFITS SEEN IN SHARK FISHING

Oil, Skin and Meat Said to Insure $12 From Each Eight-Foot Shark.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

HONOLULU, Hawaii, Oct. 16.—What the world does not know about sharks is more than it does know about these tigers of the sea. This is the opinion of experts, who declare that the shark is one of the few fish whose habits, traits and possibilities are almost a closed book. And for that reason, probably, the development of the shark fishing industry, which holds so much apparent promise, has been neglected in Hawaii and elsewhere.

During the war a local company, known as the Pacific Marine Products Corporation, was organized for the purpose of developing the shark fishing industry, but the firm is now closing its accounts, according to the president, due to the fact that it has been unable to hire enough fishermen to carry on the business.

Just how promising is the shark fishing industry may be computed from the fact that the average eight-foot shark is worth, at a minimum, $12. The president of the local company has drafted a table of income from an eight-foot shark as follows: Oil about two and one-half gallons, $2.50; skin, dried, about 15 pounds, $3; fins, about one and one-half pounds, $1.50; meat, about 350 pounds, $2.35; grease, about four pounds, $1.60, and enough left for the manufacturer of fertilizer to bring the grand total of $12. And this, he declares, is the absolute minimum likely to be obtained from an eight-foot shark.

Big Profit in Sharks.

As to catching sharks, a two weeks' trip should net anywhere from 100 to 200 sharks, which means that the income from such a trip should be between $1200 and $2000.

The way the fishermen themselves put it is that when they go hunting for other fish there are always thousands of sharks around to snatch the bait and spoil the regular fishing, but that when on a shark fishing hunt the tigers of the deep remain in parts unknown. Fishermen say that in the isles westward of Kauai a red rag tied to the end of a line is enough bait to catch sharks, and that at other times just a rope over the side with a hook attached will bring in the greedy monsters.

The lack of knowledge of sharks is the one drawback at present to the success of the industry. The market for shark products is as big and broad as the world itself, and there is no trouble disposing of those caught.

Considering the shark first of all as a food, fish experts say that shark meat is exceptionally delectable, and one of these experts is H. L. Kelly, formerly with the United States Bureau of Fisheries and now connected with the Hawaiian Fish and Game Commission. Kelly while working for the Government conducted exhibits along the Pacific Coast serving shark meat and other sea food to club women of the leading cities. Naturally, the women were not warned in advance, the fish being labeled No. 1 and No. 2.

After the women had tasted the samples, almost invariably the percentage of votes cast for No. 1 fish was larger than that cast for No. 2. No. 1 fish was shark, while No. 2 was the usual halibut.

30 Ways to Serve Shark Meat.

The Bureau of Fisheries of the Department of Commerce has issued 30 recipes for serving shark meat. The meat of the shark is white, is slightly gelatinous and resembles halibut. Fresh shark meat has a peculiar odor which may be removed by salting before boiling. But it is the salted, smoked or kippered shark meat that is particularly appetizing.

After the meat come the shark fins particularly craved by Orientals. There is always a market for this product, not only here in Honolulu, but in China and Japan, where they are regarded as a delicacy.

Another by-product of the shark is the oil. This is obtained from the liver, which is chopped into small pieces and put in a round bottom water-jacketed kettle and subjected to live steam. The oil is then drawn off and the residue subjected to a second cooking, which produces a lower grade of oil. The principal uses of shark oil is for currying or filling leather, illuminating, paint making, lubricating compounds, tempering, soap making, wire drawing and cordage manufacture. In some localities shark liver oil is used for medicinal purposes in place of cod liver oil.

The fourth product is the skin, which is held to be an excellent substitute for leather. The enormous demand for leather during the war forced tanners throughout the world to look for new sources of supply in so far as raw material is concerned.

Despite the fact that in European countries shark skin had been used for many purposes, it remained for the tanners of the United States to discover an economical and quick method of tanning. The leather produced is soft and pliable and has a wearing quality that is said to surpass that of any other type of leather.

The last by-product from the shark is fertilizer from the cartilege matter and residue. This process is carried out here at Honolulu, and the fertilizer disposed of to local companies that handle it.

A NEW NAME THAT IS OLD

The name Dunlop is new as the name of an American-built automobile tire but in almost every other sense it is the oldest name in pneumatic tire history.

Do you know, that the first successful pneumatic tire was invented by a man named John Boyd Dunlop, thirty-two years ago; that he was the real founder of the pneumatic tire industry, that the history of Dunlop tires extends from that time to the present through the successive developments of tricycle and bicycle, as well as automobile, motor truck and motorcycle?

The original idea for a pneumatic tire was first advanced in 1845, but it was unappreciated, neglected and forgotten. Dunlop, forty-three years later, knew nothing of it, and his tire, which was his own original invention, led to the immediate establishment of the pneumatic tire industry.

Dunlop made that first tire for his boy's tricycle because he thought the vehicle's solid tires were too hard both on the ground and on the rider. He quickly realized what his invention would mean to the bicycle—but its real significance was far greater, as we know who have witnessed the spectacular progress of the automobile—then undreamed of.

The way in which the Dunlop idea and the Dunlop tire have circled the globe parallels in rapidity and intense interest the extraordinary industrial achievements of the builders of the American automotive industry.

Few Americans realize just what the growth of this Dunlop institution has been. Over in England there is, near Birmingham, a great tire-building city which in size and output ranks among the large tire-building plants of the world.

The Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation of America, therefore, enters upon its business as an American corporation in a somewhat unusual way—in that it has an established name to uphold and a clear title to its place in one of America's greatest industries—which Dunlop has in fact served from the beginning by the invention, improvement and production of the pneumatic tire.

Dunlop has also started operations on a scale equal to the task of turning out over 12,000 tires a day, with land and resources for great expansion and with all the major assets of adequate facilities, modern machines proven methods and ample finances.

The Dunlop factories are rapidly nearing completion and will be producing tires soon after the first of the New Year. They will be Dunlop Cord Tires—the best we can build and worthy of their name—the new name in America that is old in tire history.

Dunlop distribution will be through retail channels. It will be national in scope and effected as rapidly as is consistent with the best interests of tire users and Dunlop dealers. We will welcome the opportunity to discuss distribution plans with retail tire merchants who are interested.

LEAGUE TO TAKE UP MANNER OF USING BLOCKADE

Question of Peculiar Interest to U. S. Will Be Considered at Assembly Meeting in Geneva.

SECRETARY-GENERAL GIVES HIS IDEAS

Drummond Believes Enforcement of Economic Pressure Should Be Decentralized.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—One of the important questions to be considered by the Assembly of the League of Nations at its first meeting, beginning Nov. 15, at Geneva, will be the preparations required to enable the league to use, if necessity arises, the weapon of international economic and financial blockade contemplated in Article XVI of the covenant.

A memorandum by Sir Eric Drummond, the Secretary-General, now being distributed to the members of the league, and received here by the League to Enforce Peace shows that this question will come before the Assembly, on the recommendation of the League Council in the form of a proposal to appoint a body to be known as the International Blockade Commission. The Secretary-General suggests that this commission consist of representatives nominated by the countries entitled to permanent membership in the Council, with the addition of representatives of four other members of the league selected by the Assembly, for the purpose of studying the problem and settling the general plan of action, the organization of the more permanent machinery required and the principles on which it should work.

Of Interest to America.

This question is of peculiar interest to the United States, because one of the first problems such a commission would consider promises to be the method of rendering a blockade effective against states which are not members of the league. In a report adopted by the Council of the league at the San Sebastian meeting in August, M. Tittoni, the Italian representative, stated: "It should be clear that the states members of the League of Nations who declare the blockade have the right to render it effective against all states, including those who are not members of the league, but they have not the right to force the states who do not form part of the league to declare the blockade themselves."

Article XVI provides that, should any member of the league resort to war in disregard of its covenants, all the other members shall "undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations * * * * and the prevention of all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking state and the nationals of any other state, whether a member of the league or not," and that the members shall mutually support one another in the financial and economic measures taken under this article.

"The use of this weapon," says the Secretary-General, "is in certain circumstances a specific duty imposed by article 16. This duty cannot be effectively carried out without great loss of time and efficiency unless there has been considerable previous preparations before the time at which action is required.

"Situations might well arise in which the knowledge that the weapon is ready for use would have a very salutary effect. Many people think that the league is founded more upon good intentions than upon a cool consideration of the stern realities of international trouble.

"Would Enforce Their Will."

"It is, therefore, desirable on general grounds that while the first meetings of the council and the assembly should give the world the positive hope of removing misunderstanding and promoting international co-operation, they should also show quite clearly that the members of the league as a whole are determined, if necessity arises, to enforce their will by effective action on any particular country which in the circumstances contemplated by the covenant defies the general verdict of the world."

The memorandum calls attention to one important difference between the two forms of pressure (economic and military) which the league may use, as follows: "Where a member of the league resorts to war in disregard of specified covenants, all other members of the league are, by the covenant itself, specifically obliged to apply the economic weapon. They are not similarly obliged to use their military or naval forces. In the latter class, the article (16) only provides that it shall be the duty of the council in such cases to recommend to the several governments concerned what effective military or naval forces they shall severally contribute."

The Secretary-General is of the opinion that the article clearly contemplates that, so far as possible, "the responsibility for enforcing economic pressure shall be decentralized, i. e., a primary responsibility rests upon each Government to take action so far as its own nationals and own national machinery are concerned, arrangements being made by each of them separately and not by a single international authority."

At the same time, he concludes that a central co-ordinating authority will be required if the weapon of economic pressure is to be effectively used.

PISTON RING TALKS NO. 5—

Long ago it was demonstrated that loss of compression does not occur through the lock of joints of a piston ring, but through openings between the ring and cylinder wall. The Tell-Tale Piston Ring was developed to eliminate this trouble. Its serrated, easy wearing surface quickly wears itself into a compression-tight fit against the cylinder wall that results in greater power and reduced gas consumption.

Buick

Increasing Buick Sales Facilities

The high place Buick holds in the minds of motor car buyers is accurately reflected in the consistent demand for Buick Cars.

People continue to buy Buicks, because they realize that they are a standardized and stabilized motor car value, rather than a product of price.

We have felt for some time the need of broadening our retail sales facilities in St. Louis to serve the ever-increasing numbers of Buick purchasers.

And to meet this need we have, effective November 1st, inaugurated our own Retail Sales Department.

This new sales arrangement, while a part of our organization, is separate and distinct from our wholesale distribution of Buick Cars. It will not disturb the selling arrangements of the present retail distributors whose names are given below, nor of others whose names will be announced shortly.

Mr. A. V. Morrow—who is well known to many St. Louisans as an experienced and capable motor car salesman, will, as retail sales manager, be in full charge of this department. Assisting Mr. Morrow there will be a corps of efficient salesmen whose efforts will be directed toward maintaining Buick sales facilities sufficient to meet sales demand.

U. S. PHONE SYSTEM BETTER THAN ENGLAND'S, BRITON SAYS

Sir William Noble Tells London Meeting About American Automatic Telephones.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Sir William Noble, Engineer-in-Chief of the British Postoffice, which also controls the telephones, says the American telephone system is superior to that of Great Britain. Sir William, who has just returned from a visit to the United States, told the Society of Arts the general introduction of automatic telephones is probably the main feature in the American scheme of progress.

He found telephone experts in the cities he visited practically unanimous that full automatic working is the only certain method of insuring the service demanded by the public.

The popularity of the telephone in America, he considered, is due first to the flat rate, secondly to monthly accounts, and thirdly to party line service and the policy of fostering residential lines.

INDIANS TO CONVENE IN ST. LOUIS NOV. 15

Thousands Expected Here From All Parts of U. S. for Five-Day Meeting.

The 1920 convention of the Society of American Indians will be held in St. Louis Nov. 15 to 20. Thousands of Americans who are of Indian blood are expected to attend from all parts of the United States. The fact that this city is recognized as one of the largest fur markets in the world, and that the business here was founded by Indians, was one of the reasons for holding the convention in St. Louis.

In 1762 Mazent, Laclede & Co. obtained from the Governor of Louisiana a grant with the exclusive right to trade with the Indians in the Missouri district for a period of eight years. In 1764 the Indians began to come into St. Louis and fur trading became a flourishing enterprise.

An extensive program has been arranged for the convention and is, in brief:

Monday, Nov. 15.—Registration during the day and get-together meeting. In evening, addresses of welcome for St. Louis by Mayor Kiel and presidents of civic and commercial organizations.

Tuesday, Nov. 16: Address of President Thomas L. Sloan. Reports of officers and committees. Appointment of committees. Discussions and addresses by parties interested in Indian affairs. Tuesday evening: Show by Indians from reservations, Indian dances, etc.

Wednesday, Nov. 17: Addresses by old Indian chiefs. Night program: Special program for ex-students of Carlisle University, featuring Brigadier-General Pratt, former superintendent.

Thursday, Nov. 18: Addresses, unfinished business, election of officers. Night program: Take part in show at Coliseum under auspices of Board of Religious Organizations; a Woman's Exposition interested in promoting Americanization work.

Friday, Nov. 19: Morning visit to Mounds in Illinois, under auspices of St. Louis convention, Publicity and Tourist Bureau, conducted by Dr. H. M. Whelpley, editor of Meyer Bros.' Druggist, and noted anthropologist and past president of Missouri Historical Society. Dr. Whelpley also has one of the most complete collections of Indian relics in the world and will place the relics on display for the delegates and visitors to the convention.

Saturday, Nov. 20: New business and adjournment. The officers of the association are: Thomas L. Sloan, Washington, D. C., president; George H. Beaulieu, White Earth, Minn.; George E. Tinker, Pawhuska, Ok.; James Irving, Woodstock, Minn., and C. D. Carter, Washington, D. C., vice presidents; Thomas G. Bishop, Washington, D. C., secretary-treasurer, and Rev. Sherman Coolidge of Denver, chairman of advisory board. The headquarters of the society are located in Washington, D. C.

M. W. Wolfe of Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. has been appointed chairman of the local membership committee and urges that all citizens of St. Louis who are of Indian blood, join the society. Associate membership may be taken out by those interested in the Indians. Associate members pay annual dues of $2.50 and receive the official monthly magazine of the society. Those who desire to join the society should get in touch with Mr. Wolfe at 1236 Hodiamont avenue.

EPIGRAMS ON HOW TO LIVE

Hygienic Expert Thinks Persons will Live 1000 Years.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 6.—"I believe the time will come when we shall live to be 1000," declared Dr. Charlotte de Golliere Davenport, mother of 11 sons, one of whom is 75 years old, speaking before the Omaha Theosophical Society. Dr. Davenport is 95, and for years has been a lecturer on personal hygiene.

Fitting youthful actions with wise epigrams, the doctor kept the audience in a riot of applause. "They talk about Socialism, Communism and other "isms," when what they really need is good food. Bald-headed men wouldn't be bald if they had good food. There would be no revolutions if people were washed and scrubbed and taken care of," she declared.

"Women don't educate the men right. A woman came to me the other day and said she wanted her bust developed. I asked her why she didn't have her mind developed. She said, 'I can make a better go of it with a good bust than a good mind.' "

LEGION FESTIVAL INDORSED

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce has indorsed the American Legion festival to be held at the Coliseum from Saturday, Dec. 6, to Friday, the 12th, to raise funds for the further development of the Legion.

A communication from Paul V. Bunn, general secretary of the chamber, to American Legion officials says: "In view of the worthy object for which this festival is to be held and of the fact that the American Legion is back of it, the board unanimously recommended that it would indorse the project and recommend to its members that they extend to it their fullest possible patronage. We hope that it will be a huge success and that all citizens will join in making it so."

Ex-Crown Prince Makes Horseshoes.

WIERENGEN, Holland, Nov. 6.—The former German Crown Prince Frederick has taken up a new trade. He now spends much of his spare time making horseshoes at the village blacksmith shop. While his father saws wood at Doorn, the son hammers out iron on the forge.

HUDSON SUPER SIX

Why Hudson Stands First Among All Fine Cars

It needs no admission from Hudson that there are great cars, other than the Super-Six, holding and deserving the confidence of owners.

Fine materials, careful supervision and accurate workmanship are no monopoly with Hudson. And wherever practiced the sure reward is a loyal following with faith in that car.

Yet how account for the differential which is so overwhelmingly evident in the preference for Hudson?

We know that ever since the Super-Six was brought out, nearly five years ago, it has outsold all other fine cars.

We know that Hudson owners who ever change to ownership of another make are few. We know that thousands of Hudson owners have found such abiding contentment in their cars, year after year, that they are not even curious to investigate another car.

These circumstances point unmistakably to Hudson's possession of a monopoly that men hold vital. That is the Super-Six motor. No other maker can use it. Hudson invented and controls it.

When we consider that the Super-Six motor accounts for all Hudson's unmatched records for endurance, speed and acceleration, as well as for freedom from service troubles which is so distinctive a feature of Hudson ownership, is it surprising that it has proved too great an advantage for any other car to overcome, in winning this great following among fine cars, and holding their unwavering faith?

Builder of Eads Bridge One of Seven Persons Elected to the American Hall of Fame

Samuel Langhorne Clemens (Mark Twain) Also Among Six Men Honored—Alice Freeman Palmer Seventh Woman to Win Place.

From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.

THE Senate of New York University announces the report of the official canvass of ballots received from the electors of the Hall of Fame in the fifth quinquennial election just closed, the management of which, in the absence of the director, Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, Ambassador to Italy, has been in the hands of Mrs. William Vanamee, acting director.

The electorate consists of 96 men and six women. Ballots were received from 95 men and six women, as follows: University and college presidents, 27; professors of history and historians, 18; scientists, 11; authors and editors, 14; high public officials and men and women of affairs, 19; actual or former Justices, national or state, 12. (One elector cast a blank ballot.)

It was possible this year to elect to the Hall of Fame for Great Americans 20 men, and to the Hall of Fame for Great American Women, 10 women, 68 votes, or two-thirds of the 101 votes cast, were required to elect a name unless that name bore the marking M. J. F. (more justly famous), in which case 51 votes, or a majority of the votes cast, were required to elect a name. The result of the canvass showed that of the 177 names of men voted for, the following six were chosen, each of which bore the M. J. F. marking, and, therefore, required only 51 votes:

NAME.	Class.	Votes Received.
Samuel Langhorne Clemens	I—Authors	72
James Buchanan Eads	VI—Engineers, Architects	51
Patrick Henry	XII—Rulers, Statesmen	57
William Thomas Green Morton	VII—Physicians, Surgeons	72
Augustus Saint-Gaudens	XIV—Musicians, Painters, Sculptors, etc.	67
Roger Williams	III—Preachers, Theologians	66

Of the 27 names of women voted for, the name of one woman was chosen for the Hall of Fame for Great American Women, that name bearing the M. J. F. marking and, therefore, requiring only 51 votes, the successful candidate being:

NAME.	Class.	Votes. Received.
Alice Freeman Palmer	Educator	53

Prior to this election 50 men and six women had been elected to the Hall of Fame, the total now being 56 men and seven women. The sixth quinquennial election will take place in 1925. In the interim the Hall of Fame idea will be developed in various ways along educational lines, to the end of stimulating interest in American history and inculcating reverence for our great dead.

In May, 1921, there will be a public unveiling at the Hall of Fame on University Heights of 26 bronze tablets bearing the names of men and women who have been elected in this and previous elections, 37 tablets having already been unveiled.

The following detailed report is presented of the votes received by classes for names which received as many as 10 votes each, the votes for other names being summarized as "scattering:"

Following are brief views of the careers of the personages honored in the election:

Mark Twain.

Samuel Langhorne Clemens, American humorist, is more generally known by his pesudonym, Mark Twain. He was born in Florida, Mo., Nov. 30, 1835, and died in Redding, Conn., April 21, 1910. After an exceedingly brief schooling he was apprenticed to a printer in 1848 and worked at this trade in Philadelphia, New York and in the West.

While he was a pilot on the Mississippi River he was greatly taken with the cry of the leadsman in taking soundings, and when he began writing he signed himself 'Mark Twain," the cry of the leadsman being "By the mark, twain."

After leaving the Mississippi River he tried mining in Nevada. In 1862 he edited a newspaper in Virginia City, but soon tired of that and went to San Francisco, where he was a newspaper reporter. Upon his return from a trip to the Sandwich Islands in 1866 he commenced his lecturing career and after his first tour he made a trip to the Mediterranean, Egypt and Palestine. For a time he edited a newspaper in Buffalo, but tired of this and settled in Hartford, Conn. He suffered financial reverses by the failure of a publishing house which he founded in 1884. In 1907 Oxford University conferred on him the degree of Litt. D.

Mark Twain's work is characteristically American and his comic force and fertility offset all defects, and in his writings there is sound morality as well as clear-eyed shrewdness and hard, common sense. In 'Huckelberry Finn" and "Tom Sawyer," conceded to be his best books, he appears as a master of humor and pathetic suggestion, with a great creative genius.

Among his better-known works are: "The Innocents Abroad," "Roughing

Wife of Missouri's Next Governor Domestic to Point of Doing Her Own Housework

"WE ARE JUST PLAIN FOLKS," SAYS MRS. ARTHUR HYDE

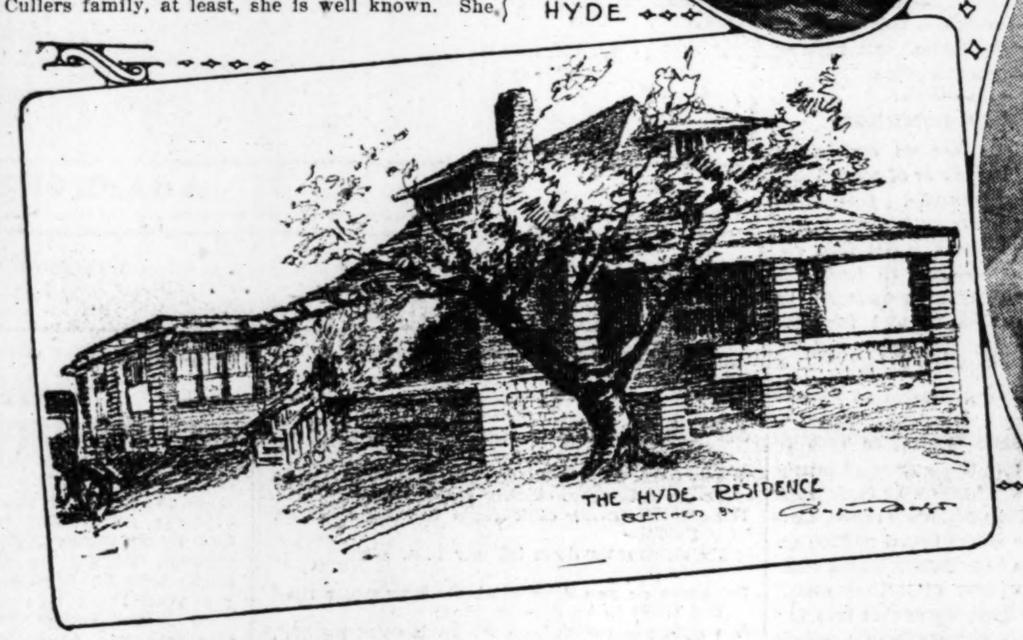
Cards, She Describes as Her Chief Diversion Though She Never Plays for Prizes, While Her Activities Outside Her Own Establishment Are Confined to the P. E. O., the W. C. T. U, and the Methodist Church—Has One Child, a Young Daughter.

As for Her New Role, She Has Not Given It a Thought Except to Think How Hard It Is Going to Be to Fill the Place of Mrs. Gardner "Who Is So Handsome and So Charming"—Hopes to Keep Up Informality She Has Always Known.

By Marguerite Martyn.

MRS. ARTHUR M HYDE

MISSOURI went to the out-of-the-way little town of Trenton for her new Governor (having just made the trip to Trenton—in the language of the day—I'll say it's out of the way.) The new Governor, a year ago, was practically unknown to politics and polticians. But while every city, town, crossroads, every district with a schoolhouse large enough for a meeting place, has met and listened within the year to Arthur M. Hyde—and heeded what he said, too, it seems—his wife has continued in the obscurity which recently was his and remains to be introduced for the first time to people to whom suddenly she has become First Lady of the State.



THE HYDE RESIDENCE

That is, she must be introduced to all outside Grundy and Mercer counties, where, as one of the Cullers family, at least, she is well known. She was born and reared upon a farm in Mercer County, where her grandfather settled when he came from Virginia 67 years ago. Sunny Slope, the old homestead, still is owned by her father, C. H. Cullers, who grew wealthy raising stock and lending money to his neighbors. He is now retired and, with his wife, makes his home with the children, Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. E. G. Kathan, wife of a well-to-do druggist, and Dr. C. H. Cullers, a successful surgeon, all of whom now reside in Trenton.

Hortense Cullers (Mrs. Hyde) never "went away to school," as many prosperous farmers' daughters do, but received all her education in the country schoolhouse and lived continuously on the farm until her marriage, Oct. 19, 1904.

How She Met Mr. Hyde.

It was while on a visit to an aunt in Princeton that she met Arthur Hyde. He asked her to go to a dance. Thereafter they "went together," as she expresses it, a year and then were married.

"We didn't need a long time in which to get acquainted, because our families had known each other so well," she explains.

That wasn't the first time she had seen him, either. When she was 12, on a visit to this aunt, one day some girls called her to a window, saying: "There goes Art Hyde up the street. My! doesn't he look sporty?" He was just 16 then, at home on vacation from Ann Arbor, and she agreed he did look "sporty" in white duck trousers such as she had never seen before.

After their marriage they lived in Princeton, where, eight years later, their only child was born, in a house just over the hill from her father's birthplace. Five years ago they moved to the larger town of Trenton (which has between 7000 and 8000 population and does more business than Chillicothe, as anybody in Trenton will tell you) and Mr. Hyde became district agent for an automobile company and continued a law practice and loan business, which altogether, I understand, has caused him to become the largest income tax payer in the county.

The Hyde home is a substantial frame dwelling of eight rooms, situated picturesquely at the corner of two of Trenton's hillside avenues, which a native described as being laid out all slaunchwise and catawampus, as nearly as I could get it.

Their Home in Trenton.

The house is rather bungalow in character with broad veranda extending to a vine-hung pergola at the side, at the other end of which is to be glimpsed a sunroom, curtained in flowered chintz. The hall, living room and dining room all open broadly into one another, producing an effect of space and much polished hardwood in paneling, beams and cabinets, an impression of raspberry velour hangings, deep blue velvet rugs and upholstery, golden brown walls, deep, easy chairs, shaded lamps, not too many ornaments, only a few books, all giving an air of quiet comfort, harmony and even richness, without ostentation.

She Does Her Own Housework.

When I lifted the old-fashioned door knocker, the wife of the Governor-elect appeared at the door in a dust cap and bungalow apron. Following in her wake was a robust, smock-frocked little girl—8 years old and named Caroline, I was to learn—whose cheeks were for the moment perilously stuffed with a first bite taken out of a slice of bread spread with what looked like apple butter.

Mrs. Hyde glanced at the clock, which registered 12:30. Compared with my timepiece it was an hour slow. Trenton time, do you suppose? And I was an hour early for my appointment. She hadn't finished her morning's housework, she said. She had got behind on account of so many ratification meetings and people dropping in. So I agreed to depart and return later. Afterward she told me she did all her own work, even her ironing and sewing, employing help only in the laundry and to help clean once a week.

At the later appointment Mrs. Hyde was attired in an afternoon gown of brown tricolette, with slippers to match, pearl earrings and diamond bar pin. The brown becomingly repeated the color of her eyes and hair and set off an unusually clear complexion and red lips. She is plump and let fall that she is four years younger than her husband, who is 43.

Hasn't Thought of Her New Role.

She spoke rapidly, volubly, her words almost tripping over one another, her diction interspersed with many pure Missourianisms. She was protesting that I should find nothing dramatic or arresting or even interesting to write about one who had led so simple an existence.

"My role for a long time has been just to keep the home fire burning, to keep the little girl in school and accommodate my mode of living to the requirements of this campaign, which has kept my husband absent all except about 30 days in a whole year."

"But your new role as mistress of the executive mansion?" I queried.

"I haven't taken time to think of my own role, so concerned have I been with hoping and praying for my husband's success, both before he was elected and now that he has this big job ahead of him. Whatever is expected of me, I am afraid I cannot be very different than I have been. I cannot be a leader, or one to make precedents. I am one who would always rather follow. I have never been to the State capital, but I have a friend who has lived in Jefferson City, and she has promised to come and tell me something of the amenities expected of a Governor's wife. To follow precedent in these things, that is all I have asked of myself thus far."

GERHARD SISTERS PORTRAITS

"Now that women are taking an active part in politics and governmental affairs, is it not possible that new duties may devolve upon you that have not confronted your predecessors?" I suggested.

"Why, no, I hadn't thought of anything like that," she replied, looking somewhat puzzled. "I've only thought how hard it is going to be for me to fill Mrs. Gardner's place, who is so handsome and so charming."

She gave an account, then, at my inquiry, of interests she has had outside her home.

"I am a member of the P. E. O. and frequently entertain the chapter and the B. I. L.'s, or 'brothers-in-law' of the order. Then I belong to the D. A. R.. We both are eligible to the G. A. R. and intend to be initiated soon. We both belong to the Methodist Church. Mr. Hyde has had a Bible class and I am active in the aid society and missionary work. I have a letter today from one of the beneficiaries of two missionary scholarships which I am supporting, one in India and one in China. During the war I did Red Cross work, mostly sewing here in my home. And then I belong to the W. C. T. U. I have been interested in that work a long time."

Has Never Done Any Suffrage Work.

Asked if she had done any suffrage work, she replied:

"No. I used to be opposed to suffrage until I came to think that by that means women might do something to further prohibition. We got prohibition without suffrage, so now I look upon voting as a duty which women ought not to neglect."

She has been interested in following the campaign in the newspapers, she said, but has made only one trip with her husband, that being to the Kansas City convention. On the League of Nations she agrees entirely with the view of her husband, and I could look that up. As to her social program, she said:

"I hope people will enjoy the hospitality of the mansion, but I have absolutely no plans of entertainment."

It was recalled that the Folk administration was notable for the musical atmosphere that prevailed and that during the Major term the mansion was much given over to dancing.

"I haven't any musical or artistic or literary accomplishments," she responded, "although I like

Catalogue of the Republican Campaign Promises Presents Staggering Job for Harding

Democratic Office Holder Says "Department for the Production of Alibis" Will Be the Thing Most Needed.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, NOV. 6.

SURVEYING the staggering list of Republican campaign promises, each of which the American electorate, in whole or in formidable part, will expect to see translated into performance, one is inclined to agree with the remark of a Democratic office holder the day after the election, that "what the Republican party will need most in the next four years is a Department for the Production of Alibis."

"The spokesmen of the party just swept into power by unprecedented majorities have promised to reduce taxes and lower the cost of living, and at the same time to restore Liberty bonds to par value; they have promised to labor a fair wage for a fair day's work; they have promised to capital an industrial reconstruction; they have promised to the farmers a protective tariff and encouragement in the formation of cooperative selling societies; they have promised to the former service men substantial recognition of their sacrifices as soon as the nation's finances will permit; they have promised a budget system of national finance and rigid economy in the Government departments.

"These are but a few of the pledges—the public pledges—by virtue of which the American people, smarting under the real or fancied grievances engendered under the Wilson administration, gave a mandate to the Republicans to run both the executive and legislative branches of the Government for the next four years.

"I'm going to sit in the bleachers," said the Federal official quoted above, as he heaved a sigh of relief, "and I'm going to be more charitable toward the performers than the people on the Hill (meaning the Republican Senators) have been toward the President. As an American I wish Harding good luck.

"Alibi Producer" Needed.

"But," he added, "they're going to need a producer of alibis. I put in my bid now for the moving-picture rights to the drama of the Republican Party Redeeming Its Pledges. Particularly, I want a picture of Harding killing 'the' league to satisfy Borah, and going into 'a' league to satisfy Root and Taft."

The program of the Republican party, as set forth in the pronouncements of its leaders, contains some pledge or promise to virtually every racial or other group in American society. Only one notable exception comes to mind: Harding made no specific pledge to do anything for the cause of Irish independence. Some promise, or at least, some vaguely phrased, general "commitment," like that to the soldiers, came almost invariably from the front porch as group after group demanded attention to its special desires, but the candidate consistently avoided saying anything that might later arise to plague him on the Irish question.

The big task immediately confronting President-elect Harding is to redeem the pledge which Senators Borah and Johnson say he has given, in his public addresses, to "scrap" the League of Nations, and to make good his other promise to take the United States into some sort of an association of nations. In his speech of acceptance, he referred to "the Republican committal for an association of nations"; at Marion on Aug. 28, he favored "putting teeth" into the Hague tribunal; in the same speech he proposed salvaging whatever was good in the league if such a course was necessary to stabilize the peace of Europe; at Marion, on Sept. 5, he said he had no desire to fling aside all that was good in the covenant of Versailles; at Marion, on Sept. 6, he said that amendment was possible, and was vastly better than reservations; at Marion, on Sept. 21, he opposed entering any fraternity founded on force; at Baltimore, on Sept. 27, he said he was without a single constructive program for an association of nations; at Des Moines, on Oct. 7, he said: "It is not interpretation, but rejection that I am seeking."

League Not Sole Difficulty.

Obviously, President-elect Harding will not have easy going in the task of satisfying the conflicting expectations aroused by these various statements on the league.

Leaving the league wholly out of the calculation, a stupendous job confronts him. Even to catalogue and summarize in a few lines each of the promises made by Harding and his lieutenants in the campaign would require several columns of type. Let us limit the commitments to the more important made by Harding himself in his public speeches and see what is the program of the Republican party.

Harding is pledged:

To give the country "formal and effective peace so quickly as a Republican Congress can pass its declaration for a Republican executive to sign." (Acceptance speech, July 22.) That is, he is pledged to make a separate peace with Germany.

To make a complete change in the foreign policies of the country. (Marion, Aug. 16.)

To protect the lives and possessions of American citizens in Mexico. To this end we must have "a plain and neighborly understanding, merely an understanding" with Mexico. (Acceptance speech.)

To take up adjustment of our loans to the allies and put them in a form "where we shall know exactly what to expect and how and when to expect it." (Louisville, Oct. 14.)

To select a "cabinet of the highest capacity * * * in whose councils the Vice President shall be asked to participate."

To work for the reduction of armaments. "I can hear in the call of conscience an insistent voice for largely reduced armaments throughout the world." (Acceptance speech.)

To insist upon an expert survey of the executive departments with a view to reorganization. (Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 28.)

To attack the high cost of government. "We promise that relief which will attend the halting of waste and extravagance and the renewal of the practice of public economy." (Acceptance speech.)

Promises Tax Reduction.

To remove from "the patient shoulders of the American" public as much as possible of the tax burden caused by governmental waste and extravagance. (Statement of Oct. 23.)

To prevent profiteering. "We promise the prevention of unreasonable profits." (Acceptance speech.)

To punish profiteers. "We challenge profiteering with all the moral force and legal powers of the Government and people." (Acceptance speech.)

To introduce the budget system into the national Government. (Marion, Sept. 11.)

To reorganize the State Department and the Department of Commerce, abolishing secret diplomacy as far as possible and doing away with the conflict between the two departments in the matter of trade promotion. (Louisville, Oct. 14.)

To encourage the farmers "to join in co-operative association to reap the just measure of reward merited by arduous toil." (Acceptance speech.)

To open up new fields for foreign trade. With this object in view, to demand the extension of American banking facilities and give free passage to American ships through the Panama Canal. The latter means the repeal of the Panama Canal Tolls Act. (St. Louis, Oct. 16.)

To see that Americans "shall be guaranteed equal privileges and opportunities with the citizens of

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Dead-Head Railroad Passengers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

There has been some discussion in this column regarding free railroad passes. Permit me to contribute a word or two in this discussion.

The issuance of free passes, both to employes and shippers of freight, has been one of the great evils of our system of railroad transportation. It is probably the biggest contributing factor to the present run-down and inadequate railroad facilities.

Commercial agents solicited patronage by distributing free passes. Large shippers of freight were favored with annual passes over several systems. While anyone who looked as if he might have a kitchen stove to ship came in for a pass.

Political travelers going to conventions had no worries about traveling expenses. Of course, these favors were reciprocated.

In issuing passes to employes, the railroads require increased period of service in issuing longer passes. A pass over the employing road is awarded employes of a month. At the end of a year or two the employe can secure a transcontinental pass for relatives including dependent (?) sixth cousins. After several years' service annual passes may be acquired. This enables hundreds of employes to spend week-ends in Chicago, Kansas City or intermediate stations.

"Of course, these passes cost the company only the paper on which they are printed," wrote one defender of free passage. "The train would run any way and what is the difference if one more or one less rides?"

Wow! Wow! Some argument! Does everybody give up? Or, what have you to say after that hot shot?

Just this: Let me show you one rather extreme case of the evil of the "dead-head" passenger: During the war travel was curtailed. The public was asked to refrain from unnecessary travel. The public complied nobly, except the "dead-head" traveler.

The extreme case: During the war July 4 occurred next to Sunday, Saturday or Monday, I don't know which, and it doesn't matter, except that it provided an opportunity for "dead-heads" to take a little trip. On July 4, as well as Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas there are numerous family reunions and there is always increased "legitimate" travel. The night of July 3 cash-paying passengers were obliged to stand the entire distance from St. Louis to Chicago, while "dead-head" travelers filled the Pullman sleepers and crowded the chair cars. The "local" cars were even more crowded than the "through" coaches. Several extra coaches were added and a second section of the train organized, but it was impossible to meet the demand. No doubt, every road experienced the same condition and felt the result in the immense increase in operation expenses. But it only cost the road the paper on which the passes were printed. Help! No wonder they call us "dead-heads" when one of our number exhibits such wonderful powers of reason.

A DEAD-HEAD.

Sham Prohibition.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The recent items in your paper regarding the numbers of drunks received at city hospital is a dead giveaway and a disgrace to the name of prohibition. Yet we have Pussyfoot Johnson in foreign countries and plenty of pussyfoots in this country telling of the great things prohibition is doing for this country. In the old days of freedom we would pay 15 cents for a drink of real whisky, out of that the Government, State and city derived a revenue. Now just two people are benefited, the maker and the seller, and the price is 50 cents or more for a drink of unknown concoction.

No doubt if left to a vote of the people the country would still vote dry. So if prohibition is so popular why not have real prohibition? Why not make those so-called enforcement agents earn their money by apprehending the sellers of those various poisonous concoctions?

Japan and California.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The Japanese-American articles now flooding the press would be more convincing if they would explain why Japan is in such a rage; also the relation between the League of Nations and the California State Government. Japan reserves the right to restrict to certain classes land ownership and so do European countries. The proposed California land law does not affect land now owned by her people, nor does it contemplate wholesale deportation.

From an American standpoint the people of California who welcomed the Japanese a decade or more ago certainly are competent to judge their desirability as land owners; due to difference in number a neighborhood feud could not affect the decision. Furthermore, many of the voters are foreign-born, so what is unfair? English, French and Americans are told if they don't like conditions in a foreign land to go home and they buy land subject to its laws. If Japan would find out what France said to Uncle Sam about not wanting Americans in France after the war, she would stop acting like a child.

THE GOOD ROADS BATTLE.

Returns from the State are so meager that the fate of all the constitutional amendments except one are in doubt. The success of the good roads bond proposal is assured. There is a strong probability in the returns received that the new Constitution amendment has succeeded. It had a majority of about 67,000 in the returns at this writing.

These two amendments are the most important. The authorization of bonds for hard roads provides for the starting of the one thing most necessary to the development of the State. The amendment providing the processes for the making of a new Constitution offers opportunity for the people of the State to obtain all the benefits embodied in the other proposals within a reasonable time.

The battle for good roads is not won with the adoption of the proposal authorizing the issue of bonds to the amount of $60,000,000. The State Legislature must be dealt with. The amendment merely authorizes the Legislature to issue the bonds and appropriate the money. It specifies hard-surfaced roads, but does not restrict the action of the Legislature with regard to the selection of roads or the manner in which the money shall be expended.

We hope that in providing for the issue of bonds the coming Republican Legislature will not yield to the yap influence and scatter the funds in futile distributions to the counties, in order to make political capital at a sacrifice of public welfare, as its Democratic predecessor did. We hope that the Legislature will provide for a great system of hard-surfaced highways as the foundation for similar connecting roads in all the counties. We hope the money will be expended under the direction of competent highway engineers, in accordance with judicious plans and economical methods.

We hope for this devoutly-to-be-wished consummation of the campaign of education and the campaign of election. But there is no assurance of it. The lobbyist and peanut politician, the grafter and the yap are still abroad, prepared to use their deadly influence against good judgment and progressive action. The result depends upon the capacity and character of the majority of the legislators. Our hope for better things from the next Legislature than the late Legislature gave Missouri is strengthened by the expectation that the Republican Legislature, having just come into power through an extraordinary vote of confidence, will be responsive to the public will and considerate of the public welfare. The old, seasoned obstructors of wisdom and progress will be out of the way.

The people, however, must make their will known and felt. They must be prepared to fight for their own welfare. As a means to this end—to the organized expression of the popular will—we urge the continuation of the Federation of Good Roads Organizations for the purpose of advising with the State Legislature and supporting sound measures. Every organization, every citizen, interested in assuring a system of good roads for Missouri, should join in the effort to realize the best results of the good roads bond fight at the polls. Organized effort to secure the fruits of the good roads victory in the election is imperatively necessary.

Mr. Bryan agrees with other eminent financiers that the United States ought to cancel the $10,000,000,000 debt Europe owes us. It is possible, to be sure, that Mr. Harding might do worse than make the Nebraskan Secretary of the Treasury, but we doubt it.

GOLF AS A PROFESSION.

One of our eminent golfers has just signed a three-year contract with a New York club at $20,000 a year. In the agreement, too, are privileges of speculative value which may substantially swell the honorarium. But disregarding such privileges and perquisites, the pay check itself thrusts its recipient into the elect.

This expert golfer's services command 25 per cent more annually than the combined official earnings of New York's two Senators. His stipend is twice that which the Empire State pays its Governor or Attorney-General. Indeed, with the exception of the movie stars, Babe Ruth, the resourceful lawyers who pilot predacious corporations through the legal shoals and a handful of doctors of impressive mien, this golfer is about the highest-priced specialist on the late Manhattan cocktail's native heath.

That skill in propelling, beguiling and eventually depositing a bit of gutta percha in the receptacle made and provided should command such princely requital may possibly be an indictment of our frivolous times. Yet the "golf professional" must needs have qualities other than technical supremacy. Tact that can listen interestedly to the garrulous vanities of the rejuvenated "seventies," firmness with bubbling youth, oriental poise in the presence of the vamp—yes, first and last, his accomplishments bulge out a capacious inventory. But that is not the point. The point is that, for all the boundless possibilities of the West, the East still offers opportunity to the diligent.

There is inviting room everywhere—on top.

Instead of terrific losses by the sale of surplus war supplies abroad the War Department explains that it has saved more than four billion dollars. But why did it delay this interesting contribution to this late hour? The poor Democrats could certainly have used one or two of those billions the last few months.

STATE ILLITERACY COMMISSIONS.

Arkansas has an Illiteracy Commission. That a State should require the services of officials of that sort is, of course, unfortunate. The very fact, however, that Arkansas has created such a body shows an alertness and energy in recognizing and meeting the need that will render it impossible for the condition long to survive.

Compulsory education laws, multiplied schools, better schools are of vital importance, but, after all, these are general measures, while combatting illiteracy is a patient work of detail. Census figures showing percentages of illiteracy are based on a classification of units in population. They are computed on a count of the units, the individuals, who confessed to the enumerators that they were unable to read or write, and the Census Bureau has the names of every one of those individuals.

So, in its greater war on illiteracy, Arkansas is going to obtain from the bureau the names of all these Arkansans who cannot read or write. It is going to provide special facilities for educating illiterate citizens more than 10 years of age. Then it is going into the slums of the towns and into the isolated homes of the back townships and see that these individuals avail themselves of such facilities. It hopes that after a reasonable period not a single person of normal mental grasp will remain without the ability to read and write.

Arkansas is showing the other states of the West and South how to do it. There are several that need Illiteracy Commissions.

The Russian Soviet Government has plans for a building 650 feet high, with revolving floors. And it has the squirrels to fill that cage, too.

WOOLEN MILLS IN THE WEST.

Secretary Mayes of the Marketing Bureau of the State Board of Agriculture has called attention to the anomalous condition in the woolen industry. There are millions of pounds in storage in Missouri, he says, but the blankets we buy are made in New England. We have no facilities for turning our wool into cloth or yarn. The whole wool-growing West, he declares, has surrendered to "Boston, the Wall Street of Wool," and, in consequence, is at the mercy of the East's dictation.

The remedy he proposes is simple. Missouri and the West must get into the business of manufacturing wool. He suggests that custom mills should be established here, such as are operated on the Atlantic coast, to which the farmer can send his wool to be converted into thread, or some other product, on a mutually satisfactory basis. There should also be scouring mills throughout the entire corn belt where wool can be graded and put into salable form. The Western wool grower, apparently, is in much the same position as the Southern cotton planter as regards having little or nothing to say about the price of his product. But the South is gradually becoming a cotton manufacturing territory. Its development in that line has admittedly been slow, but the economic advantages of the plan are widely recognized and widely agitated, until today there is scarcely a community of any size in the South but dreams of cotton mills.

There is no good reason, of course, why the West that grows wool should not manufacture wool. New England has no vested rights in the West's wool or the South's cotton. As a matter of fact, there is a lot of waste motion in the superfluous freightage of the present arrangement. And such waste motion is peculiarly intolerable in view of our inadequate transportation and high freight rates. It is not in the interest of wool growers solely that the West manufacture its wool. It is to the interest of us all that this logical evolutionary step be taken, because we should all profit from it.

MARINE MAECENASES IN DOMINICA.

The Inter-American Magazine has an article on "Dominican Intellectual Life," which is of more than ordinary interest for several reasons. One such reason is its assurance that Dominica has an intellectual life. Most of the information about that republic gives the contrary impression. In fact, the editor of the magazine says truly in a foreword to the article that "Mexico touches us and the Dominican republic lies at our very front door, yet we are more ignorant regarding them—as to their very essence—than we are regarding countries as remote as Japan and Persia."

The accomplishments of dead Dominican men of letters are briefly reviewed and the names of nearly half a hundred persons who are continuing their work are given—historians and other serious writers, novelists and poets, in whom the island seems particularly rich. A reference is made to a certain Fabio Fiallo, who is described as "our poet of loftiest rank," some of whose "poems have been translated into foreign languages." Reference is also made to a certain Americo Lugo, "a solid, brilliant writer, who enjoys a merited fame beyond our borders." He has, it is said, "written admirable pages that are worthy of a place in the best anthology. In his book, 'In the Rough,' he treats of subjects of real importance in a masterly way. In one of his celebrated books, 'Chapters That Cervantes Overlooked,' there is a very interesting study upon the work of the illustrious Montalvo."

Happenings since the article was prepared lend special interest to these references. Fiallo and Lugo were two of the three Dominican authors arrested by the officers of our Marine Corps for utterances respecting the American occupation which, being reproduced now, do seem objectionable. Admiral Snowden, reviewing the sentence of courtmartial, ponderously remarked that the three might have been executed for their offense. Fiallo, "poet of loftiest rank," actually was sentenced to three years, though vigorous protests later forced his release.

The killing of 2250 so-called bandits by our troops in Dominica in five years is not the only phase of our policy there that needs inquiry.

How is it that these years of intimate relation to the island have not acquainted us with the fact that it has a literature and brought familiarity with that literature? Now is the psychological moment to put on the American market translations of Loftiest Poet Fiallo and of Lugo, who treats subjects of importance in a masterly way. They would have a sale compensating these writers in part for the injustice they have suffered.

An Authority on Scott.

"Are you fond of literature?" asked Mr. Bowdly.

"Passionately!" Miss Tubbs replied.

"Then you must admire Sir Walter Scott," he exclaimed with sudden animation. "Is not his 'Lady of the Lake' exquisite in its flowing grace and poetic imagery?"

"It is perfectly lovely!" she assented, clasping her hands in ecstasy. "I suppose I have read it a dozen times."

"And Scott's 'Marmion'," he went on, "and 'Peveril of the Peake'?"

"I just dote on them!" she said.

"And Scott's Emulsion?" he said hastily, a faint suspicion dawning upon him.

SIR LAUNCELOT AND THE CITY DAMSEL.

Apologies to George Ade.

ONCE there was a City Jane, who decided to set her Bonnet for one of those Handsome Birds who have Lots of Dough and tendencies to be Rid of it. On Pay Day she'd take her Roll to the drug store and purchase from the Obliging What's Yours about a Ton of Dope guaranteed to make Old Hens look like Sweet Sixteen. When the City Jane got through Dolling Up she made the Queen of Sheba look like This Way Out. She would apply War Paint and sprinkle Powder and in Two Hours looked like Money from Home. She was the Kind Bards Yelp about. She would Amble Forth in a Peek-a-boo waist and an 18-Buck pair of silk hose and other Classy Raiment. The Young Fellers and the Old Boys twisted their necks and Admired while the Hens Gasped and Sniffed. And when a Well-meaning Sky-Pilot Bawled her Out she knew she was a Success.

Now comes the Iowa Slicker. He got off the train and shook the Hay from his clothes and adjusted his Tie, which looked like a Bolshevik War Flag. He was liberally Doused with Woolworth Mary Garden. He wore a Lurid pair of Socks that were colored like a cross between a Barber Pole and a Convict's Uniform. His Iowa Pompadour was a little Awry, so he Spit on his Paws and smoothed down the Yellow Mop on his Cranium. His Sky-piece was several Lengths too small, but he tilted it to a Jaunty Angle over his Left Optic. Then he took an Admiring Slant at himself in a show window, said Hot Dawg and Sallied Forth to locate Auntie's Manor.

He soon passed the City Jane, who was Anchored on the corner, Passing the Time o' Day with the Bull on the Beat. She Piped the Slicker and Poked the Peeler in the ribs. "Get that, will you," she Chinned, "how can a Pelican like that live in this Jazz Age? Just Lamp them Socks! Say, I wouldn't be Hitched to a Poor Simp like that if I was 56 years old and he was my Last Chance." By this time the Simp had halted and had stretched his neck out of shape trying to Spot the top of a skyscraper. The Jane Siddled over, and, setting her 100 per cent Knock-'em-Kaflooey Peepers on him, inquired Was He Lost? The Hick came to Earth. He spun around, took one Peep at the Dame, murmured Mother Guide Your Wandering Boy and started to Bolt. Just then he Lamped a Rough Guy in a Striped Jersey giving the Jane the Come-On sign. The Hick turned a beautiful Red and Floated over to the Bum who gave him the Laugh. That Animated the Hick. The Tough Bird suddenly received an Expression of Love in the shape of a Pair of Fives. He stood Upright a moment and dreamed he was in Paradise, where a Flock of Angels played Zithers and pretty little birds flitted through the Ozone. Then he Pitched into the gutter while a Cop came up on the Gallop and rang for the Hurry-Up wagon to take him to the Hoose-Gow. Now comes the Old Stuff. The Hick lifted his Kelly while the Jane called him Her Hero. In Two Seconds he had her Telephone Number.

That's about All. Three weeks later the Knight of the Waving Alfalfa took his Bride, who wore a Natural Blush, back to the Castle in Podunk, and they lived Scrappily ever after.

BUSINESS VALUE OF THE LEAGUE.

From the Sioux City Journal.

THE league is the one hope of reducing armaments. That is admitted, directly or indirectly, by everyone. Every munitions maker is fighting the League of Nations. Every war profiteer is against the treaty. Nor is this all. Every enemy of the league is advocating some form of war-like activity. He is out for universal military training, or for a bigger navy, or for an overwhelming air fleet, or for "cleaning up Mexico," or for some similar or allied piece of war making or war preparations. The world groaned under competitive armaments for 40 years before the great war broke, and the increasing cost of those armaments was one of the contributing causes of the conflict. Armaments now are immeasurably more costly than before, yet no one nation can lay aside its weapons unless all do so in equal measure; and to join together for disarmament means the League of Nations. Finally, there is the direct financial interest in preventing war. The last great conflict touched us lightly, by comparison, with the rest of the world, yet it cost us more than $30,000,000,000. The next world war is sure to be more destructive than the last, and to involve the United States more deeply—and the only way suggested for preventing such a war is the League of Nations. We could belong to that league for 20 years without spending half of one year's interest on our war debt.

REBUILD COAL MINE TOWN.

From the Survey.

ONE of the interesting manifestations of the trend of contemporary industrial management is to be found at Kaska, Pa. The Alliance Coal Mining Co., which operates at this point in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields, has decided to rebuild the town. According to the Coal Age, better houses, stores and community buildings are in the course of construction. A new town created in conformity with contemporary ideals of town building is being substituted for the haphazard village which grew up about the mine. Living conveniences are being made available and in general the community is being improved. The coal company, it is said, has also extended aid to the churches. The very frank purpose of this enterprise has been to minimize existing dissatisfaction among the miners. No variety of welfare work ever settles fully any problem as persistent as human unrest. Nevertheless, many of the most troublesome conflicts between employers and workers are attributable to community conditions which might easily have been remedied. The purpose of the more progressive and sensitive management is to improve these conditions in order to narrow the range of conflict. This is entire gain.

THE THIRD INTERNATIONAL.

From the Republic.

WHETHER the Third International gains or loses diploamtic victories, it nearly always splits the socialists of other countries into its own allies and bitter enemies. Its latest triumph, a vote of 237 to 156, by the German Independent Socialist party in favor of adherence to it, divides German socialists into four groups. The Independent Right wing may have to join the majority group or remain powerless. The Left will gain a little by fusion with the Communists. What is the next move? The Government expects trouble, and has expelled Zinoviev and Losovsky, the emissaries from Moscow. The Left majority of the Independents is losing no time in making plans for an agreement with the Third International as to their part in the world revolution. The district leaders are being directed to prepare for a strike. The anti-Bolshevik minority prepares a campaign against Bolshevik methods by the "revolutionary" forces of other countries. Revolution pits itself against revolution.

Your Choice at

Garments from the house of L. B. Vogel, in our estimation the foremost creator and producer of the finest feminine apparel to be had in the United States if not the world.

$169

Original Paris models, from which L. B. Vogel received his many inspirations that resulted in these famous creations, are included in this most unusual offering.

Coats & Wraps to $895 Suits to $1075 Dresses & Gowns $475

This is a national as well as a local triumph. The savings we realized were enormous. Other stores the country over were privileged to secure these wonderful garments, but Garland's was the only store that had the fortitude to make so large a purchase and the result is that St. Louis women are the ones honored with the opportunity to select apparel such as worn by the women of fashion on Fifth Avenue and in the Bois in Paris.

The values are paramount. Garments such as these have never before been associated with a price anywhere near $169. It is almost unbelievable that exclusive garments and original Paris importations could ever be had at so low a price. This event gives the woman of moderate means an opportunity to buy the sort of apparel which only her more prosperous sisters are accustomed to wearing.

Several of the garments in this supreme event are duplicated in our regular stocks, which will not be reduced, as there is a constant demand for this high-grade apparel, and it cannot be produced today for less than our stock prices. Only the 150 pieces specially purchased will be on sale.

An insight as to the greatness of this sale can be gained by observing the following figures: the cost of labor alone on each garment averages $65; the embroidery work ranges from $25 to $45. Then the cost of materials, trimmings, linings, etc., must be figured. These items alone will reach a total far in excess of the sale price of the garment.

To describe this wonderful array of apparel would be a fruitless task. The variation is beyond the descriptive powers of the most imaginative mind. We assure you, however, that the collection is unique, extraordinary and comprehensive in Coats, Suits and Dresses. Nothing is missing that will interest the finest dressed women in the world.

LEAGUE FOR HARD OF HEARING ORGANIZED

Community Center for Deaf With Lip Reading Courses and Employment Bureau Planned.

The organization of the St. Louis League for the Hard of Hearing, the new local chapter of the American League for the Hard of Hearing, was effected last week. There were more than 20 charter members in attendance. The meeting was addressed by Dr. Harold Hays, president of the New York League, who outlined the plan and scope of work for the local chapter and spoke of the work planned in St. Louis.

The purpose of the league is to create a Community Center for people hard of hearing; to co-operate in all questions concerning the prevention of deafness; to establish an employment bureau where deaf persons who have acquired lip-reading may be placed in satisfactory positions; to secure club rooms where reading, checkers, chess and bridge can be indulged in; to invite ministers of various denominations to address the deaf members of this chapter on Sunday afternoons; to develop all activities that may tend to ameliorate the conditions of the deaf, to create a better social spirit and to co-operate in legislation, with the medical profession, with school authorities, with social service workers and all concerned in the uplift of the deaf.

Permanent clubrooms have been tendered the local chapter through the courtesy of the trustees of the Central Institute for the Deaf and are located at 900 South King's highway. A free evening class for instruction in lip reading has been organized under the leadership of Miss Lula Bruce, and will meet every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at the clubrooms. All hard-of-hearing and deaf persons who desire to avail themselves of this opportunity to study lip reading and better speech are invited to join this class.

The newly elected officers of the league are: J. M. Turley, president; Mrs. H. Broadbent, vice president; Miss Marian G. Scudder, secretary-treasurer.

All inquiries concerning the work of the local chapter may be addressed to the secretary-treasurer at the chapter headquarters, 900 South King's highway.

LAST OF SEMINOLES TO MOVE

Agree to Submit to Education in New Home in Everglades.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Nov. 6.—Led by their chief, Tony Tommy, the remaining largest single group of Seminole Indians soon will move from their old haunts in this part of the State to a new reservation on the Florida west coast, about 40 miles from Fort Myers.

The new home of the Seminoles will consist of a reservation of approximately 21,000 acres, completely fenced in and including a portion of the Everglades. Although part of the reservation is under water, the arable portion is sufficient to support the Indians with land to spare. The Seminoles in their new home will be provided with schools and they have agreed to submit to compulsory education laws.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

It," "The Gilded Age," "Life on the Mississippi," "A Yankee at the Court of King Arthur," "Puddin'-Head Wilson," "How to Tell a Story," "Autobiography of Mark Twain" and "The $30,000 Bequest."

He was one of the first seven members of the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

James Buchanan Eads.

James Buchanan Eads, American engineer, was born in Lawrenceburg, Ind., on May 23, 1824, and died in Nassau, New Providence, March 8, 1887. He began life as a clerk in a dry goods house in St. Louis, Mo., in 1833, and then secured work on a Mississippi steamboat in 1839. He early designed some useful boats for raising sunken steamers and in 1861, when called to the aid of the Federal Government, he constructed within 100 days eight ironclad steamers for use on the Mississippi and its tributaries. He afterward built a number of other ironclads and smaller boats which were of considerable service to the North. He built an arched bridge across the Mississippi at St. Louis in 1867-74. This bridge, which bears his name, was considered, at the time of its completion, one of the greatest engineering achievements in America. His works for improving the south pass of the Mississippi Delta was successfully completed in 1875-79; and his great plan for deepening the river as far as the mouth of the Ohio by piers or jetties has been demonstrated to be entirely practicable. A later suggestion for the construction of a ship-railway across the Isthmus of Tehauntepec attracted much attention. In 1884 he received the Albert Medal of the Society of Arts, being the first American citizen to whom this honor had been awarded.

Patrick Henry.

Patrick Henry, American orator and statesman, was born May 29, 1736, in Hanover County, Virginia, and died June 6, 1799, in Charlotte County, Virginia. Most of his youth was passed in hunting and enjoying frontier life, although his uncle managed to impart to him rudimentary knowledge of the classics and mathematics. He was married when only 18 years old.

He tried storekeeping and failed; he tried farming and failed, and then spent a few weeks in reading law, soon receiving a license. While he was practicing he assisted in keeping the tavern maintained by his father-in-law.

Henry's first speech, which singled him out as an orator, was made in 1763 in the famous "Parsons' Cause." In 1765 Henry was elected to the House of Burgesses and offered a series of resolutions, to the effect "That the General Assembly of this colony have the only, sole and extensive right to levy taxes." It was during a debate on these resolutions that he used his famous and often quoted sentence, "Caesar had his Brutus, Charles the First his

TWO MISSOURIANS CHOSEN FOR PLACES IN HALL OF FAME

Cromwell, and George the Third—" and then Henry, answering shouts of "treason" from other members of the House, calmly continued, "and George the Third may profit by their example. If this be treason, make the most of it."

Henry represented Virginia in the first Colonial Congress and on March 23, 1775, in a speech in St. John's Church, Richmond, Va., he used the phrase, "Give me liberty or give me death." In 1775-1776 Henry was Commander-in-Chief of the Virginia troops, but in the latter year he went back to the councils of the State, where he served until June 29, when he was elected Governor. As Governor he commissioned Col. George Rogers Clark for the expedition against the British in the Northwest. He served altogether four terms as Governor.

William Thomas Green Morton.

William Thomas Green Morton, an American dental surgeon and discoverer of the process of anesthesia which he called "Letheon," but is now known as ether, was born in Charlton, Mass., Aug. 19, 1819, and died in New York City on July 15, 1868. He established himself in the practice of dentistry in Boston and there, in March, 1844, he became a student of medicine in the office of Dr. Charles T. Jackson, a scientist.

Dr. Morton's patent for his anesthetic was granted in November, 1846, and Dr. Jackson claimed he had discovered etherization previous to the winter of 1841-42. Horace Wells, another of Dr. Jackson's pupils, also contested Dr. Morton's patent.

Dr. Morton communicated his knowledge of the new process to Dr. J. C. Warren and anesthesia or ether was made public through an operation performed by Dr. Warren at the Massachusetts General Hospital on Oct. 16, 1846. The French Academy of Sciences gave a Montyon prize of 2500 francs to Dr. Morton for the application of his discovery to surgical operations. Testimonials crediting the application of ether as an anesthetic were signed by the medical profession in Boston in 1856, in New York in 1858 and in Philadelphia in 1860.

Augustus Saint-Gaudens.

Augustus Saint-Gaudens, American sculptor, was born in Dublin, Ireland, on March 1, 1848, and died in Cornish, New Hampshire, on Aug. 1, 1907. He was brought to this country in his infancy and when 13 was apprenticed to learn cameo cutting. In 1867 he went to Paris, where he studied under the sculptor Jouffroy. In 1871 he produced his first figure, called "Hiawatha." Saint-Gaudens was a sculptor of originality and freshness who adopted the best standards of French taste and execution without being bound to tradition. He had a style at once polished and free.

Among his better known works are the President Lincoln statue in Lincoln Park, Chicago; the bas-relief, the "Adoration of the Cross by the Angels," the Shaw monument in Boston, and the Diana on top of the tower of Madison Square Garden

What perhaps is the most strikingly characteristic of all his ideal statues is the "Puritan" at Springfield, Mass. The Sherman equestrian statue at the southeastern entrance of Central Park is the last of a series of five in which the most notable is the remarkable statue of Farragut in Madison Square Park. He also took part in executing the Parnell Memorial Monument in 1901, designed several medals of presentation authorized by Congress and assisted John La Farge in decorating Trinity Church, Boston. He was one of the first seven members of the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Roger Williams.

Roger Williams, advocate of religious liberty and founder of Rhode Island, was born in Wales in 1607 and died in Providence, R. I., in March, 1684. When only a boy he attracted the attention of Sir Edward Coke, who became his patron and educated him in the Charter House School and later in Pembroke College, Cambridge University, which gave him a degree in 1626. He came to this country in 1631 after having come in contact and conflict with the ecclesiastical and civil authorities of England because of his opposition to the church ritual.

It was not long before he had trouble with the church and civil authorities in the new country and in October, 1636, he left Salem, Mass., to seek a refuge from the tyranny of his church brethren. With four companions he sought a place away from the persecution of the Massachusetts and Plymouth colonies and named the site he selected Providence because of "God's merciful providence to him in his distress." In 1638 he secured a large section of land from the Indians and he divided this equally among his followers.

After two years the colony of Rhode Island was governed by a minister and three elders, but in March, 1641, the Government was regularly organized. In March, 1644, he obtained a charter from the English crown which gave the towns of Portsmouth, Providence and Newport full power to rule themselves. In 1656 he opened Rhode Island to all seeking religious freedom and especially to those who were driven out of Boston. He was frequently called upon to pacify the Indians and to settle both ecclesiastical and civil disputes.

No portrait of him has come down to us and when, in 1872, the State of Rhode Island presented a statue of her founder to the nation, which now stands in the rotunda of the Capitol of Washington, the artist had to make the memorial from an ideal conception.

Alice Freeman Palmer.

Alice Freeman Palmer, American educator, was born in Colesville, New York, on Feb. 21, 1855, and died in Paris, France, Dec. 6, 1902. She was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1876, and the next year became a teacher of the classics and mathematics at Geneva Lake, Wis. From 1877 to 1879 she was principal of the high school at East Saginaw, Mich., becoming in the last mentioned year professor of history in Wellesley College. In 1882 she became president of that institution, which position she retained until her marriage, in 1887, to Prof. G. H. Palmer of Harvard University.

In 1892-95 she served as nonresident dean of the women's department of the University of Chicago. In 1882 she received the degree of Ph. D. from the University of Michigan and that of L. H. D. from Columbia in 1887.

INQUEST TO FOLLOW PRODUCTION OF WILL

Georgia Officials May Exhume Body; $300,000 Estate Involved.

By the Associated Press

FORT VALLEY, Ga., Nov. 6.—Solicitor-General Garrett and officials of the Superior Court arrived here today to hold an inquest to determine how Fred D. Shepard, wealthy peach grower of this place, who died several months ago, came to his death.

The order for the inquest and for disinterring the body, should the Coroner's jury deem this necessary, was signed yesterday by Judge Matthews of the Superior Court.

The Judge's action followed the offering for probate of a will which takes from Mrs. Shepard a large portion of the $300,000 at which the dead man's estate is valued.

Mrs. Shepard, who recently married Dr. F. E. Elmer of Jacksonville, Fla., took over the entire estate on the theory that Shepard had died intestate. Ten days ago, however, Mrs. George N. Crandall, sister of the dead man, received an anonymous letter containing a will declared to be properly signed and attested, in which the bulk of the estate was left to relatives of Shepard.

The will provides a bequest of $10,000 in cash and an annuity of $100 a month for life for Mrs. Shepard. The will was alleged to have been executed two weeks before Shepard died.

The Owners of Union Electric Preferred Stock Won't Worry About the Income of Their Shares.

Seven dollars a year cash income from each $100 invested — income that you can count on in good years and bad years alike—makes a very desirable investment at any time. It is especially desirable in times like the present, when the business world has to make wholesale readjustments and scaling down of prices and values.

The owners of Union Electric 7% preferred stock won't have to worry about the income from their shares during the period of readjustment. That income, under good management and strict State regulation, is protected by an earning margin more than ample to assure its regular payment during good years and bad years alike.

You can buy shares of this preferred stock at $100 a share for cash, $102 on a ten-monthly-payment plan, at Room 201 Union Electric Bldg., 12th and Locust streets, St. Louis, or at Union Electric's offices in Franklin, Jefferson, Perry, St. Louis and St. Charles counties.

We recommend it especially to small investors who want a 7 per cent income from their savings, with safety for their principal. Over 4000 St. Louis district men and women own shares of this stock—Missouri's safest 7% dividend payer—and the number is steadily increasing.

Let us send a salesman to explain this offer in detail. Just mail us your name and address on the lines below.

LOSING BETTORS ON ELECTIOIN PAYING OFF

Man to Give Harding Supporter a Wheelbarrow Ride This Afternoon.

The week before the election was the season when foolish wagers flourished. This is the season of paying up, and the losers languish.

Arnold Widmer, 1901A Park avenue, will settle a bet on Gov. Cox made last Monday with Joseph K. Linnemeyer, 2001 Geyer avenue, by giving him a wheelbarrow ride at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The equipage, followed by friends of both parties to the bet, will start from Mississippi and Geyer avenues, go west on Geyer to Jefferson avenue, north to Lafayette avenue, and back to Geyer. If Widener stops to rest he pays Linnemeyer $5, and if the wheelbarrow turns over he loses $3.

Charles Oescerle, 7335 Lavita avenue, Richmond Heights, rode around the Railway Exchange Building at noon yesterday in a wheelbarrow pushed by William S. Cordry, 1368 Union boulevard, followed by Justin T. Flint of 4230 Finney avenue, who was protected from the sun's rays by an umbrella held by Frank Rodman of Collins road and Morland place, St. Louis County. Cordry and Rodman bet on a Democratic administration during a Halloween party at Rodman's home. They lost.

Arthur Costello, 4051 Kossuth avenue, a former supporter of Gov. Cox, pushed a wheelbarrow bearing J. E. Williams, 5250 Terry avenue, from Fourth to Twelfth streets on Washington avenue yesterday afternoon, in payment of a wager made at a meeting of the Al-A-Mo Club, a young men's social organization, at 4129 Prairie avenue.

T. H. Bryne, sales manager of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., dressed as a clown, rode through the downtown streets at 4:30 p. m. in an automobile decorated for the occasion and driven by W. B. Denhard, technical expert of the company, who won a bet on Senator Harding.

Crimea Would Enter League.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Nov. 6.—Djafar Seidamet, speaker of the National Parliament of the Crimean Tartars, has submitted to President Pilsudski a copy of a memorandum addressed to the League of Nations, requesting the admission of the Crimea into the league as a Tartar State, under a Polish mandate. The memorandum opposes the continuation of any enforced connection of the Crimea with Russia.

NEXT GOVERNOR'S WIFE THOROUGHLY DOMESTIC IN ALL HER TASTES

all these things. Especially do I enjoy reading. The trouble is I don't get time even for that. I think if my husband were here he would describe me as a homemaker. We are a very sociable family. We like to have our friends drop in unannounced. We have many what we call backdoor neighbors, and groups of us gather in the evening for a game of cards. Card playing, I believe, is my pet diversion. Ought I to make that public? You will explain that we never play for gain. I go to card parties where there are prizes, but I never accept or give prizes. We belong to a club, the Owls, where we play 500, but only as recreation."

"I only wish," concluded Mrs. Hyde, "we may maintain this same informality at Jefferson City. I am sure we shall be able to with our own personal friends who visit us. And, indeed, I believe it will be impossible for us to be different than we have always been in our social relations with new friends as well as old. We are Missourians, born and bred. Those whom I shall come in contact with will be mostly Missourians, I presume. For my part, I believe there are not any better people anywhere."

Caroline dashed in at one period and seized her mother about the neck.

"Look at that grade card. Two E's and four S's. E is as high as you can get and S is next to E. No B's and no A's, see. And no tardies on there, either."

"She is daughter and son, both," remarked her mother, explaining the ebullience. "She takes after me. I was always a regular roustabout on the farm." Caroline was followed by "Frisky," who is black and white, has floppy ears and a bobbed tail. "Frisky" will accompany the rest of the family to Jefferson City.

A sister-in-law also came in carrying Charles Harold Cullers. Mrs. Hyde took the infant in her arms. "He is the only Cullers to carry on the name," she said, wistfully. "He was much needed," she told her sister-in-law.

If Gov. Hyde is detected doing something to reform the railroad schedules and improve the roads that lead to his old home town after he is in office. I am sure sundry reporters and many office-seekers making the pilgrimage these days will not accuse him of selfish interest. Trenton is four hours' ride from Kansas City, and the train stops 20 minutes at two different stations for lunch during the morning. It allows you to remain three hours in Trenton, with the prospect of waiting several hours at Gallatin for your Kansas City connection on the return trip or the alternative of driving 25 miles over clay roads to Chillicothe, where there is any amount of service to St. Louis or elsewhere.

PROMPTLY REPORT FAILURE TO RECEIVE ANSWERS.

APARTMENTS SALE FOR $300,000 CASH TONIC TO REALTY

Market Observers See in Past Week's Transactions a Definite Revival of Investment Demand.

RATES FOR MONEY STILL A HANDICAP

Several Sales of Property in Business District North of Washington Avenue Are Reported.

By Berry Moore.

November came in with a whirl of activity in real estate, notably in the investment and speculative lines, but including also heavy transactions in land for industrial purposes.

Apartments absorbed large speculative investments, transactions in property of this character being the salient feature of what is characterized by observers as a post-fall revival in realty.

According to Fred G. Zeibig of Cornet & Zeibig, there is accumulative demand for high-class investments in St. Louis real estate, both large and small, but activities are being curtailed by high rates for money, which must recede somewhat before the movement can go forward with full force, he declared.

The market during the last 10 months has been given largely to purhases of homes, due to the upward swing of rentals, while there has been comparatively little speculative or investment buying, Zeibig points out.

While the prevailing bank rate for money has ranged from 7 to 8 per cent, leading realty agencies have, as a rule, held it down for loans on real estate, to 6 per cent. There is little money to be had from the banks for speculative real estate loans, even at the high rates.

Week's Distinctive Feature.

The distinctive feature of the week was the purchase by the Clyde S. Fisher Realty Co. of the Yorkleigh Apartments, on the north side of West Pine boulevard, just east of King's highway. The consideration was $300,000.

This transaction is expected to have a tonic effect on the investment market, especially in view of the fact that it is the first major operation of the fall, and involves all cash. The sale was effected by Curry Giles of the Bottorff Realty Co., for the Minteer Realty Co., which erected the building several years ago.

The building comprises five stories and a finished full-sized basement, and is fireproof. It occupies a lot 121x200 feet. The annual rental aggregates $45,000

Another notable purchase was of the Lynton Apartments, 5793 McPherson avenue, by Samuel Bricker, through the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. The price paid was $120,000. The building has six apartments of five rooms and sun parlor each and occupies a lot 62x130 feet.

The Julius Haller Real Estate Co. effected the sale of 764-68 Clara avenue, a 12-family five-room apartment building of stone and brick construction; also 829 Clara avenue, and 5600 Cates avenue, comprising a nine-family apartment building, divided into suites of four, five and six rooms. The name of the purchaser was withheld. The consideration was $100,000.

The Haller Co. also announced the sale of a double four and five room flat at 3959-61 Lafayette avenue, to Dr. Gramlich.

Several Business District Sales.

In addition to the sale of 1718-28 Franklin avenue, through Papin & Trontrup to A. Tober and H. Schucart, for $50,000, there were sundry sales of business property in the district north of Washington avenue.

A. Roics purchased the buildings at 714-18 North Eleventh street, on a site 46x66 feet. Besides being adjacent to the wholesale district, being within a few blocks of the Rice-Stix establishment, and opposite the block in which is the terminal of the Illinois Traction System, thus being in what it is claimed will ultimately be the downtown loop for a greater rapid transit system for St. Louis.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. announces the sale of lot 38x54 feet on the east side of Fifteenth street, 64 feet south of Morgan street, for Maria L. Field to William A. Meletio, president of the Sewag Realty & Investment Co. Mrs. Field was represented by the Martin-Breitt Realty Co.

The ground was purchased as a site for an addition to the garage of the Meletio Auto Service Co., the present building of which fronts 161 feet on Morgan at Fifteenth street. Meletio recently purchased the southeast corner of Fifteenth and Morgan streets, 54x64 feet.

Another sale in the business district was that of a light manufacturing building, known as the Caxton, at 206-12 Olive street, to a client of the George H. Boeck Realty Co. This sale was negotiated by the Julius Haller Real Estate Co.

West Pine Boulevard Apartments Sold During Week for $300,000

THE most important development of the week in real estate was the purchase by the Clyde S. Fisher Realty Co. of the Yorkleigh Apartments at 4954 West Pine boulevard, for $300,000.

The building comprises 36 apartments alternating in two and three rooms, including kitchenette, and occupies a lot 121x120 feet. It is of fireproof construction. It is rented furnished, the equipment including electric stoves. The building is operated with a manager occupying quarters on the premises. It is replete with attractive features, including push button elevator service.

The sale was made by the Bottorff Realty Co. for the Menteer Realty Co., composed of J. F. Blackburn and J. U. Menteer, who erected the building, which has always been regarded as ultra exclusive.

CLOSE TO $50,000 PAID FOR KELLERMAN FLATS

Franklin Avenue Property Yielding $6500 per Year Sold for the Papin Estate.

A. Tober and H. Schucart have purchased through Papin & Tontrup, the "Kellerman flats," 1718-28 Franklin avenue. The property embraces one three-story building and five two-story buildings on the front, and six two-story flats in the rear. The lot is 115x144 feet. The buildings which were erected several years ago by the late Theophile Papin, are good revenue producers. The sale was made for the heirs of the Theophile Papin estate. The rental amounts to about $6500 a year.

While the sale price was not given out, it is understaood to have been close to $50,000.

REALTY EXCHANGE EXPECTED TO PASS MEMBERSHIP GOAL SHORTLY

The St. Louis Real Estate Exchange is expected to exceed within the next 10 days the 1000 new members for which it has for some time been conducting a drive.

"We propose to increase the efficiency of the exchange along with the increase of its membership and thus render greater service in maintaining property values, fair, adequate and just municipal, State and national legislation, and protection from encroachments," said Joseph A. Hannauer, president of the organization, yesterday.

The exchange membership dues are: Active, $30 per year; active associate, $15; associate, $10. The iniation fee of $50 has been raised during the year. The officers serve without compensation, the only salaried persons being the assistant secretary and clerical staff.

WEBSTER GROVES HOME AMONG WEEK'S SALES BY DICKMANN

The Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co. announces the sale of 517 Selma avenue, Webster Groves, an eight-room home on lot 200x510 feet, to Henry Stark.

This company also effected the sale of the five-room bungalow at 4038 Humphrey street, to Mrs. Adeline D. Blumeyer, and the seven-room residence at 5075 Wells avenue, for John M. Hanenkamp, to Emil F. Richter.

COLLUM PAYS $20,000 FOR RESIDENCE ON BARTMER AVENUE

Michael Collum of the Collum Mercantile Co. has bought the White Rock 11-room residence at the northeast corner of Bartmer and Goodfellow avenues, owned by Mrs. Margaret Penn, for $20,000. The sale was promoted by Ben M. Lowenstein. The lot is 81x60 feet.

Lowenstein also effected a number of other notable sales.

Four Soldiers Held in Liquor Theft.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 6.—Five men, a Deputy Sheriff of Baltimore County and four soldiers were taken to the county jail today on warrants charging them with holding up and robbing in connection with the stealing of $40,000 worth of whisky from a fishing schooner on Back River.

WEATHER AIDS HARD ROAD BUILDING IN MADISON COUNTY

Two Bridges in Silver Creek Bottom Will Be Finished in Coming Week.

Pleasant weather is permitting good progress to be made upon the construction of hard roads in Madison County, and, according to W. E. Howden, County Superintendent of Highways, 101 miles will be finished with the present contracts. This area is all country road, outside of incorporated cities and towns, and the paving is brick or concrete.

The number of miles each township has constructed is as follows: Edwardsville, 18; Helvetia, 16; Chouteau, 10; Saline, 10; Nameoki, 9; Hamel, 9; Jarvis, 8; Collinsville, 7; St. Jacob, 7; Olive, 6, and Wood River, 3.

Twelve townships have constructed no hard roads. In the work which will be finished during the coming week are two bridges on the National Trail, one 500 feet long and the other 250 feet. They are 20 feet wide and carry the highway over the low places in the Sliver Creek bottom, which in the past were the the despair of motorists bound to St. Louis from Indianapolis and points east. Many sections on the National Trail which have been blocked by construction work will be opened to public travel within two or three weeks.

OUTLOOK FOR BUILDING DISCUSSED BY BARNETT

Co-operation by Labor, Materials Men and Money Interests Essential to Revival, He Says.

"A great many manufacturers and property owners have inquired when we thought building costs would be lowered, and whether they should go ahead with projected buildings on the present cost basis or wait for a reduction in price. I believe that in the spring there may be a slight reduction. The conditions which might bring about a reduction in building cost are a lessening of demand for space, a reduction in wages of labor and a reduction in the price of building materials.

"The shortage in building space, resulting from the slowdown of commercial and industrial construction during the war, and also the shortage of housing space, is unlikely to be improved by new building. One of the best means for a readjustment along these lines would be improvements in manufacturing plants and housing in what is called the blighted districts which exist in all cities. In these districts are many buildings, which, on account of their untenable state, remain ugly, dangerous and unprofitable. If these abandoned structures were reconstructed into habitable buildings, a great deal of the shortage would be supplied in an economical manner.

"We have a striking example of what can be done in this line in the apartments erected for the Crunden-Martin Manufacturing Co. at Third and Cedar streets. There vacant property has been turned into a beautiful apartment house, which was entirely rented one week after completion, and there is a waiting list. Similar localities would supply sites and material for new manufacturing plants of various characters, and a good return could be made on money thus invested.

"As to the hope of reduction in building cost due to lowering of wages paid to labor, it does not appear probable that the laboring man will be content to accept a material reduction. Organized labor can materially help a resumption in building by adopting a scale of wages that will remain in force for at least a year, thus justifying capital in putting money into building enterprises.

"The main hope for resumption in building depends on reduction of the cost of materials, the price of which is far in excess of the advance paid by the building manufacturers to labor. There has been a material reduction in cost in some lines of materials within the last few months, but there should be further revision downward before investors will be keen to take up enterprises of this character. With proper co-operation between labor, manufacturers of building materials and financial interests, 1921 should prove the greatest building era this country has ever seen."

THREE LEASES TAKEN ON SPACE IN LUCAS AVENUE BUILDING

The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. has been named agent for the seven-story building at the southwest corner of Eighth street and Lucas avenue, and reports the closing of three leases of space in it. One was to Eichenberg & Sons for the first floor and basement, another of the fourth floor to the Harris-Adler Cap Co., and the seventh floor to Abraham Rosenberg.

FARMERS FIND EVILS IN CO-OPERATIVE PLAN

Mid-West Committee Analyzes Good and Bad Points in Western Systems.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—No very strong, permanent or extensive co-operative marketing organization is likely to be built up unless economic necessity forces a great number of farmers into it, a committee representing midwest farm bureau federations reported today to the Farmers' Marketing Committee after an investigation of co-operative organizations on the Pacific Coast. The investigation was undertaken to find whether the Pacific Coast system could be adapted to the co-operative marketing of grain and other midwest farm products.

In a report the committee analyzes the benefits and disadvantages of the various forms of organizations used by the Pacific Coast fruit and provision men. The organizations cannot fix prices, the report says, and several of the Western co-operative associations are "at the present time constrained to accept prices below their calculated costs of production," which "indicates that they have not secured through their organization any immunity from fundamental economic laws."

The organizations, the report says, "simply are efficient agencies to get the best prices that the consuming market affords."

What Grain Growers Might Do.

Present conditions and future prospects of grain prices would seem to indicate, the review adds, that grain growers may be ready for such a collective movement. To be successful, however, producers over a large area must consolidate for their common interests. To finance the movement the members must be bound by a regular contract to deliver their product to it over a reasonable period of time, the committee says. Expressing frank doubts as to the legal standing of such contracts, and citing certain unfavorable opinions in Pacific Coast courts, the report adds, "such contracts, even if not fully enforceable at law, will give the association somewhat greater security than it would otherwise enjoy, and will be morally binding or enforced by local public sentiment in a majority of cases. How far the courts will go in support of them will doubtless depend largely on the policies and practices which the association sought to carry out through the powers conferred by this contract."

If the proposed organization is perfected, settlement on a pooling basis will be necessary, the committee says. "As a means of averaging the results of the joint action of all producers and of distributing the benefits of the organization to all its members."

A striking feature of the Western associations is the use of existing trade agencies to a very large extent, the report says.

"The chief concern," it says, "seems to have been to eliminate the shipping point speculator and to retain such control of distribution as to prevent undesirable speculation in their commodities by central market wholesalers."

Of the results obtained by the Western organizations, the committee says:

"The favorable results secured by Pacific Coast co-operative associations are the results of a combination of better mearchandising methods and of the price levels brought about by general war and post-war conditions. The leaders of the movement admit that, in common with all other business interests, they have difficulties ahead during the impending period of downward price revision. They recognize that the prices of the last years have stimulated production of land enormously, and have tended to advance the capitalization of land and other forms of fixed capital.

Need of Strong Association.

"We believe heartily that in such periods of economic difficulty that a strong association of producers is even more imperative than in periods of high prices, when even individual methods will produce remunerative returns. * * *

"However, any attempt to create and use a monopoly power for securing a specially favorable economic position for its members is as pernicious in a farmers' organization as in the case of the so-called trusts, to whose monopolistic activities we have so properly objected in the past.

"Frankly, we feel that some of the Western co-operatives occupy a position on this point which is economically sound and socially right. Others we think do not, and the State court in Oregon and the Federal Government in California have already taken steps to modify their procedure."

Would Open Exchanges.

Request that the Federal Trade Commission and the Attorney General or other public authority be called upon to take necessary steps to open grain exchanges of the country to membership of co-operative companies unless the exchanges act themselves, was made in a resolution adopted at an executive session of the marketing committee. The resolution follows:

"Whereas the principal grain exchanges of the United States bar co-operative companies that distribute their profits in proportion with the volume of business handled from participating in the buying and selling of farm products; and whereas the same prevents producers from collectively selling their own products on the markets of the country, thereby creating a monopoly which is not in harmony with the spirit of American institutions

"Therefore, be it resolved, that we call upon the Federal Trade Commission, the Attorney General or other public authority to take such steps as may be necessary to open said markets to the membership of co-operative companies, unless the grain exchanges shall voluntarily do the same at once."

WOMEN ELECTED TO ALL OFFICES IN OREGON VILLAGE

Organized Campaign Under Indictment of Inefficiency of men, and Five Won at Polls.

By the Associated Press.

YONCALLA, Ore., Nov. 6.—Feminism captured the city of Yoncalla, in Tuesday's election. An entire municipal ticket of women was chosen. Men opponents were defeated for all the offices. Those elected were: Mayor, Mrs. Mary Burt; members of Council, Mrs. Bernice Wilson, Mrs. Jennie D. Laswell, Mrs. Nettie Hannan and Mrs. Edith B. Thompson.

Under a general indictment of inefficiency, the women organized a campaign against the men officeholders and carried it on so quietly that their opponents did not realize what was taking place until the votes were counted. Yoncalla has a population of about 700.

Although her name was not on the ballot, Mrs. Grace B. Lampshire was elected Mayor of Burns, Ore., at Tuesday's election, her name being written in. She had not announced her candidacy for the office, and [illegible] first knowledge that she was being considered for it came when she was notified of her election. She has been prominent in civic affairs here.

Burns is the county seat of Harney County. It has a population of about 500.

100,000 LETTERS APPEAL FOR GIFTS FOR NEAR EAST ORPHANS

Thanksgiving-Christmas Relief Campaign Among St. Louisans Is Got Under Way Early.

One hundred thousand Thanksgiving-Christmas letters are being mailed out to citizens of St. Louis by the Near East Relief office, 1423 Chemical building, which will make an appeal for gifts for the benefit of the destitute orphans of Armenia, Syria, Palestine and other countries of the Near East. They are being sent out early to connect up the two holidays and avoid the Christmas rush of mails.

The letter compares conditions of children in America with those of stricken Armenia, where even to be able to eat and have life sustained is a priceless gift. It is the intention, however, of the Near East Relief to endeavor to provide some extra comfort to mark the coming of the Christmas season. Givers are to be asked to mail checks to W. W. Smith, treasurer for the Eastern Missouri District, 1423 Chemical building.

Pledge cards for the "adoption" of orphans, givers to support the orphan for a year, also will be inclosed for the benefit of those who wish to make a Christmas gift in that way. Several thousand Thanksgiving-Christmas offering pledge cards also will be given out at a booth to be maintained by the organization at the Woman's Exposition at the Coliseum Nov. 15 to 20.

AMERICANS KILLED WHEN MEXICANS HELD UP AUTO

Two Men Lose Lives in Attempt to Get Payroll, but Bandits Got only Auto Chains.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The recent murder of two Americans, Arthur L. Mosely of Bay City, Tex., and Gus Salazar, a naturalized citizen, in the Tampico oil fields, was the result of an attempt by bandits to hold up the pay car of an American company, according to advices from Tampico today. A Mexican employe of the company was fatally wounded.

This was the first bandit raid in that region since the overthrow of Carranza, according to officials. The three men were taking the payroll to the oil fields in an automobile when they were stopped by seven armed men. Mosely was killed in the car and Salazar as he was getting out. The Mexican was dragged from the machine and shot. The robbers took a bag containing auto skid chains which they mistook for the payroll, leaving the money behind.

It does what its name implies—regulates and tones up the system. It helps overcome the bad effects of the late molt and hastens the growth of the pullets. Result—both old and young will begin laying sooner and keep steadily at it. To get lots of eggs, give "Pratts" a trial—at our risk.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

W. C. Y.—Make your application for the medal through your legion post.

ILLINOIS.—Advertise, watch the advertising, or get in touch with the foreign department of the Chamber of Commerce, in order to procure such a position.

E. S.—To tan the rabbit skin, stretch it tightly and smoothly on a board, with the hair side down, and tack it down on the edges. Scrape off the loose flesh and fat with a blunt knife and work in chalk freely with plenty of hard rubbing. When the chalk begins to powder and fall off, remove the skin from the board and rub in a good deal of powdered alum. Wrap the skin up closely and keep it in a dry place for a few days.

INTEREST of P.-D.—The Mutt and Jeff cartoons are "very" little larger than the original. Fox drawings are eight or ten inches square. Any convenient margin should be left around the original drawing, for the title, directions, etc. The title may be written in pencil, ink or anything. The drawings should preferably be sent flat. You may secure books on drawing at the book stores. John Vanderpool's "The Human Figure," is very good.

HOUSEWIFE.—The brass to be cleaned must be freed thoroughly of grease, caked dirt and grime. Wash it with strong ammonia suds, rinse and dry. Then rub it with vinegar and salt, or with oxalic acid. Wash immediately after the rubbing, and polish with tripoli and sweet oil. Unless the acid is washed off the article will tarnish quickly. The oil polishing gives a deep, rich, yellow luster, good for about six months. Sometimes powdered rotten stone does better than tripoli. Rub the brass with a dry cloth or leather until there is no trace of oil.

KING.—The following is a powder for the removal of fleas from dogs: 4 av. ounces naphthalene; 12 av. ounces starch. Reduce this to a fine powder. A few grains of lampblack added will impart a light gray color, and if it is desired a few drops of oil of pennyroyal or eucalyptus may be added to disguise the naphthalene odor. Rub the powder into the skin and let it remain a day or two, when it can be removed by combing or giving the dog a bath, to which some infusion of quassia or quassia chips has been added.

ED HALSMAN.—According to officials of the United States Treasury, the amount of paper currency destroyed or permanently lost is negligible; the Treasury cannot know certainly that the currency will not be presented at some time for redemption, therefore the dollars for which the certificates are, in effect, "warehouse receipts," are held in the vaults. Informal estimates have been made that only about one-eighth to one-fourth of 1 per cent of the paper currency issued permanently disappears. The sum in reserve is not increased when a new note is issued to take place of an old one.

R. C. W.—St. Louis was the capital of Upper Louisiana, the first Governor being St. Ange de Bellerive, a Frenchman, who took the post in 1765. In 1770 this territory came under Spanish rule, Don Pedro Piernas being the first Spanish Governor to assume authority in St. Louis. In 1803 the Province of Louisiana was ceded to the United States, when Maj. Amos Stoddard was appointed Governor of Upper Louisiana, and took formal possession of the new post at St. Louis. The first session of the General Assembly of the State of Missouri met in the Missouri Hotel in St. Louis on Sept. 18, 1820. At the time the State was admitted into the Union, 1820, the capitol was moved to St. Charles, where it remained until 1826, when it was removed to Jefferson City. The act of the Legislature fixing the seat of government at St. Charles was passed on Nov. 28, 1820.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

S. J. H.—Such a marriage would be legal.

MALONEY.—All children born in this country are citizens of the United States.

E. P. H.—The wife cannot draw out the money deposited in the bank by her deceased husband, in his name only. It goes to the administrator.

BESSIE C.—Under the circumstances your present marriage is illegal and can be annulled by a suit in the Circuit Court, stating the facts.

L. K. W.—A decree of total divorce for the plaintiff, with the ruling that the defendant cannot marry again is not unconstitutional. If the court had jurisdiction of the parties it could make such an order.

WORRIED READER.—A man convicted of burglary and larceny, and a former convict, can take his case to the United States Supreme Court if the State Supreme Court will not give him a new trial, provided there is a question arising in the case under the Constitution of the United States. The habitual criminal law of Missouri has not been declared unconstitutional. Finding stolen property in a person's possession would be evidence, and if unexplained might be enough to convict. The Supreme Court has not ruled that this would not be sufficient evidence in any case.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

RED HOT.—Both voltage and amperage are necessary to cause death, as it is the combination, and not either one which causes the death. There must be a proportional amperage to the voltage.

CONSTANT READER.—The examination of your urine would be made free of charge at Room 9 of the Municipal Courts Building, but you could not get medicine at the city hospital unless you were a patient. As you are not able to have a physician at home, and cannot go to a clinic, we would advise your going to the city hospital.

MRS. H. C.—If the diagnosis of tuberculosis has been positively made and confirmed by bacteriological examination, you are, no doubt, still tubercular, although your gain in weight and improvement is very encouraging. Do not neglect giving yourself every care and attention, stay under a physician's care, or if you are not able to consult one, go to a tuberculosis clinic. Your throat trouble may also be tubercular.

X. Y. Z.—These small white particles which appear under the flesh are known as milia. In adults it is often, in fact always, necessary to open the lesion, evacuate its contents, and destroy by touching the interior of the sac with some caustic such as a carbolic solution or silver nitrate. A very satisfactory method is to treat the evacuated sac with the electric needle. It is questionable if treatment of this condition can be satisfactorily and effectively done by the patient.

In sad but loving memory of our dear mother, Augusta Rohlfing, who departed this life Nov. 9, 1918:

Two years ago God, in His infinite mercy, called our angel mother to that beautiful land, the far away home of the soul. Although, at present, no monument marks the grave where is she is laid, she has left one which the wealth of money cannot purchase. No matter how thick were the thorns that encompassed her, she had comforting words to utter to the weary and broken-hearted, her smiling countenance shall never be forgotten, as God has gently folded her hands to rest in sweet peace.
Sadly missed by THE FAMILY.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving remembrance of our dear father, son, brother and brother-in-law, William F. Dickneite, who passed away Nov. 9, 1918.

The loss of the one we loved so well.
And while he lies in a peaceful sleep,
His memory we shall always keep.
Sadly missed by his DAUGHTER, MOTHER AND SISTER AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM. (c)

In loving memory of Thomas W. Fogarty, who died one year ago, Nov. 9, 1919:

We never will be happy till we meet in heaven.
Again may his soul rest in peace.
Sadly missed by his

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Sergt. Elbert L. Smith, Company H, 354th Infantry, Eighty-ninth Division, who died Nov. 6, 1918, of wounds received in action:

And as his nation's flag he bravely bore,
Just so God gives us strength our sorrow to bear.
Will never be forgotten by MOTHER, BROTHER, SISTER AND AUNT.

In sad but loving memory of dear mother, Mrs. S. Morgan, who departed this life four years ago, Nov. 4, 1916.
Dearest mother, how we miss you,
Since from earth you passed away,
Sad our hearts, but sweet the memory
As we think of you each day.
We miss your cheerful, smiling face,
We miss you everywhere;
Our house is no more what it used to be
Since dear mother is not there.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Katharina Fritzsche, who departed this life two years ago, Nov. 6, 1918.
'Twas just two years ago today
Since the hour you passed away,
The time you spent on earth in pain
Can never come to you again.
'Twas very hard to part with you,
But God knew what was best to do.
You did your part and did it well,
So he took you where the angels dwell,
Where there is no pain or sorrow.
Sadly missed by DAUGHTERS.

In memory of my dear wife and our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. May Agusta Sauerwein, who died Nov. 8, 1919.
Just a year ago she left us;
Joy was in her mild blue eyes,
For she knew that she was going
To her home beyond the skies.
She is gone, but not forgotten;
All her troubles are no more.
We all hope to meet her,
Waiting on the other shore.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c)

In memory of our dear son and brother, First-Class Private Ellis E. Hassett, Company H, 354th Infantry, who made the supreme sacrifice Nov. 1, 1918.
There's a sigh in our hearts,
Though our lips may be gay,
As we think of our soldier brave
Laying beneath the war-scarred earth
Asleep in a lonely grave.
When the sun is slowly sinking,
And the evening shadows fall,
And we gather around the fireside,
Then we miss you most of all.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, SISTERS AND BROTHERS, AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Rudolph Stubenrauch, killed in action in the Battle of Argonne, Company L, Ninth Infantry, two years ago, Nov. 4, 1918:
In your lonely grave you are sleeping,
And our lonely hearts are weeping;
Tears in silence often flow.
At first the grief we could not bear,
But now we understand that God saw fit that you should die.
As you have lived, a man.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, FATHER, BROTHERS AND SISTERS, AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

In loving memory of our dear beloved son and brother, Edward Garig Schultz, who departed this life two years ago, Nov. 9, 1918:
In his lonely grave he is sleeping,
As the shadows onward fall,
And our lonely hearts are weeping,
Silently the shades of evening
Gather 'round our lonely door,
Silently they bring before us
The dear face we see no more.
So often do we go to his grave,
Lingering there and trying to be brave,
But, oh, 'tis hard to bear,
To go away and leave him there.
Sadly missed by his MOTHER, FATHER, SISTER AND BROTHER.

In loving memory of our darling husband and son, Edwin W. Taylor, who departed this life Nov. 4, 1919:
A shadow fell upon our life
When death, the reaper, came
And took our darling husband and son away
From earthly care and pain.
But some day our eyes shall see
The face we loved so well,
Our hands shall press his
And never say farewell.
We miss him every hour and day
As others miss the sunshine and flowers.
Daytime or nighttime, where ever we go,
This dear little sunbeam, we miss him so.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, FATHER, MOTHER, SISTER AND BROTHER. (c)

In loving memory of Corp. Edward H. Alewel, Company H, 356th Infantry, Eighty-ninth Division, who was killed in action on Nov. 11, 1918:
Two years since you have left us—
Why it seems but yesterday.
For in thought you will always be with us
Though far away in that lonely grave.
When the sun is slowly sinking
And the evening shadows fall,
And we gather 'round the fireside,
Then we miss you most of all.
We miss your happy, smiling face,
Your ever-ready words of cheer,
Your lovable disposition
That to everyone made you so dear.
At first the grief we could not bear,
But now we understand
That God saw fit that you should die
As you have lived—A MAN.

THE "new" way against the "old." Don't "play the old beaten paths of high prices." In your "heart of hearts" you know "I am your Buddy, the place to buy clothes." It now "Becomes our Duty" to inform you that the "crash to high prices has come." All these "high-price merchants" will certainly have to come off their high horse ("Man-o'-War"). You can't pull that $65, $75 and $100 stuff and "get across with it" at all. "We are with you" for 10 years, have led the way fighting for low prices, assisting thousands to "help keep up that prosperous appearance," which "means everything today," by dressing them up at little or no cost. In cloth and wool suits, 20 to 40 per cent savings on our drummers' samples, suits and overcoats, $19.98, $24.98, $27.98, $29.98. Mackinaw Coat, $9.98, $11.98, $12.98, $14.98. "We claim $5 profit is all we need on any suit." We have saved thousands of dollars for the clothes-buying public. "We're out of the high rent district." "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you." These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you money. All we ask you is to "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly get your "dough." "Buy more, pay less." Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau and all other lines transfer to our door. We again announce our "Trade-in-Sale" Department. We will make you a liberal allowance on your old clothes for new ones. "Abrams," "The Place to Buy Clothes," 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau. (c)

"TIMES sure have changed." We are sweeping the country "with our clothes." If this "means anything to your young life," where you can "doll up" and look prosperous at "little or no cost to you," "play our way today." We are working on all our "six cylinders for you now." Everyone in life must have some "incentive," some "goal to reach," something to look "forward" for, to go ahead, to rise, to be prosperous. You can reach it all if you don't go around looking "down and out." For 10 years we have "helped the under dog" to "keep his head above water and looking prosperous" at "all times" we have driven "home" that "saving and prosperous-looking habit" to thousands of people, "dressing them up" at little or no cost to them. Buy our uncalled-for clothes; "start anew;" we are "calling you." What you save when you spend your dough is your profit. Install the "Abrams System" of clothes buying and save. We have in "store" for you high-class suits; you can afford to wear two or three suits a season for the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are tailor-made and from the best manufacturers; $10 to $20. Can you wear 34, 36, 40, 46 to 50 sizes? Also English and plain models. Vests, 50c. Pants, $1 to $3.95. Coats, $5 to $10. Uncalled for sixteen hats, 95c to $1.50. Open Sundays until 6 p. m. Abrams, Cleaners and Dyers, 56 S. Vandeventer, near Chouteau. Mail orders filled. Both phones.

THREE MEN HELD IN SHOOTING IN KANSAS CITY TAXICAB

Salesman Dragged From Machine on Way to Station—Chauffeur of Man Shot Two Weeks Ago, Held.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 6.—Three men are held by the police in connection with the shooting here last night of B. G. Pollock, 65 years old, a traveling salesman of Oskosh, Wis. Pollock's recovery, physicians said, was uncertain. A probe is being made for the bullet which struck Pollock in the chest.

The three men held are James L. Peacock, chauffeur, Stanley D. McCarty and Lester E. Penn, driver of the taxicab in which Pollock was riding to the Union Station when the shooting occurred.

According to Pollock's story told to the police today, he engaged Penn to drive him to the Union Station. A motor car, in which there were three men, forced the cab to the curb on an unfrequented street, Pollock said. Two of the men dragged Pollock from Penn's car and in the scuffle Pollock was shot.

Immediately after the shooting the three men drove away.

Pollock was wearing a large diamond ring, but slipped it from his finger when he was attacked, he told the police.

Peacock was chauffeur for J. E. Harrington of Mexico, Mo., who was shot mysteriously here two weeks ago outside a cafe.

AMERICANS AT PEKIN FORM PARTY TO RESCUE COUNTRYMEN

Permission Asked to Move Against Mongol Town Where Men Are Besieged.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Americans in Pekin have launched a miniature relief expedition in behalf of two of their countrymen caught in fighting at Urga, capital of Outer Mongolia, the State Department was advised today. They have mustered 12 Americans, armed and provided with motor convoy, and appealed to the American legation to obtain permission from the Chinese Government for the expedition to move on the town which has been attacked by Russians, Buriats and Mongols.

Reports have reached Pekin from within the walls of Urga that the defending Chinese soldiery were demoralized, and had begun looting the homes of Russian residents.

The American legation, the department's advices said, has made urgent representations to the Chinese Government that every protection possible be afforded.

Although the legation reported the situation in Urga as serious and that the foreign residents were in imminent danger, only two Americans were mentioned. Their names were given as Mills, an engineer, and McLaughlin, an employe of the Mongolian Trading Co.

The rescue mission was described as being made up of friends of the two men. They have planned to base their operations on Kalgan, northwest of Pekin, on the Great Wall of China and on the southern edge of Mongolia.

$1200 IN GEMS IN TROUSERS ST. LOUISAN SENDS TO CLEANER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Charles H. Flach, head of the brokerage company which bears his name at 712 Spruce street, St. Louis, had an unfortunate experience when in Chicago and now mourns the loss of jewels valued at $1200. He was staying at a loop hotel and sent his trousers to the cleaner in the hotel to be pressed.

Several hours later he remembered that his trousers' pockets contained a diamond ring and three unset diamonds, all worth about $1200. He hurried to the cleaners and there he found the trousers, but the cleaner and the gems were gone and the police are now searching for them.

Skirvin Extradition Denied.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 6.—Extradition of Clifford J. Skirvin of Wichita, sought by Gov. Lowden of Illinois, on the charge that Skirvin obtained $175,000 under false pretenses from the Union Securities of Philadelphia, in an oil land deal, was denied today by Gov. Allen on the grounds that the matter involved was amply covered in four civil suits pending against Skirvin. The Securities company maintained that it was in Chicago that its representative turned over to Skirvin a check for $175,000. The oil and land in question was in Butler County, Kan., and the company charges it was not as represented by Skirvin.

MANAGER OF GROCERY ROBBED OF $150 BY 2 YOUNG BANDITS

Measure Adopted to Frustrate Robbers Who Carry Off Grocer's Safes Proves Futile.

Herold Schuchman, 23 years old, of 1213 North Market street, was robbed last night at 9 o'clock of $150, the day's receipts of the Kroger store at 2600 North Tenth street, of which he is manager.

He was on his way home from the store, carrying in an inside pocket the day's receipts, in compliance with a recent instruction that resulted from the frequency with which burglars have been carrying off Kroger store safes. Schuchman was accompanied by his clerk, J. F. Bennett.

On Warren street, near Eleventh street, two young men slipped up behind them, pressed revolvers into their backs and ordered them to step into the yard of the Grace Episcopal Church, at that point. When they reached the shadow of the church Schuchman was searched and the money taken. The robbers then ran through the church yard to Tenth street and disappeared.

Mrs. Minnie Rubelman of 4133 Delmar boulevard was robbed of her purse, containing $12, and a wrist watch valued at $50 by two young men who stopped her last night at 7 o'clock as she was walking north on Grand avenue between Cass avenue and Lucky street.

Dean C. R. Richards of the University of Illinois gave a synopsis of important events in the history of the society, and in the advance of mechanical engineering, since 1880, when the society was organized by Dr. Robert H. Thurston of Cornell.

Motion pictures of the Commonwealth Steel Co. plant at Granite City were shown for the first time, and included close-ups of the fusion of the metals used in making steel and of the bubbling metals in the furnaces. Phonograph record messages from President Fred Miller of the society and Ira Hollis, vice president, were given.

MRS. BESSIE FORNALD DIES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Mrs. Bessie Swift Fornald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Swift, and an indefatigable war worker, died suddenly in London Friday night of double pneumonia. She had been ill only 36 hours. Cablegrams to her parents said she had been a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hall. She had been in Europe since last May, recuperating from her arduous work during the war.

When Americans began going to France, Mrs. Fornald was among the first. She first worked in Beauvannes Hospital, in June. When the marines went to the front she was right behind, conducting a canteen so close to the front that many times she was under fire. She did everything from scrubbing floors to making coffee, writing letters, cheering wounded men, patching clothes.

Mrs. Fornald and her husband, Charles Fornald, were divorced in 1912. Their marriage in 1908 was a brilliant society affair.

Snapshot taken during contest between Centre College of Kentucky and Harvard, showing Centre runner starting on a play around the end which netted 10 yards. As illustrating perfect interference for the runner, this photograph has seldom been surpassed. The heavier Harvard eleven won, 31 to 14, in the presence of nearly 40,000 spectators—a record-breaking attendance at Harvard for a minor game.

PENIKEES SILKS

"Patrician" Frock created by Mannie Solomon Co., Inc., New York, of CREPE CARESS with allover embroidery in white chain stitch.

WOULD you have your winter gowns and blouses, wraps and suits, keep in perfect step with the mode? Then for their fashioning choose one of the ever-adorable PENIKEES SILKS.

See what unusual grace and charm the little lady in the photograph has secured—just by wisely insisting that her frock be made of

CREPE CARESS
A Satin Crepe

Across its lovely shimmering surface trails an allover pattern of white chain-stitch embroidery, and for the trimming there are saucy frills of Penikees Georgette.

No matter what "your color," you will find it at its best in Crepe Caress, for this soft satin crepe comes in every one of the new shades, pastel hues as well as dark tones.

Good dressmakers use PENIKEES SILKS—and a good store near you sells them by the yard. Look for the name in the selvage.

Vanity Fair SILK UNDERWEAR

When a Union Suit Has a Sure-Lap Closing—the last objection is removed! It holds the union securely closed, and you never find it on any union but the Vanity Fair.

This is only one of the Vanity Fair creations that is unusual! The vest is longer and the straps stay on the shoulder where they belong. The Knickers have a double back. The Pettibocker combines frilly petticoat with comfortable knicker, while the Step-In Envelope has neither snaps nor buttons. The Vanties have the coolness of open drawers and very much more attractive!

The Vanity Fair label in your silk underwear means that you have something really advanced! You will find them at all the better shops.

It will not break

An all-steel vacuum bottle

for automobiling—for the home—for the office

THE first vacuum bottle, made by Sir James Dewar fifty years ago, was so fragile that it could not safely be moved from place to place about the laboratory.

Since then vacuum bottles have been so improved that their use has become almost universal. But the danger of breaking can never be eliminated as long as the bottle itself is made of glass.

In 1915 William Stanley solved the problem. He discovered a process by which a vacuum bottle could be made entirely of steel.

No matter how roughly you treat a Stanley Vacuum Bottle it can never break. Whether it falls from the table or from a speeding automobile its efficiency will not be damaged. It has even been dropped accidentally from an eighth-story window without breaking.

Every Stanley Bottle is lined with blue Amalite, a pure mineral coating which is fused into the steel—making a surface like porcelain.

Sold in one and two-quart sizes at all the better stores. An attractive gift for man or woman. Prices (East of the Rocky Mountains)—black standard finish: Quart size, $10.00—two-quart size, $15.00.

A Fashion Necessity

Every stylish woman is wearing a fur scarf with her coat, suit, dress or waist. It is appropriate for every occasion. This scarf is made of a genuine Manchurian Fox, which has long, soft, silky hair. It is a large animal shape scarf with head at one end and tail at the other. Lined throughout with an all-silk lining; also has silk ruffle around the neck. Very large and graceful. A fur of this kind will wear for years. Colors: Black, Lucile Brown or Taupe Gray.

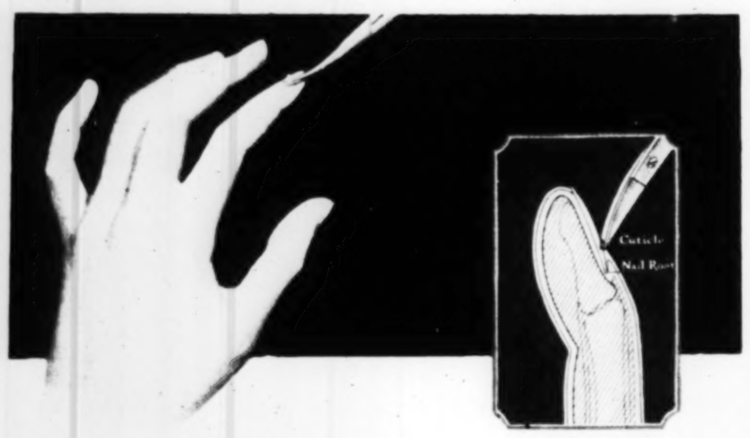
THE RIGHT WAY TO KEEP YOUR NAILS ALWAYS PERFECTLY MANICURED

Just a little regular care keeps your hands lovely

Nails like rosy pearl inlaid in a delicate setting, a setting of smooth, unbroken cuticle, a perfect curve which repeats the curve of the nail tips—

It is easy for anyone nowadays to have this alluring grace of perfect nails and cuticle—so easy that people no longer excuse the lack of it.

Today ill-kept nails are as unpardonable as ill-kept teeth. For it takes but a few minutes of regular care each week to keep your finger-nails always perfect, your cuticle smooth, thin, unbroken.



The sensitive nail root is only one-twelfth inch below the cuticle. When you look through a magnifying glass you see the unpleasant results of cuticle cutting

Make some day of the week your regular day for manicuring. Then regularly on this day give your nails the care they need.

Do not forget that the most important item in the appearance of your nails is the care of the cuticle. Broken cuticle is like a broken setting to a jewel. Coarse, overgrown cuticle is equally unsuitable.

Yet many people ruin the cuticle through ignorance of the proper method of caring for it. Never cut it. Specialists agree that this is ruinous.

The nail root is only one-twelfth of an inch below the cuticle. When the cuticle is cut, it is next to impossible to avoid exposing the nail root at the corners or in some little place. The root of the nail is so sensitive that nature will not permit it to remain uncovered. The moment a tiny bit is exposed, new skin grows very quickly in that place to cover it. It grows much more rapidly than the rest of the cuticle.

This spoils the symmetry of the curve at the base of your nails. It causes uneven cuticle and hangnails. It gives a coarse, ragged appearance to the border of your nails. Realizing this, an expert set himself to the task of discovering a safe, effective way to remove overgrown cuticle. After years of study he worked out the formula of a liquid which gently, harmlessly softens and removes the surplus cuticle. This he called Cutex.

Wrap a little cotton around the end of an orange stick (both come in the Cutex package), dip it into the bottle of Cutex and work it around the base of the nails, gently pushing back the cuticle. Instantly the dry cuticle is softened. Wash the hands, pushing back the cuticle with a towel. The surplus cuticle will disappear, leaving a firm, even, slender nail base.

If you like snowy-white nail tips apply a little Cutex Nail White underneath the nails directly from its convenient tube.

Finish your manicure with Cutex Nail Polish. For an especially brilliant, lasting polish, use Cutex Paste Polish first, then the Cutex Cake or Powder Polish. You can get the Cutex Polish in cake, powder, paste, liquid and stick form.

If you wish to keep the cuticle particularly soft and pliable so that you do not need to manicure as often, apply Cutex Cold Cream at night on going to bed.

Give your nails a Cutex manicure regularly, and your hands will always have that peculiar attractiveness which adds a subtle appeal to one's whole appearance.

Cutex Cuticle Remover, Nail White, Nail Polish and Cold Cream are each 35 cents. The Cuticle Remover comes also in 65-cent bottles. You can get Cutex in any drug or department store in the United States, Canada and England.

When the Rattlesnake Struck

Judge!

When you sent me up for four years, you called me a rattlesnake. Maybe I am one—anyhow, you hear me rattling now. One year after I got to the pen my daughter died of—well, they said it was poverty and the disgrace together. You've got a daughter, Judge, and I'm going to make you know how it feels to lose one. I'm free now, and I guess I've turned to rattlesnake all right. Look out when I strike.

Yours respectfully,
RATTLESNAKE.

This is the beginning of one of the stories by

O. Henry

Like the Caliph of ancient Bagdad was O. Henry. He has explored the byways of colorful New York. He has walked the waterfront, dropped into strange eating places on the Bowery; he has sat for hours, disguised as a tramp, on a park bench, waiting for the adventure around the corner. And he always found it. The city was his world, and it gave him tribute of rich store of material, unfailing inspiration and the key to that inner life which remains to most of us a sealed book.

His death put an end to a life as varied and romantic as one of his own tales—for he was one of the lovable spirits of earth. At heart he was always a vagabond, a wandering minstrel, telling the stories that bubbled from him as he went his seeing way.

More people are reading O. Henry today than ever before. They read him because he has the flavor of life as we know it, the tang, the zest, the breathless, careless haste, the ironic, happy, tragic irresponsibility which go to make up life as it is really lived.

"A Thief—She?"

AND YET—with a shiver she told him all the sordid story! The stage life—the night of drunkenness—the days of remorse for her sin—all was poured out in the desperate tale. But he loved her in spite of all, and—then came the astounding truth—that unexpected twist that makes O. Henry the most eagerly read of American story-tellers.

The Bullet That Found Its Mark!

He was in hiding, and she had found him out. He was a Secret Agent of the Russian government, paid to stir up strife and foment trouble in her own country, and she had sought him out in his own filthy den.
Already he had enstranged the most powerful noble in the realm—her brother—from his king. Already he had sown dissension and distrust among the leaders of her people. Twice he had tried to murder her lover. But now the police were on his trail and she knew his hiding place—she knew all the hideous details of his plotting—she at last stood between him and success.
Why then had she so foolishly placed herself in his power? Why had she sought him out alone in this den of thieves where no help could reach her? Why had she not known the venom, the ferocity, the brutishness such creatures are capable of?
All the mystery—all the romance—all the thrill of a master plot are in this story. Read it. It will hold you enthralled from beginning right up to the breathless end. Yet it is only one of the seven new, complete, copyrighted novels by

LOVE on the Mexican Border

Sweetly she smiled into the eyes of both, kisses she took from both—the ruddy American and the dark-skinned Mexican. And in the strong arms of the man from the North, was it any wonder that for the moment she forgot that Pedro would soon be there? Her punishment? Men of the North laugh coldly and pass on, but the Southern brother below the Rio Grande loves, as he hates, with a singleness that knows no mercy. On this erring woman, going so gaily to her fate, O. Henry could look with excuse and pity, as he did on the weaknesses of women always, everywhere, for he knew their small shoulders bear burdens that would break the backs of men.

When the Gorilla Sang!

Fluttering—posed an instant—then back and forth with light and easy steps she sprang, while he leaped out at her side mimicking the uncouth, hideous sounds of a gorilla—she in her wood-nymph dress of leaves and he in the clothes of Broadway.
There in that dingy night court—in the pale flare of the gas jets—they did a dance which held the destiny of two lives—and yet, so strange it was that only one of all who saw it dared guess—
If you would read a tale of love different from any you have ever read before—if you would know perhaps the most fantastic dance a man and woman ever did—and learn a new trick of fate—read this absorbing, unforgettable story of a man's love.

At the Present Price of Coal, Be an Eskimo

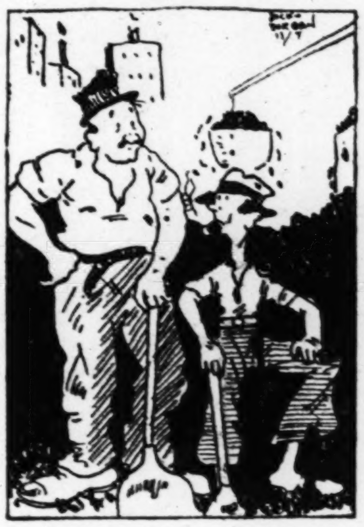
By RING W. LARDNER.

TO THE EDITOR:

The latest U. S. senses shows that they's 105 million people in this country and outskirts and about 20 ton of coal. Luckly they's several people that lives far enough south of the Mason N. Dickinson line so as not to need no coal and they's also a No. of hired girls and men in the plaster and carpenter trade and members of the White Sox that intends to spend the winter in Palm Beach. But that still leaves the Wall St. men and newspaper writers and etc. that can't afford to do nothing only stay home and the question is how are we going to help from congealing?

If the 18 amendment hadn't past they wouldn't be nothing to it as people is a whole lot like a automobile and if you pour enough alcohol in their radiator why they won't freeze. But now days good alcohol is like coal, try and get it. So as far as I can make out, the situation all over the north is desperite and unlest steps is taken along the right lines, why a big per cent of the 105 million will spend next summer rideing around in the ice wagon and selling for 90 cts. per 100 lbs.

I suppose things in other places is the same like where I live at here on Long's Island so I will try and tell you how we are fixed so as my readers can compare it with where they live at and maybe my idears in regards to a remedy will prove a benefit to my many admirers and friends. Well here in our town we got 2 Belgium coal dealers Pat and Mike. We put in a order with Pat last June for 30 ton of coal and so far we got all but 30 tons of it and it looks like maybe we will half to ask for the order back and burn that instead of the coal. Pat's price is 16 smackers per ton witch is very reasonable and he says he wouldn't raise it much even if he had the coal. Mike has got 3 ton which he holds at $23 per ton witch is practically giveing it away and nobody wants to take advantage of him.



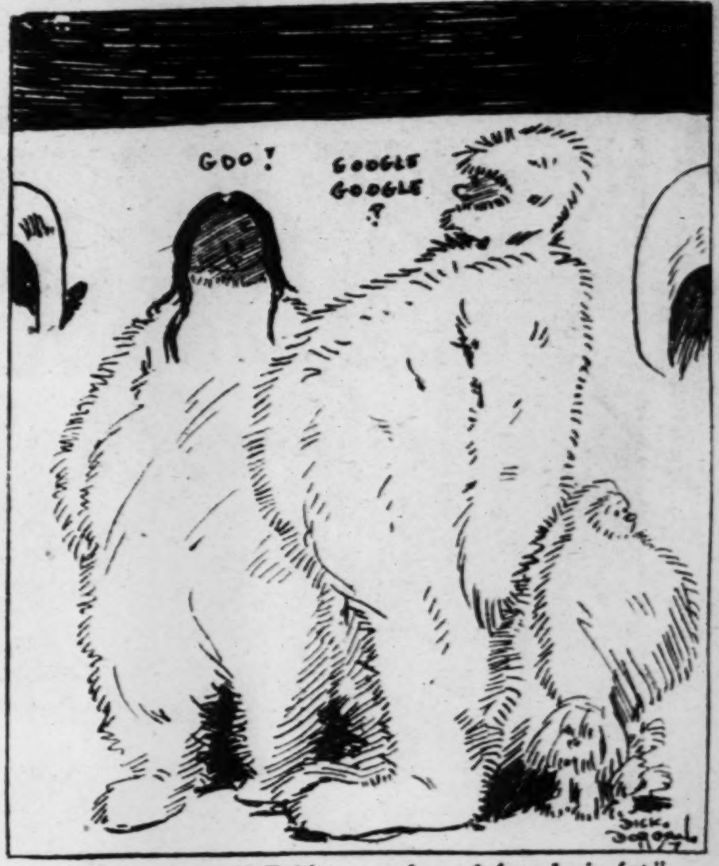
"Belgium coal dealers Pat and Mike."

So that is how matters stands here and we may as well look the facts in the eye ball and the facts is that winter ain't no 300 miles away, but coal is. There is the situation in a nut cracker and we can make the best of it and the next question is how can that be done? Well in a case like this kind I have always figured that a man better do like the Romans do, only this time it's the Eskimos instead of the Romans as where we are liveing at is going to be just the same as Alaska or Greenland's izzy mountains you might say, and as you don't never hear of a Eskimo freezeing to death, why what would be sweater then pretend like we was Eskimos and moult our lifes accordingly.

I will save my readers the trouble of looking up in the dictionary about the Eskimos as I have looked it up myself and studied out how to imitate them and etc. and it really ain't so hard for everybody to be their own Eskimo, and instead of the winter being a tough winter why everybody can have the time of their life if they enter into the spirit of the game.

In the 1st. place, the book says that Eskies don't hardly ever live to be over 60 yrs. of age so it looks like those of my readers that has past the 3 score mark may as well take this opportunity to bump themselfs off in some clean manner as it wouldn't come natural to them to act a Eskimo part and they would just be in the rest of us way.

Now then a man can't really feel like a Eskie unlest they look like one and pretty near all Eskimos male and female is fat, so between now and winter we want to get a good start towards obesity.



GOO!
GOOGLE GOOGLE ?

"Pretty near all Eskimos male and female is fat."

Most gals won't have no difficulty along these lines and the men folks can reach the goal by eating plenty of lump sugar and takeing up some light occupation like match maker for Battling Levinsky.

The book says that the Eskies hasn't only vague idears about religion so I guess it won't be no strain on most of us to mimick them in these regards. Another laudible habit they got is to not take no baths in winter. They put on their fall suits and don't pay no more tension to it till it falls off of them. This is why you never read of them croaking from the la grip and etc. Where a lot of us people catches cold in the winter is takeing our close off and putting them on again or laying in a hot tub in the all together till you get all steamed up and then stepping right into a cold towel.

The costumes you will half to wear is made of boots and furs and bird skins. The gents boots comes to their knee and the ladies to their waste. The upper story of the attire can be made up out of fur of a milk fed cat trimmed with roast Vermont turkey skin with oyster stuffing.

Eskies lives on seals and wales witch they catch themselves and it may be a little tough at 1st. for some of us to get onto the nack of fishing for these kind of meat, but if people has got a water front to their home why all they half to do is make themself a harpoon and go out and set on the beach and keep lunging through the ice till they get one of the big fellows to nibble and even if they don't seem to fall for the bait, why you can't be hung for trying, as they say. People that hasn't no repairing rights or other kind of water on the premises can amuse themself throwing the old harpoon into the bath tub or wait till the January thaw and fish in the slush.

Another Eskimo habit is for 30 or 40 familys to live in the same house winter times so as they can cuddle up and keep warm, but personly I can't think of even 1-2 that No. of familys that I would want to be on cuddling terms with them and vice versa.

About the only other thing they is to imitate about the Eskies is their language and as they's hardly time now to master the real dialect why the best thing is to make up one of your own along the same lines and the principle pt. to remember is that they don't only use 1 word where we would use 5 and 6 to express the same thot if any.

For inst. where we would say, "Please pass the garlic," why a Eskie would just say, "Whew."

Neighbors of mine who I have told them about this idear of being your own Eskimo has snaped at the idear like rolling off a duck's back and if the scheme works out like I think its libel to, why coal will be a drug store on the market and we will all have the laugh on Pat and Mike. Getting the House Shingled

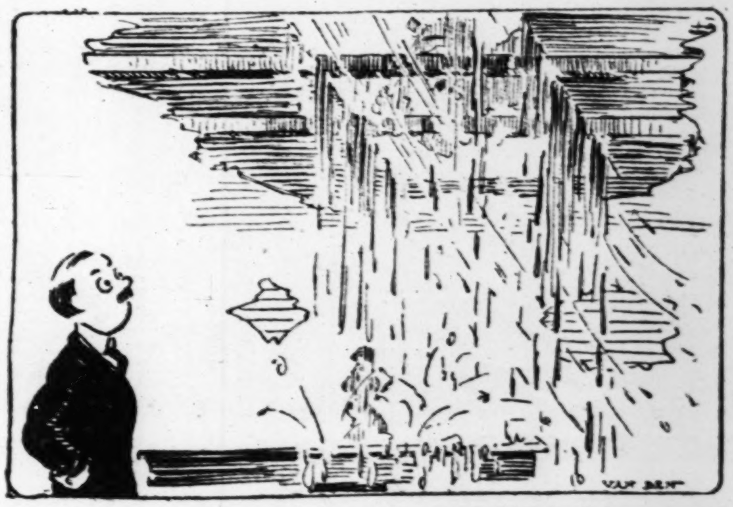
By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

I AM now going to disclose a discovery which will be priceless in the arid regions of the country. I shall not charge anything for it or patent it or copyright it, because it is one of those discoveries that is so great that it becomes the property of the whole world.

I do not even expect gratitude, for while some people are employing it to their own advantage, it will be working to the acute disadvantage of others. Public opinion will be divided and I shall be in the usual plight of great discoverers, a victim of my own benefactions.

The discovery is the secret of causing it to rain—and not only that, for rainmaking has been practiced to some extent by gun fire in the West, but making the wind blow also. The two have, as far as I know, never been done simultaneously.



Leaks are inconvenient in a roof, especially during a storm.

The way to make rain and wind at the same time is to have your house shingled. This I have proved not by a single experiment, but by a series of experiments extending through the whole summer. I picked out a number of months, all normally dry—June, July, and on through October, and I never failed once. The instant the carpenter got a patch of shingle the size of a small barn off the roof, the rains descended and the floods came, and the wind howled through the shingle lath. The time of day made no difference. It might be 9 in the morning, and no cloud in the sky.

But the erection of the staging attracted a cloud, no bigger than a man's hand, that lay hidden somewhere under the horizon. Up it came, bulging as it approached. For a few minutes it hovered over the house, waiting until enough shingles had been removed from the roof to make it worth its while.

Then, when it was certain to dissolve a sufficient quantity of plaster to make trouble in the house, it upended and spilled its aqueous burden upon our roof tree.

The experiments, as I have said, began in June.

I am never one to leave a thing undone that needs doing.

Passing zephyrs had been plucking loose shingles off the house as lovely maidens cull roses, and sifting them down on my neighbor's yard.

Sometimes they fell on the neighbor, and he complained. But whether they did or not, he got them. Not by any chance did a shingle fall on my yard, thus helping me to eke out my firewood supply. Of course, the removal of a shingle from the roof leaves a leak, and leaks are inconvenient in a roof, especially during a storm. So

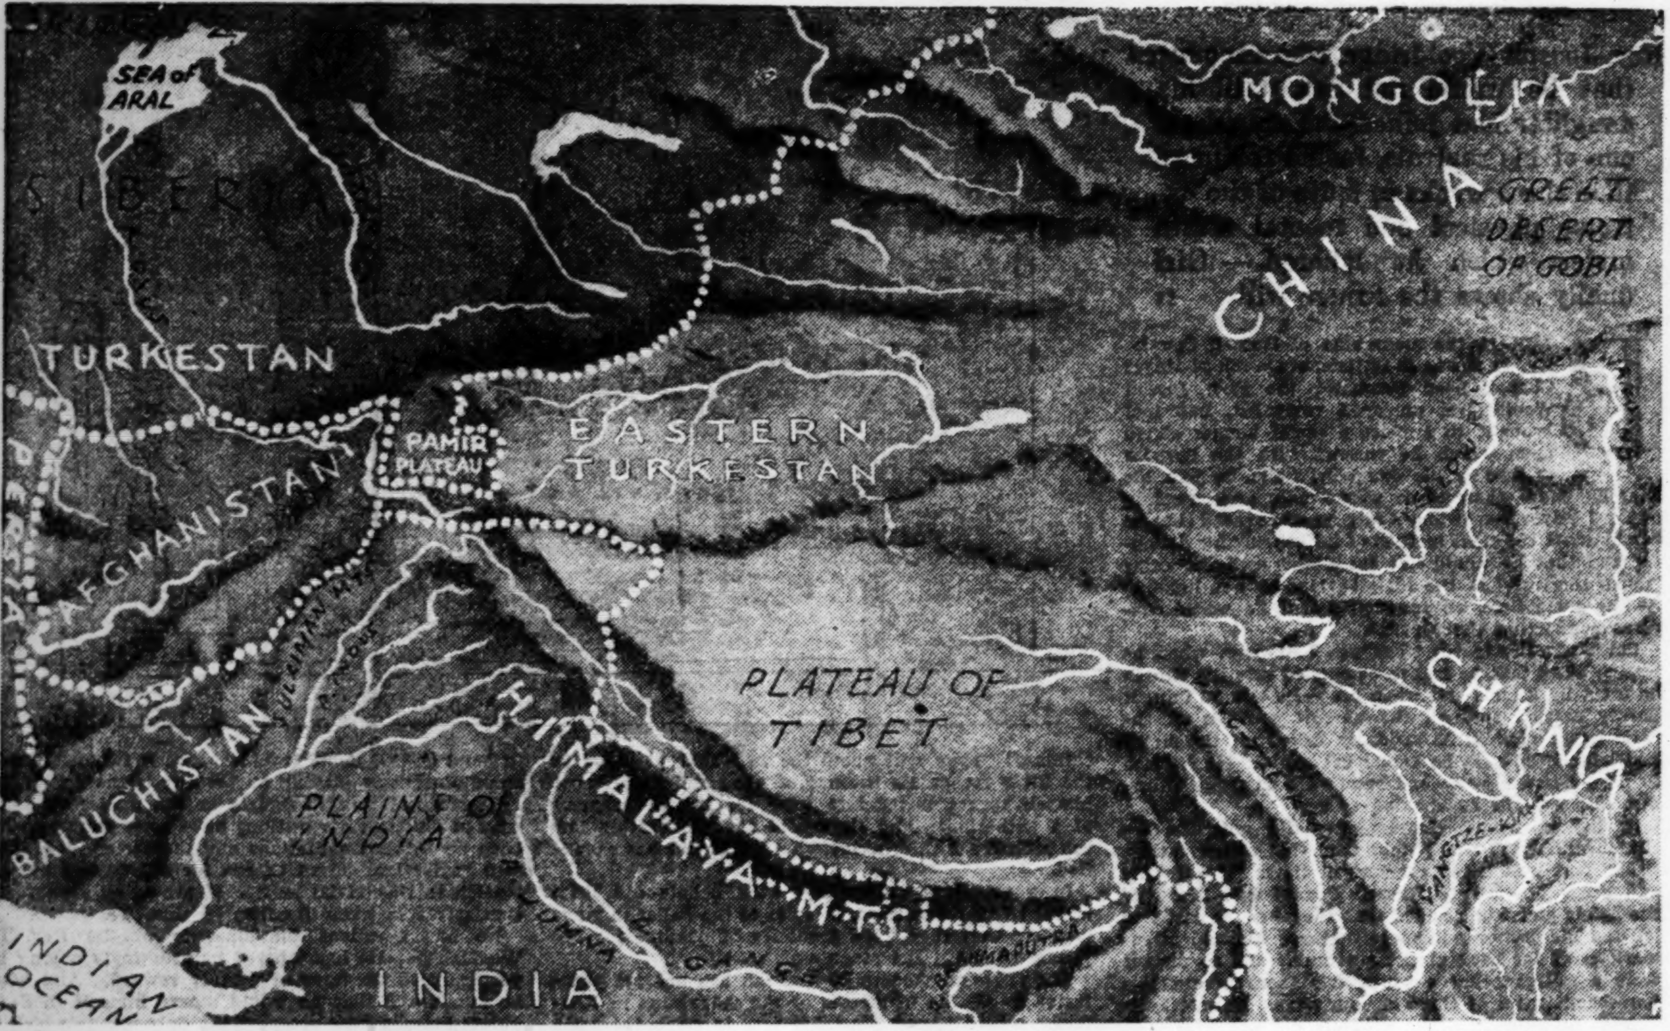
AMERICANS WILL SEARCH IN ASIA FOR HOME OF THE REAL ADAM



The portion of Asia where, as scientists believe, the human race was evolved from a simian species and which will be thoroughly searched for traces of prehistoric people.

TO GET new light upon one of the most fascinating subjects in the world—that of primitive man, just emerging onto the human plane—is the object of an expedition which will depart from New York next February.

What did primitive man look like? How did he live? are questions asked by his descendants, who will use motor cars and airplanes in hunting for relics of their (and your) earliest ancestors -o- -o- -o- -o- -o- -o-

Information about the ancestor of the race, the causes which led to his evolution from the ape family, how the evolution was accomplished, what primitive man looked like and how he lived, will be sought by his descendants with every resource of twentieth century scientific achievement, including motor cars and airplanes.

The third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History will be led by Roy Chapman Andrews, veteran explorer and associate curator of mammals at the museum. The expedition is also under the auspices of the American Asiatic Association and the Asia magazine. It will last for five years, and have headquarters at Pekin. For many years scientists generally have been agreed that the cradle of the human race was "somewhere in Asia," and Andrews believes that it was in the central portion thereof, thus dismissing Mesopotamia, reputed scene of the Garden of Eden. The Biblical story of the creation was tagged as a Babylonian myth long ago by some investigators.

Andrews has been deeply impressed by what his zoological investigations have taught him, namely, that Central Asia was the center of distribution for many kinds of animals living today in Europe, America and other parts of the world.

The caribou, moose, elk and Rocky Mountain goat are all of Asiatic origin and came to this country more than 100,000 years ago, he believes, when there was a bridge of land extending across what is now the Behring Sea. "Primitive man was a hunter," says Andrews, "and as the beasts on which he depended for his food moved from place to place, man followed on their heels."

ROY CHAPMAN ANDREWS.

So it may not have been man's inquiring and exploring spirit, after all, nor his yearning for conquest and knowledge, which started him off on those prehistoric migrations, but just an unromantic and quite practical desire to prevent the cupboard from getting empty. He was not looking for scenery, but good steaks.

Assuming that Central Asia was the starting point of the human race, there are three routes by which they could pass out of Turkestan and into the wider world beyond. For as they left the district now called Mongolia, high above the North of China, they would pass through long, broad valleys until they arrived at the edge of the plateau of Tartary.

Passing high above the region of Pamir, where are the sources of the Oxus River, they would descend the terrace of the Bolor and the steeps of the Badakshan, and gradually reach the vast, flat region, lower than the level of the ocean, which forms the two basins of the Aral and the Caspian seas, where are terminated the immense aquatic plain vaguely designated by the name of Turkestan.

"But now," as John Henry Newman writes, "they would diverge. If they cross the Oxus and the Jaxartes, they would come to Khorasan, the ancient Batriana, and so to Afghanistan and to India on the east, and to Persia on the west.

"But if they continue west they skirt along the north of the Aral and the Caspian, cross the Volga into South Russia, and so to the Danube, or go south to Georgia and Syria and Asia Minor."

Such are the three routes: Across the Oxus, across the Caucasus and across the Danube, which the pastoral nations have followed at various times when precipitating themselves on the civilization which had preceded them, and it is presumed that the same routes were used by primitive man and the animal migrations which spread themselves throughout the world.

"History teems with records of these migrations of nomadic peoples, roaming through trackless spaces, suddenly sweeping across continents, suddenly forming empires, and suddenly vanishing, no one knows how, into their native earth.

"Some of them were a frightful set of men. Some of them were cannibals; their voices were shrill, their gestures uncouth and their shapes scarcely human, and early records describe them as resembling brutes set up on their hind legs. Their shoulders were broad, their noses flat, their eyes black, small and deeply buried in their heads, and, moreover, they had little hair on their heads and no beards."

Such were the tribes that came at the dawn of history from the trackless solitudes, forests, marshes, bleak table lands and snowy mountains of Asia, where the third Asiatic expedition is about to carry on its scientific research.

A certain result of the expedition will be a great collection of Asiatic animals, living and fossil; also unknown species of birds, reptiles and fish will be discovered and new data about the existing aborigines will be obtained.

In various parts of the Orient during the last 10 years the American Museum of Natural History has carried on work along zoological lines, with the ultimate object of arranging for the present expedition.

"Because of the variety of country and climate to be encountered during the five years' work, the equipment of the expedition will have to be thorough. In Mongolia, in many parts of the Gobi Desert and on the rolling grass lands, it is possible to use motor cars. They will be valuable not only to the pursuer of wild horses and antelopes, but especially to the paleontologist and archaeologist, for, by automobile, country that

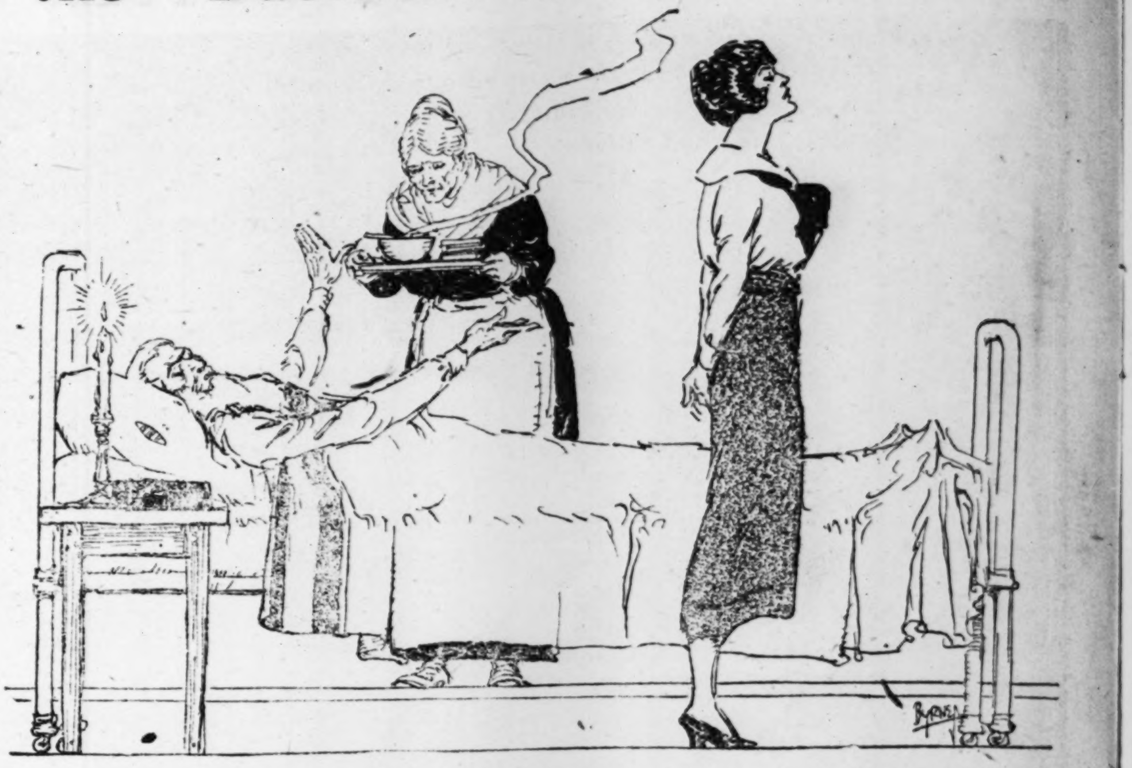
Strange Hunger Strike of Mountaineer Revivalist Reported From the Backwoods of Kentucky

Rev. Joseph Wooldridge, who announced that he would not eat until his daughter had joined the church at one of his revivals, fasted for more than three weeks in spite of the extreme physical and mental strain under which he labored — Girl finally shows the firmer will ::



BACK in the mountains of Russell County, Ky., in the little settlement church at Hayes Chapel, near Denmark, the Rev. Joseph Wooldridge, an aged revivalist, has just brought to a close a novel hunger strike upon which he entered with the purpose of forcing his daughter, Della, to join his church. More than three weeks ago, after reading of Lord Mayor MacSwiney's fast, he announced that he would adopt the same method of influencing his daughter and that he would not eat again until she came "down the trail" at the little revival he was holding. At the same time, he announced that he would continue conducting the services.

But when the fourth week was half over, when he was so weak that he had to be carried into the church on a cot by friends and when his voice was so faint it hardly carried through the narrow confines of the little frame church, he suddenly called off the strike and announced that he would eat again. He claimed to have heard a voice and received a message telling him this was the right thing to do.

In the meantime, the daughter did not join the church. Her will was firmer than that of her father.

The fast was called off just in time. The Sheriff and other officials of Russell County had heard of the affair and had decided that they had no right to let the old pastor deliberately starve himself. Denmark is so far back in the mountains and so distant from a railroad that a round trip there necessitates horseback travel of three or four days. News travels slowly, accordingly. The officials did not hear that the old man had started his fast until it had progressed more than a fortnight. Then, when they were making ready to investigate, word came that he had abandoned his purpose.

The girl, his daughter, stands high in the esteem of the mountain people. Her school was located about seven miles from where her father, weakened and emaciated as the days passed, conducted his revival. Friends say that it was not lack of religious belief that prompted her stand, but that she realized that a certain type of revival had done as much harm as good among the mountain folk and that she did not believe the proper way of joining the church was to do so under the influence of hysteria.

To those of the outside world, the peculiar fervency of belief in the mountain people is unknown. In their simple horizon, religion looms up more largely than it does in a more complex life. Beliefs almost medieval in their simplicity, that the modern person would pronounce simply superstition, are the foundation of many a mountaineer's faith.

Literal interpretation of the Bible is the rule instead of the exception. The story of Jonah and the whale and other miracles in the Bible are accepted literally and not symbolically. Every portion of the Holy Book is pored over for guidance and inspiration, the Old Testament as well as the New. And many who have heard the statements made by those captured after the inception of some mountain feud, where whole families have been wiped out, have been impressed with the obvious sincerity of the mountaineers in the belief that they have Biblical authority for their actions.

This, of course, is their twisting of the old Mosaic law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." Although the laws of Moses especially provided for adjustment in case of accidental deaths through the act of some other person, the mountaineers, in their fierce religious zeal, easily hypnotize themselves into believing that other texts apply to the case, when one of their family is killed.

"They that live by the sword shall perish by the sword," remarks some mountaineer whose relative has been killed. Forthwith, he puts his rifle in order and starts out in pursuit of vengeance, convinced that he he has scriptural authority for his actions.

Revenue officers, who have been ambushed and wounded when in the pursuit of their duty, and who have come in close personal contact with the people, say that it is literally true many of the mountaineers consider they have the authority of the Bible for withstanding any attempt at interference with their "moonshining." They will quote the fact that passages in the Bible recognizes the use of wine and that Christ himself turned water into wine for the refreshment of a gathering. And they hold that no earthly law can interfere with drinking what the Savior has sanctified.

In a primitive community, such beliefs did little harm. Feuds were rare, in spite of the belief in some quarters that they were a species of pastime for the young bloods of the mountains.

But although modern civilization has not yet penetrated to all the fastnesses of the mountains in Kentucky, where life of the cabin folk is much the same as that which prevailed generations ago, the pressure of civilization is felt on their daily life. And the beliefs and customs which once were accepted are now found to stand in the way of the physical and spiritual progress of the people.

Educated persons among the mountaineers have long deprecated a certain type of revival and revivalist as doing more harm than good. Case after case has occurred where the frenzy into which the simple mountain folk have been wrought at some revival has been detrimental to them and to the community. Insanity or mental afflictions have not infrequently followed some violent emotion at a revival and a mind crazed with religion can distort the truths of the Bible in a way to make them dangerous.

Many writers about the mountain folk have told of the exaltation of mind into which those people can throw themselves, in the firm belief that, having once attained salvation, as they believe, no further attention need be paid to worldly matters. They allow their mountain farms to run down, they deny their children actual necessities of life with the statement that "the Lord will provide," and they frequently constitute a definite and impractical element in a community that retards its progress.

It is hard enough to extract a living from the little mountain farms without having shiftless occupants developed by religious frenzy. Game has been practically all killed off in the mountains and these same fanatics, who once roamed the woods and compensated for not doing other labor by keeping the larder supplied with meat, now are simply a dead weight on an overburdened community.

Practical minds among the mountaineers have long recognized this. The superstitious beliefs acquired by literal interpretation of every line in the Bible, frequently twisted by frenzy into some meaning never intended to be conveyed, has formed a stumbling block to relief workers who have endeavored to improve the condition of the people. Superstition is rampant and the word of some half-crazed "evangelist," uttered in a moment of excitement from a rude backwoods pulpit, has more weight than any advice on sanitation or physical betterment by workers sent from the outside world.

Moreover, the readiness with which the corrupt element has recognized how the mountaineers of this type can be approached on the side of their religious zeal, is said to have resulted in the stirring up of much strife. The vicious element that wishes certain people "removed" for political purposes or personal vengeance, can frequently find a slayer ready to hand or can incite trouble between two factions of mountaineers by playing on their religious beliefs.

Human nature also figures in the matter and persons of shiftless dispositions have been known to fall back on Biblical quotations and the certainty of their own "salvation" as an excuse for not paying any attention to the trivial matter of providing support for themselves or their families in this life.

No one questions the sincerity of the Rev. Dr. Wooldridge. He has labored painstakingly among his people, with no hope of earthly reward. And when he announced that he would starve himself to death unless his daughter accepted the only means which he believed would enable her to enter the heavenly kingdom, he did so in the firm conviction that he was doing what was right.

The mere fact, however, that he should choose this method of compelling a girl, who, her friends say, is naturally of a devout turn of mind and of a religious tendency, to go through an outward form which she rejects, is an indication of the fanaticism which this form of religion develops.

Miss Wooldridge, it is supposed, having announced her stand on the subject in the interest of the younger element in the community she is instructing, felt that to yield would be an admission that she was wrong before the scholars whom she is endeavoring to fit for a proper viewpoint of the world.

Firmness in her stand alone, she realized, was necessary in this case. If she yielded, she knew that much of the teaching and enlightenment she and her fellow workers were trying to bring to the backwoods younger generation would be wasted. They would be convinced that the frenzy of the pulpit was the real guide.

Accordingly, she kept to her purpose, although the strain upon her must have been great. And the sudden determination of her father to eat again gained her point. Those who have watched the case report that the old man became affected by his long fast and doubtless he sincerely believes that some dream or vision of his agitated mind was a divine voice to call off his "strike."

Where especial interest centered in the episode was among the scientific element. When word was brought that the old man had actually lasted three weeks in a state of starvation, at the same time going through the most violent physical and mental strain, medical authorities were aroused. They believed this beyond the capacity of a human being, despite the long fast of Mayor MacSwiney. For the Lord Mayor and his associates were confined to their beds and were the recipients of the most tender care. Their temperature was watched closely and the heat in their rooms adjusted accordingly; they received water and some necessary salts and were massaged and rubbed at intervals by attendants. Friends of the hunger strikers say that only the devoted attention of the nuns in attendance at Brixton Jail kept the strikers alive for so long a period.

When Dr. Tanner fasted for 40 days in his famous exhibition of nearly 40 years ago, he was allowed a certain amount of water each day, the temperature of his room was carefully adjusted, and, while he kept up a certain amount of physical exercise in the early days of his fast, this was abandoned when he showed

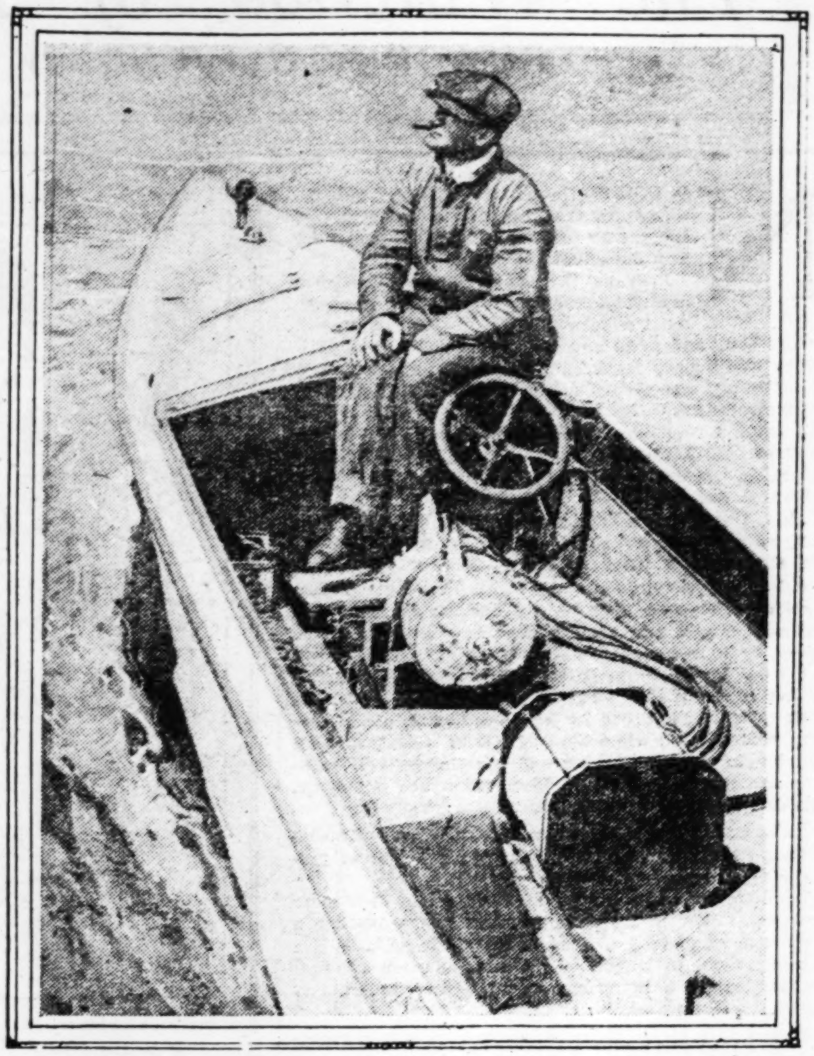
"Drawing Electricity From the Air"

Albert M. Hubbard's "coil," displayed to scientists in the West, furnishes motive power for launch when attached to motor on the craft—Seattle inventor is jealously guarding secret and hopes later to show it to Edison -o- -o- -o-



"Coil" which composes invention attached to motor on launch.

HAS a 19-year-old Seattle boy tapped the cosmic reservoir of inexhaustible electrical energy?

This is the question electrical engineers in all parts of the United States are asking following their examination of a simple little device perfected by Albert M. Hubbard, a Seattle youth.

Hubbard, who already has driven a motor boat and lighted a room with his new-fangled generator, which is only a new type of electrical coil, claims he has discovered a principle that will revolutionize the science of power and motion. Experts are frankly puzzled. So far, they neither agree nor dispute, preferring to await further developments.

A few weeks ago young Hubbard, after a series of other tests, made good his prediction that the little coil would drive a motor boat with the apparatus as a source of power. Soon, he declared, he will demonstrate that his contrivance will run at normal speed a heavy touring car.

The launch used in the recent test of the coil is an 18-foot boat, equipped with a 35-horsepower electric motor. The experiment was conducted on Lake Union, in Seattle. The only current furnished the motor in the launch was supplied from the Hubbard coil. The demonstration was witnessed by a Seattle capitalist, the young inventor's father, William H. Hubbard, and newspaper men.

Parish fathers were at first skeptical.

With the coil as the current producer, or motive power, the launch was driven at a speed of between eight and 10 knots an hour. The motor ran free at a speed estimated at 3600 revolutions a minute. The coil used was 11 inches in diameter and 14 inches in length.

Before the boat was set in motion an investigation was made to determine whether a source of power, other than the coil, had been concealed about the craft. None was found. Hubbard said that on tests the coil showed a current of 280 amperes and 125 volts, equivalent to approximately 45 horsepower.

The electric motor used was approximately 12 inches in diameter and 18 inches in length. It was reconstructed for use in connection with the Hubbard coil. In the demonstration on the lake both the motor and the coil were placed on special blocks in the launch, while the propeller shaft was geared for a chain belt.

When the start was made the coil and the motor, with the latter plainly geared to the propeller shaft, constituted the only visible machinery. When the boat shoved off Hubbard threw in the switch and the launch at once began to pick up speed. No effort was made to cover any great distance. The launch merely circled around the bay and then returned to the wharf from which the start was made. Hubbard refused to allow the motor to run continuously for any length of time. This was because during the test the wires connecting the coil to the motor began to heat under the excessive current. No instruments were used to test its wattage.

Hubbard said that the coil used in this test cost about $90 to construct. He declares that so far as he has been able to learn the coil's life as a power unit is without end. He gave it as his opinion that a coil three times as large as the one used in driving the launch would be required to propel an airplane; that a machine so equipped could fly around the world without stopping, at least in so far as its power supply is concerned.

Convinced that he has an apparatus which will make junk piles of present-day steam and generating plants by rendering them unnecessary when he starts getting power from the atmosphere, Hubbard is guarding his secret with all the alertness of youth. Without funds of his own, he was forced to prove to friends that he had an invention with possibilities and he has been advanced about $10,000 for experimental work and expenses. He says he owes it to these men to guard his machine and blueprints until the device is perfected and developed. Once his invention is protected he is going to call in the electrical wizards of the country, he says, and prove to them that he is able to tap the illimitable power that permeates the universe. And one of the dreams of the boy is to show his machine to Thomas A. Edison.

What is your machine? Is it a new thought or an old idea worked over? Is there trickery about it? How can you, a boy of 19, expect to accomplish what men have sought after since electrical invention began? What gave you the primary idea for your invention?

These are some of the questions most asked of the boy by the layman. When a story in a Seattle newspaper mentioned the boy's claims, electrical engineers began to make a casual investigation of the idea, and what they learned from those who saw the machine led them to try and make an examination of the apparatus, but this was denied them, for Hubbard says it is so simple, once the arrangement of coils is understood, that his "dream" would be common property, and so, aside from making tests—which even the engineers remark are astounding—he refuses to describe the apparatus. However, some of the neighbors have seen the machine which he claims has succeeded in transforming the earth lines of magnetic force into electrical energy available for use.

Hubbard built eight sets. Each worked as successfully as the others, proving, he says, that the machinery he intends to use in getting electricity out of the atmosphere is not complicated and will adjust itself to commercial needs.

The apparatus has the appearance of a small coil of wire, about six inches in diameter, surrounding a permanently magnetic core eight inches long. Hubbard, when the cry of trickery was raised, picked up a machine in one hand, balanced it on his palm and took it outside his workshop and performed the same experiment. The stunt that caused the electrical engineers to take notice, and which was unexplained when they satisfied themselves that Hubbard's 6x8-inch machine was not connected up with any batteries, was Hubbard's ability to connect an ordinary incandescent electric light with the two terminals of the machine and have it burn for hours. In fact, Hubbard had it burn for days and then took the bulb out. Electrical men had it proved to their satisfaction that there were no moving parts in his "atmospheric power generator;" that there were no hidden batteries, storage or primary, and no wires attached to the apparatus from the outside.

Some Claims Youth Makes for His New Atmospheric Force

HERE are some of the things the boy inventor claims his "atmospheric power generator" will do:

Furnish motive power for ships, airplanes and automobiles.

Heat seven two-room apartments.

Illuminate an office building.

Supply current for lighting, cooking and heating for a large residence.

Hubbard claims he is going to make electricity the cheapest thing in the world, almost as cheap as air. No longer will the householder have to worry about his electric light bill, no longer will he have to sit in darkness when there is a breakdown in the downtown generating plant, asserts the youth. He proposes that the house owner will buy one of his coils, set it anywhere in the house and put in the plug that connects up the current with the house wiring and mother earth will take over the function of the power magnates who charge so much per kilowatt. The boy claims there will be enough electricity to go around if everybody in the world taps the atmosphere for light, heat and commercial electricity. And the success of his experiments in getting electricity anywhere he sets his strange sets of coils has led him to speculate on just what free electricity will mean to the human race.

The Waterloo of All-He-Wants Ryon

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

NO DOUBT there are plenty of persons who know that any man who spends his life trying to become an industrial king is a darn fool.

Perhaps the man who accomplishes ambition knows better than anybody what a darn fool he is. He has stewed up the body and mind and soul into a goulash of efficiency and square jaws, bank accounts and system, a set of blunt, courageous manners and blunt, unimaginative utterings, a fierce determination to have health and a good time, and a diminishing pleasure in the bowings and scrapings the littler fools make to his greatness. And what of it?

I know Anderson Ryon, and if that were his name in fact, I should call him Andy. It is nothing to me that when he comes back from Europe the metropolitan papers print what he has to say; I should call him by his familiar nickname to his face, not because I am a better man than he, but because he is a darn fool and stupid and unintelligent and deserves to be called by a nickname. The only thing which shines out from his royal goulash of money and industrial majesty is a bit of a struggling imagination which he tried to starve to death for 18 years during his scramble. And at that, when his costume of industrial king and his fur-lined affluence and his shaggy-wolf mastery and the habit-bunk of Wall street are put aside, this captain of corporation lunacy is a good sort.

He had a kind of awakening at 36. Only a few of his friends know what did it. I do. It was just as you suspect—a woman.

There is no use to sit up in anticipation of a mere romance. This, in the main, is a story of a conflict, a contest, a struggle, a coming to grips. Ryon calls it a wrestle with an angel! And any mention of that phrase brings a little river of laughter to Charity Saxon's moist lips.

It was this way. When Ryon was 36 and his phenomenal rise in darn-foolishness was behind him and he sat in or on the boards of directors of six banks and trust companies and 12 subsidiaries of his corporation, and the carpet on his private office floor was as thick as moss in a bog, and he had learned to say "no" the way old Morgan used to say it and send shivers into the spines of men who didn't know what to do with their moneybags, but wanted to keep them in any event—when, as I say, the Great State of Success had been reached, Ryon got his imagination out of storage and tried to bring it back to life. It was pretty sick imagination. He had never let it see a woman, and nothing can be worse for imagination than that.

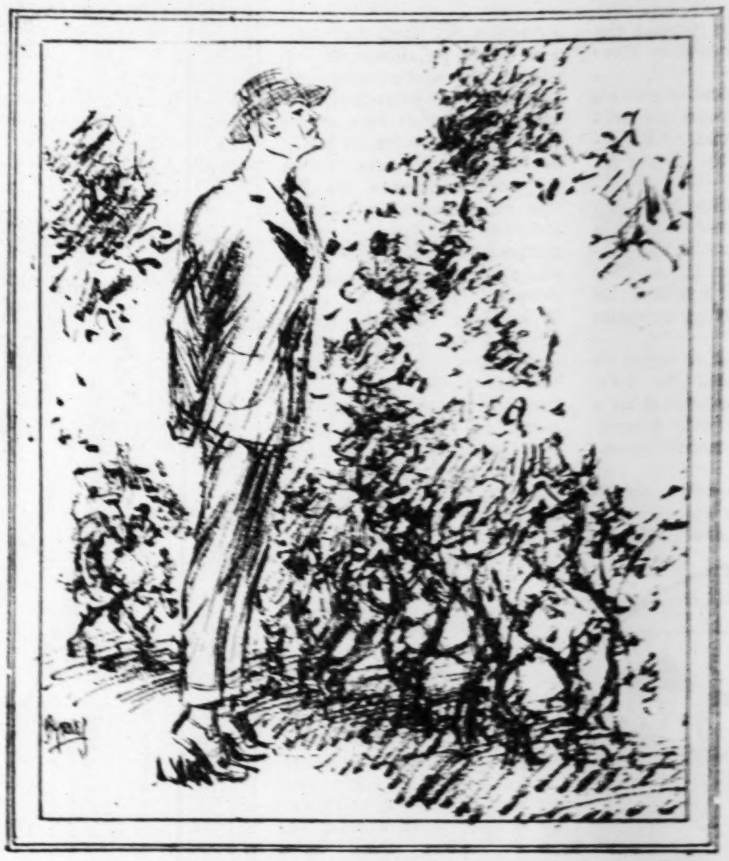
The best you can say is that Andy's deliberate sense of being a darn fool and trying to nurse his imagination back to life puts him ahead of most millionaires. So far as was known to those retainers in his office—the private secretary and Smith and the office boy, who is 71 years old and used to be a partner of Ryon's father—all that was left of Ryon's imagination was pretty feeble. It expressed itself only in laying out and building Nickrock.

Nickrock is an estate. You have seen its pictures—the rambling stone house, the sunken garden, the swimming pool, the stables. You have seen photographic reproductions of the great hall—not under the name of Nickrock, perhaps—but under another name just as darn-foolish.

No one knew what Andy Ryon wanted of an estate except to entertain no end of servants for six days a week and a few toadying hangers-on from the literary and artistic and social and tips-on-the-market sets on Sundays. Possibly it was because he cared even less for the money than for the estate. Perhaps it was because a bachelor, like a child, wants "to play house."

There was no wife in sight and the betting was 60 to 11 that there would not be one. He never looked at women. They looked at him. He was worth nearly a half-hundred million, and he was tall and, in spite of the square-jawed, collar-advertisement expression of strength of character and efficiency, he was brown in summer and looked as if he had just hopped out of a cold bath in winter, and there was a little twist at the corners of his mouth and a little laugh in his gray eyes suggestive of a spark of human-beingness not yet put out. Women looked at him. But Ryon would not look back. He never saw women at all.

To make Nickrock an expression of himself was more than his sick imagination could invent. The three-room cottage of a Bohunk laborer up at the Coningdale plant, with its geranium in a tomato can and its golden-oak, polished sideboard making the rest of the furniture look outclassed, was more expressive of its owner than Nickrock.



Andy Ryon walked down to the hedge and stood on tiptoe and looked over.

He said to the man who buys rights of way and oil lands on a salary: "Ed, go find me a good big homepiece. Fashionable summer place, but no crowds. Far enough away so I'll be tempted to stay through the week sometimes. Any price." Ed went off like a rat-terrier and at last he was willing to show Ryon 180 acres, worth a half million, at Berncaster. The young king took it, and turned to look for the best architect of country castles, chateaux and villas who ever came over from the Beaux Arts. And there was his house.

And he said: "Who lays out Central Park and places like that?" And he had plans and maps shown him all bound in tooled leather folios, because when a great man is done they do him good. And so it went.

The place was finished in November, and when I say finished, I mean finished, with all the appurtenances and appointments. It was the whole luxurious outfit, just like the $5000 box of fireworks—everything ordered, and extras—and no more flavored with the personality of the man who had bought than is the Fourth of July combination, all packed and ready to fire off.

There are smart estates at Berncaster, but Ryon's was smarter than any. It sat at the top wave of flowering lawns and declared its price so vigorously that few ever argued whether it was beautiful or not.

One thing is sure. Charity Saxon had no training which would allow us to expect that she would like it. She was the daughter of her father and a long line of New England ancestors who had a sense of humor about "show" and thought material pride one of the world's three jokes.

• • • • • • • •

Her grandfather had been a professor at Bates College in Maine, and afterward, returning to the law, had become a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State. There wasn't much "side" about him, and his son, who had a chair at Harvard, ate oatmeal and apple sauce for breakfast, from the high-chair to the receiving vault. He it was who had come down to Berncaster before Berncaster was ruined by the darn fools shot out at the top of an industrial era and trying to have a good time in chateaux with all the paraphernalia of Dukes, without the grace, manners or sense of proportion of Dukes.

Chapman Saxon had built a little, low house, with a study and a porch to watch sunrise and moonrise on the singing sea. Before his death it had weathered and turned gray; its field-stone walls had regathered lichens, its roof had softened and taken on the manners of the land until the pines, the rocks and the raspy grass had adopted it. It was in the middle of 10 acres of shore land, for which the professor paid $296. He could not have bought it if it had cost much more, because, although the Saxons of Boston had once been affluent, three generations of silent idealists had left the family with the modest fortune of 1836, which, more than a half-century later, is a good deal more like modest poverty.

Charity Saxon could have sold this land for a large sum. Her friends suggested it, but Charity had said that it was her father's home and hers and she could come back to it summertimes and week-ends in winter, and what would she do with the money if she had it? "I'm just a happy old maid, drying on the vine," she had said, amidst the protest of her friends. "About all I can take care of and love is my work and the little old house at Berncaster."

The land of Charity Saxon bit a corner out of Ryon's estate. Ed, the right-of-way and oil-land buyer, had timidly pointed this out to Andy. The corner bit out was the most important corner, too, because it took away from Anderson Ryon's land about three-quarters of the shore frontage.

The young industrial king had said: "Who owns that strip?"

"A spinster, she's called," said Ed. "I was informed she is a librarian or something in Boston." He grinned.

"Well? What's amusing?" Ryon had asked.

"Nothing," Ed had replied. "Only that word 'spinster' sounds like wrinkles and thin hair to me. And this dame—this lady is not hard to look at."

"Huh," said Ryon. "What's that hedge?"

"That's the boundary between hers and yours—a part of it," Ed answered. "It's also a hedge around her garden."

"What sort of a garden?"

"No good. No beds."

The August afternoon was very still. Only one bird sang in the top of a high tree. Andy Ryon walked down to the hedge and stood on tiptoe and looked over. It is not often that a millionaire stands so long on tiptoe.

"Ratty little ruin," he said to Ed when he came back. "If we try to buy it now she will want seven or eight or ten thousand an acre. Thrifty, probably. Some day, when Nickrock is almost done I'll drop in and buy the place."

"Yes, sir."

Ryon began to realize later that he wanted those 10 acres. Without them Nickrock was no longer desirable.

Any mention of anything Ryon wanted brings me to the point where it is necessary to tell something about him which I have not mentioned before. He is called by those who take orders from him in brokers' offices, in the directors' rooms in banks, at the Yacht Club and by all the workmen in his plants through Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Ohio by a certain nickname. The nickname has grown out of a superstition and the superstition is founded naturally enough upon the swift success of his career, upon his studied look of determination, making him appear as a failure-proof demi-god. He is supposed to get anything he wants. The initiated call him All-he-wants Ryon. And Ryon wanted Charity's homestead.

In September he went to get it. He had motored to Nickrock from New York and, instead of going to Nickrock manor when he arrived in Berncaster, he told the chauffeur to drive down the shore road, under the scarlet and yellow of the autumn foliage, through the aromatic pines to the Saxon place. When the car stopped, panting like a speed monster, in front of Charity's door, it appeared to be nearly as large as the nestling little home.

Ryon adjusted his tie and his grave, clean-shaven face and walked in a stately fashion up to Charity's weathered front door over which the rambler rose bush had made its arch. Thump! Thump! The sound of the knuckles of the great man upon the humble panels.

The door was opened by a white-haired woman in a white apron, and Ryon scowled, rejecting the possibility that this was she. He identified her to his own satisfaction as the servant-companion, and said: "My card. I want to see her on business." Upon it was engraved the magic name of the young industrial king. He added: "I will sit here—on the porch."

The nice old person smiled with compressed, thin lips and retired. When she returned the same smile returned with her. She said: "Miss Saxon desires to know upon what business you wish to see her."

This sounded familiar to Andy's ears; it was more or less like the phrase used at his own office door when anyone dared to ask for him. He parried quickly, as visitors to his office often parry. He said: "I wish to see her on personal business."

The old lady produced a small pad of paper and a pencil. "Will you kindly write your business on this pad?" she said.

Young Ryon gasped. He arose, coughed, blushed and the color of rage ran into his eyes.

"Never mind," he said, in a voice intended to be threatening, and off he went.

At the door of his car he stopped and blurted out to his strong-faced chauffeur: "Do you see this place, Carver? I'm going to have this place. I want it!"

When the millionaire returned to New York he sent for one of the junior partners of Ramson, Puffer & Hubble, 55 Wall street. He showed him a surveyor's plan of Nickrock and the surrounding plots; he pointed at the Saxon land: "Have the title to this examined. I want to see whether there is a flaw in it anywhere."

There was no flaw in Charity's title! So Ryon sent for Ernestine Blacken. Mrs. Blacken is 45 and still pretty. Her brain moves twice as fast as any other woman's who sells bonds to a feminine clientele. Some ungallant brokers called her Lady Fox. After a 10-minute explanation Andy said to her: "To use a coarse expression, Mrs. Blacken—go get it. Represent yourself as a widow seeking seclusion, but without money; I don't want to pay a fortune for that strip of rocks and pines. Nothing will grow there. Just tell her—oh, I leave it to you. And mark me—if you succeed there may be other things."

The Lady Fox, however, fell down. I do not deny that she went about her work carefully. She arrived in Berncaster and boarded with Mrs. Olling. She studied the birds and loved nature with all her might. She acquired a reputation for being an outdoor fiend. And finally she managed it so that she was caught in a terrific downpour on Miss Saxon's beach and sought shelter at the little house. She thawed out her chilled limbs in front of Charity's fire and confessed that she would like to have just such a place. It was not that she liked the house. Oh, no! But if she owned such a piece of land she would bring a tent and camp out on the rocks near the spring of clear, cold water. Would Miss Saxon care to sell?

A twinkle came into Charity's blue eyes—her heliotrope-colored eyes. She said, sweetly: "You need not dream of buying the land, Mrs. Blacken. Whenever you feel like going away from New York, you may come right here with your little tent; the place you have picked out is out of sight of this house and you may camp there as long and as often as you want." And she handed the Lady Fox her orange pekoe in a genuine Josiah Spode cup. Mrs. Blacken does not know yet how she got out. She was trying to explain to herself how Miss Saxon had obtained her name and address—a matter about which Ryon cared nothing.

The millionaire wrote a letter then. It was engrossed on the best personal stationery, with embossed lettering so high that it was not necessary even to rub one's thumb over it to see if it were genuine. He said that, frankly, he wanted to purchase the Saxon acres. He was polite. He was even effusive. He offered himself—none less than he—for a personal interview at any time or place.

The reply? Well, it came from Charity's uncle, and in a bold, dashing but quaint hand like that of a naval officer of 1812, it addressed the industrial king with all the glory of his name, title and place of business and then said: "Miss Saxon desires that I inform you that her home in Berncaster is not upon the market at present."

That was all. All-he-wants Ryon was upset. By this time his sick imagination was showing signs of new life. It even went so far as to conceive that he might strike a real snag in Charity Saxon.

He had her "investigated." There are detective agencies whose necks are rough, but there are also "confidential operators," employed to do delicate, cautious investigating.

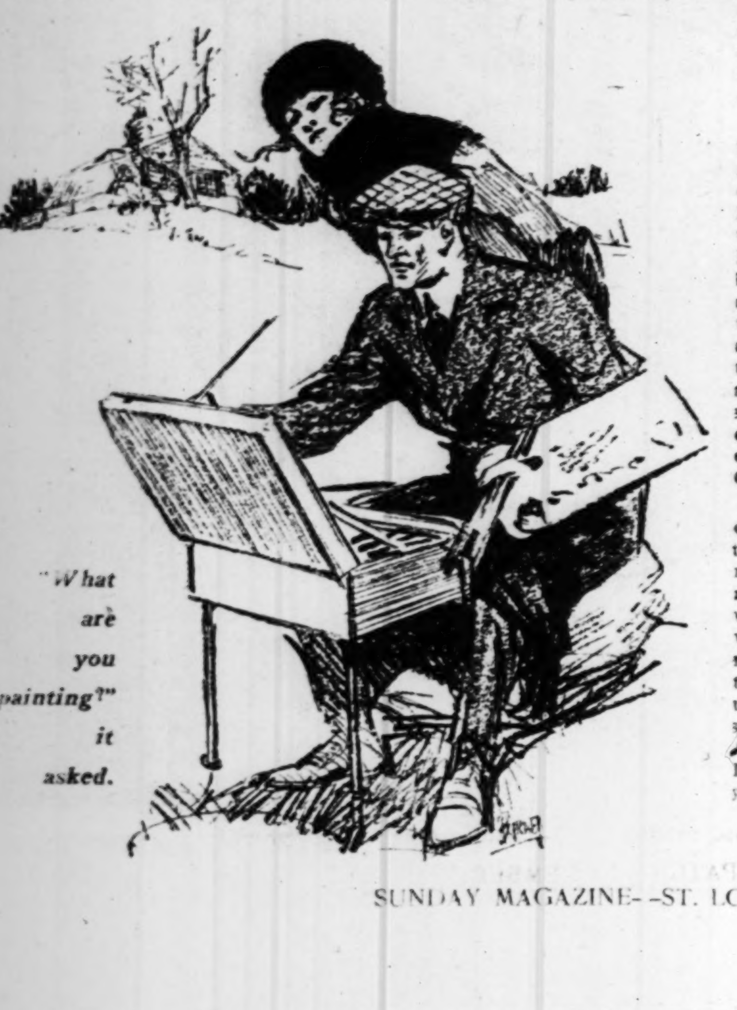
Embrey was the head of such a bureau. He came back in October, after a week in Boston "looking up" Charity Saxon. His report told of her ancestry; there was none better. She was a secretary of a board of hospital trustees; she worked for her living. She was invited to the best entertaining in Boston, but apparently did not care to go much. Her health was good. He had thought it indiscreet to inquire into her age. She had a fine character, no doubt—a strong character.

"Well, Embrey, do you think she would hold out for a big price?" asked Andy.

"No, sir. I don't think she is that kind at all."

"Human nature, my good fellow," said the masterful Ryon. "Don't forget human nature. There is almost nothing that cannot be bought at a price."

Andy admits that he laid awake that night rehearsing. He was preparing to talk with Charity Saxon himself. He had said that he wanted the Saxon acres and he was known—was he not?—as All-he-wants Ryon. So he called her up at her office in Boston. Summer was over. She would be back on her job, Embrey had said, and would not be in Berncaster until she went down, as always, to spend her Christmas vacation and light a tree for the children of the fishermen's families. I must say that he laid aside all pride and that his voice had that sugar-coated, purring quality which even the square-jawed kings of industrial and banking America use when the case is a hard one. It was either that or tenderness expressed for a lady to whom he was about to give a novel experience.



"What are you painting?" it asked.

He did not give his name as the person who was calling from 100-odd miles away, but when she had come onto the line he told her who he was. He broke it to her, as they say. He was afraid she might cut him short. He said he did not wish to presume. He did not know exactly what he presumed. So he said he presumed she would be willing to sell the 10-acre strip at Berncaster. There was a little pause, which he misunderstood, and in this pause he wondered whether she knew that he detested the long-distance telephone and would not even talk to the superintendent at Conningdale.

The pause was followed by a tender, an almost affectionate, "No, thank you." He thought the voice rich, warm and charming. His imagination, no longer sick, likened the voice to that of a wood thrush. It was a nice voice, for a pesky old maid. But it had hesitated. So he thought, of course, he could depend upon human nature and, with a consciousness of being rich, powerful and All-he-wants Ryon, he said: "Well, I understand; but I will give you, if you decide to sell now, $7000 an acre."

"No, thank you."

"Ten thousand an acre."

"No, thank you."

"Fifteen thousand an acre."

"I'm very sorry that"——

"Eighteen thousand an acre."

"I said, 'No, thank you.' "

"Name your price."

"There is no price."

"At twenty thousand an acre?"

"Mr. Ryon, I said that my little place is not for sale."

She was very firm about it. On the whole, Andy thought her "no" was a little more negative than the "no" of the great man of banking. It was a polite "no," but it was polite like a chip of ice in zero weather.

When he managed to say good-by he was only a young king of industry who had not that which he wanted, and the perspiration stood in warm beads upon his forehead. He had offered nearly a quarter of a million for those unproductive acres and the weather-beaten, low-roofed house! And it had impressed him more than it impressed her.

Ryon wrote to a certain banker in Boston who had once known Charity's father intimately. He asked this man to see Charity. No doubt, the Boston banker may not have liked the commission, but Ryon was a figure now and one had to think of one's stockholders. Bostonians may be uppish, but they are practical in their own unassuming way. And yet Andy never received a reply from the friend of Prof. Saxon. He received one from Charity which was brief and ended with the following paragraph:

"The reflection upon the good faith of my unwillingness, the consequent insinuation that I would perhaps be willing to sell my land at some fabulous sum such as a million dollars an acre, and the intimation of your persistence that a woman is misrepresenting the state of her own mind, have all been thrust upon me by you, who are a stranger to me and I trust may remain so. You have approached me in person and through your wily, hireling emissaries until your importuning has become an annoyance from which I beg to be freed once and for all. There is no sum of money or other inducement which can cause me to part with my property, and if it were for sale it would not be for sale to you. It has been occupied from the beginning by no one who has not had certain manners and customs and aspirations which you do not understand, and I trust it will always be in the hands of an owner who, at least, discriminates, even roughly, between good and bad taste."

To fail on top of failure, to be brought up onto the carpet of life and bawled out, was a new experience to Ryon. He carried the letter around in his pocket and read it many times with interest. His imagination recovering from its quarter of a century of storage, began to open the lid of his life and see what was really there. All-he-wants Ryon had fought a number of rounds with a New England maid, and he was groggy——

Nevertheless, Anderson Ryon, the young king of our darn-foolish industrialism, wearing the tin halo of our modern success, was not done yet. He went to a studio of the woman who had painted the frescoes in the great music room of Nickrock. He said to her: "It is now Nov. 30. How long will it take you to teach me to paint a pine tree?"

"Paint a pine tree?"

"Yes, paint a pine tree."

"What pine tree?"

"Any pine tree. How long will it take you to show me how to mix the colors and so on and so on. I'll give you two hours a day. I'll paint the same tree over and over until I can make it look like a tree. And when I can make it look like a tree I'll give you a fee for your lessons that will justify you in devoting intensive effort upon my case."

"Oh, Mr. Ryon, I think you are mad," said Laura of the frescoes, who thought it cute to be kittenish with the rich.

"So do I," Andy replied convincingly.

Before Christmas, however, Ryon had one accomplishment if he had no other. It was a piquant attainment for a multi-millionaire—he could paint a pine tree!

"And in any old grove of pine trees there probably would be one that looks something like the one I can paint?" he inquired with anxiety.

"Undoubtedly," said the facile Laura. "I venture to say as much."

Ryon went to Berncaster at Christmastide—10 days before Christmas. Not to Nickrock. Certainly not; he went to lodge and board in a fisherman's house on the point. He said his name was Watterson.

He had a canvas, a palette and some brushes and a paint box; with this scenery he took up a position about one-twenty-sixth of a mile in front of the weatherbeaten Saxon cottage, where Christmas wreaths already hung in the white-curtained windows, and he went to work facing the sea and the morning sunlight.

Never once, after the first glance, did he ever turn

Angie is calling Lester "a big, homely, pieface," and Mabel is making faces at him, and Lester, far from being offended, will probably think it very dashing of Angie and Mabel. Handicapped by a lack of experience in feminine wiles, Angie and Mabel are doing their best to exercise charm on Lester. Though methods may differ, it all comes to the same thing—at seven years or seventy.

THE STORY.

Set helplessly adrift by an explosion of bombs, planted by German agents, the great liner Doraine, bound from South America for a port in the United States, has been all but wrecked by a storm and then driven by wind and tide into a basin which is the center of an uninhabited island. Here the ship runs aground, and the survivors of the disaster set about planning for a future in which the hope of rescue seems hopelessly remote. The dominant figure among them is Algernon Adonis Percival, an American mining engineer, who started the voyage as a stowaway, his money having been stolen at the port of embarkation. In the general bewilderment over the strange situation, Percival's natural qualities of leadership have asserted themselves, bringing him a position of some authority, and, incidentally, the interested regard of two women—Ruth Clinton, an American girl, and Olga Obosky, a Russian dancer. In directing the work of building huts and exploring the island, Percival clashes with Abel Landover, a famous capitalist, who refuses to submit to discipline and is worsted in a hand-to-hand encounter with the young engineer. This proceeding Ruth resents as needlessly brutal. Being displeased with Percival's conduct, she is the more ready to take sides in a dispute which presently arises over the naming of a baby born to Betty Cruise, the widow of a wireless operator who was killed in the explosion. Percival has proposed the name Doraine, and the men have unanimously approved. The women of the ship declare naming the baby is none of the men's business, and the good-natured argument is threatening to develop into serious friction when Ruth seeks Percival out and tells him she intends to call a meeting and "see that Betty Cruise gets fair play."

TENTH INSTALLMENT.

"HAVE I a mind of my own or not, Miss Clinton?" Percival interrupted.

"You certainly have," she declared with conviction.

"Then you may expect me to be one of the men to attend your meeting. Good-morning." He lifted his hat, smiled and walked briskly away.

"He'll crab the whole thing," observed one of the women, and despite her vocal rancor, there was an admiring expression in her eyes as they followed him down the road.

"If he wants to call that baby Andrew Jackson or George Washington, he'll have his way," said another. "Sex won't make any difference to him."

"You just wait and see," said Ruth, quivering with indignation.

"Mercy, how you must hate him, Miss Clinton," cried one of her house mates.

"I only wish I were a man," cried the other, clenching her fists.

"It would simplify matters tremendously," came in dry masculine tones from the outskirts of the group. They turned and discovered Randolph Fitts. He was smiling sympathetically.

"I don't quite see what you mean, Mr. Fitts," said Ruth, after a moment.

"Because if you were a man, Miss Clinton, you wouldn't even think of hating him. You'd love him."

Miss Clinton stared at him for a second or two and then, whirling, entered the hut. Her cheeks were burning. Who shall say whether the tears that sprang to her eyes as she fell to work scrubbing in the corner were of anger or self pity?

Briefly, the situation became quite strained as the day wore on. Women gathered in little knots to discuss the unprecedented "nerve" of the men. By nightfall they were pretty thoroughly worked up over a matter that had mildly amused them at the outset of the day. A comparatively small proportion had cared one way or the other in the beginning. Most of them did not care at all. Given time, however, to digest the thought, aided by such seasoning as could be supplied by a half dozen determined and more or less eloquent voices, they came in the course of a few hours to the conclusion that they never had heard of anything so outrageous, and, to a woman, were ready to fight for little Mrs. Cruise's right!

The men took up the gauntlet. They considered themselves challenged. Notwithstanding the secret conviction that the women were right, they stood united in defense of their action. Nothing that Percival could say or do moved them. He tramped from one group of toilers to another, always meeting with the same grins and laughter when he suggested that they wait until Mrs. Cruise was able to approve or disapprove of the name chosen.

"Good gosh!" cried one of the sailors. "Are you goin' to give in to the women, boss?"

"Well, I've been thinking it over, boys. I guess we were a little too officious. We meant well, God knows, but, after all, Betty Cruise ought to be consulted—now, oughtn't she?"

"Sure," cried any number of them, cheerfully. "It's her kid."

"Well, there you are," he rejoined, persuasively.

"But how do we know she won't be tickled to death with our name? She'd ought to be. It's purtier than any name I can think of," argued Jack Wales, a sailor. "When she's well enough, we'll tell her the kid's name is Doraine, and"——

"She won't hold back a second, boss, when she finds out that you picked it for her," broke in another. "Only a couple o' days ago she was sayin' to one of the other women in my hearin' that if it was a boy she was goin' to call him Percival, and she didn't know what on earth she'd do if it was a girl. Said she'd probably have to call it after her mother, and she didn't like her mother's name a little bit."

"I know, but, after all, we did butt in a trifle too soon with our"——

"For God's sake don't let any of these here women hear you talk like that, boss," groaned Jack Wales. "They'll think we're beginning to hedge. We got to stand together in this thing. If we don't, they'll rule this camp, sure as you're a foot high. I don't give a dern what the kid's name is, far as I'm concerned, but on principle, boss, it's just got to be Doraine. Doraine she is, an' Doraine she stays."

Every one of them was good humored about it. They were taking it as a rare and unexpected bit of politics. The thrill of opposition invested them. They scoffed at surrender.

* * * * * * * *

Ruth went to Olga Obosky. She did so only after a rather prolonged inward struggle. The Russian's interest in Percival was not moderated by the reserve supposed to be inherent in women. She was an open idolatress. One had only to watch the way she followed him with her dark, heavy-lidded eyes to know what was in her mind. Ruth tried not to despise her. She tried not to care, when she saw Percival laughing with this beguiling sensualist, and it was not an infrequent occurrence.

The dancer was seated on the floor of her hut, tailor fashion, a cigarette between her lips, her bare arms resting limply on her knees, her body bent forward in an attitude of extreme fatigue. The three "coryphees" were busy at work about the place. Ruth stopped in the doorway. Olga lazily removed the cigarette from her lips and smiled.

"I once thought I was very strong and unbreakable," she said, "but now I know I am not. See, I am all in, as we would say in America. Suffering snakes, how tired I am. That also comes from America. Won't you sit down, Miss Clinton? We have three or four deck chairs, you see, and some cushions."

"Why do you sit there on the floor, all doubled up and—heavens, it must be uncomfortable—if you are so tired? How do you manage your legs?"

"My legs? Oh, my legs are never tired. It is my poor back." Whereupon, she slowly, gracefully straightened out one of her legs, and, without changing the position of her body, raised it, with toes and instep on a perfect line, until the heel was some three feet from the floor. Then she swung it slowly backward, twisting her body sinuously to one side. A moment later the foot was stretched out behind her and she lifted herself steadily, without apparent exertion, upon the other knee, and then stood erect. Ruth watched this remarkable feat in wonder and admiration.

"How—on earth do you do it?" she cried. "Why—you must be as strong as—as—a"—— She was about to say horse and floundered.

"But I trust not as clumsy as one," said Mme. Obosky, stretching her body in luxurious abandon. "I sit on the floor like zat, my friend, because my back is tired, not my legs. If I lie back in ze deck chair when I am tired, I would relax—and would make so much more regret for myself when the time came to get up again.

"Besides, it is a good way to rest, zis way. Have you never tried it? Do, some time. The whole body rests, it says; the muscles have nothing to do, so they become soft and grateful. The backbone, the shoulders, the neck—they all droop and, oh, zey—they are so happy to be like zat. It is the same as when I am asleep and they are not running errands all the time for my brain.

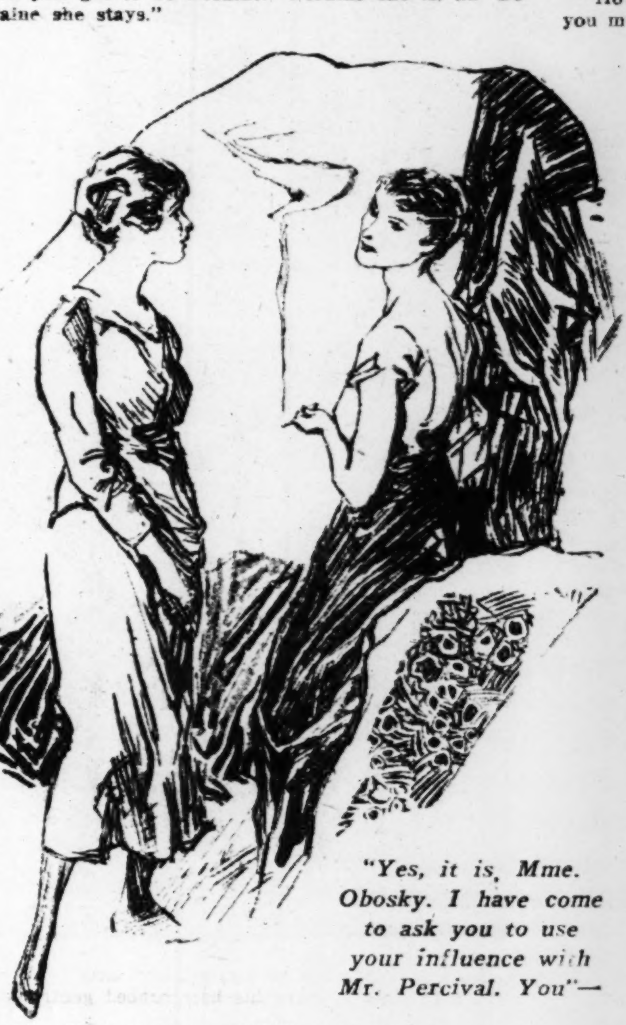
"The Arab sits like zat when he rests, and the Hindoo, and they are strong, oh, so very strong. Try it, some time, Miss Clinton, when you are very tired. It is the best way to let go, all over."

Ruth laughed. "I couldn't do it to save my soul."

"Oh, I do not mean for you to get up as I did, or use your leg as I did. You could not do zat. You are too old. That is one of the fruits, one of the benefits of the cruelest kind of child labor. I was a great many years in making myself able to do zat. See! Put your hand on my leg. Now my back, my arm. What you think, eh?"

Ruth, in some embarrassment, had shyly obeyed her. The dancer's thigh was like a column of warm iron; her waist, free as ever from stays, was firm and somehow suggestive of actual resilience; her shoulders and back possessed the hard, rippling muscles of a well-developed boy; her shapely forearm was as hard as steel. Ruth marveled.

"How strong you are," she cried; "and yet you are slight. You are not as big as I am, but, oh, how much stronger you are."



"Yes, it is, Mme. Obosky. I have come to ask you to use your influence with Mr. Percival. You"—

"I have a perfect figure," said Olga, calmly. "It is worth preserving. No one admires my body so much as I do myself. I must not get fat. When you are a fat old woman, I shall be as I am now. You will diet, and pray, and rave, because you are growing old, and I shall do none of these things. I eat like a pig, I never pray, and I do not believe in growing old.

"But you do not come to see me about myself, Miss Clinton. You find me sitting idly with my legs crossed, and you are surprise. I work as I dance—very, oh, so very hard while I am at ze task—but with frequent periods of rest. So I do not wear out myself so soon. It is the only way. Work for an hour, rest for 10 minutes—relax and forget, and you will see how well it goes. Why do you come? Is it to talk about the baby?"

"Yes, it is, Mme. Obosky. I have come to ask you to use your influence with Mr. Percival. You"——

"But I have no influence with Mr. Percival," interrupted the other, staring.

Ruth flushed. "You are his friend. You"——

"Ah, yes, but nothing more than zat. You, too, are his friend, Miss Clinton."

"I see little or nothing of Mr. Percival," said Ruth, stiffly. "We are not friends, not really friends."

"But you admire him, eh? Quite as much as I admire him, and as everyone else does."

"There are certain things about him that I admire, of course."

"You admire him for the same reason that I admire him. Because he has a most charming and agreeable way of telling me to go to the devil. Is that not so?"

"Mme. Obosky!"

"It comes to the same thing. If you would like me to put it in another form, he has a very courteous way of resisting. He is most aggravating, Miss Clinton. He is most disappointing. He should be like soft clay in our hands, and he isn't. Is that not so?"

"Is it not possible, Mme. Obosky, that we—you and I—may have an entirely different viewpoint so far as Mr. Percival is concerned? Or any other man, for that matter?" Ruth spoke coldly, almost insultingly.

"I dare say," agreed Olga, composedly, not in the least offended by the implication. "You want to marry him. I do not."

"How dare you say that? I do not want to marry that man. I do not want to marry him, I say."

"How interesting. You surprise me, Miss Clinton. It appears, then, that our viewpoint is in nowise different, after all."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I leave it to your imagination, and to reflection. Listen! We may as well be friends. You do not wish to admit it, even to yourself, but you are in love with him. So am I. The difference between us is that I realize I can get along without him, and still be happy. I am not jealous, my dear. If I were, I should hate you, and I do not. He is in love with you. You know it perfectly well, because you are not a fool. He is not in love with me. No more am I a fool. He"——

"I am not in love with him!"

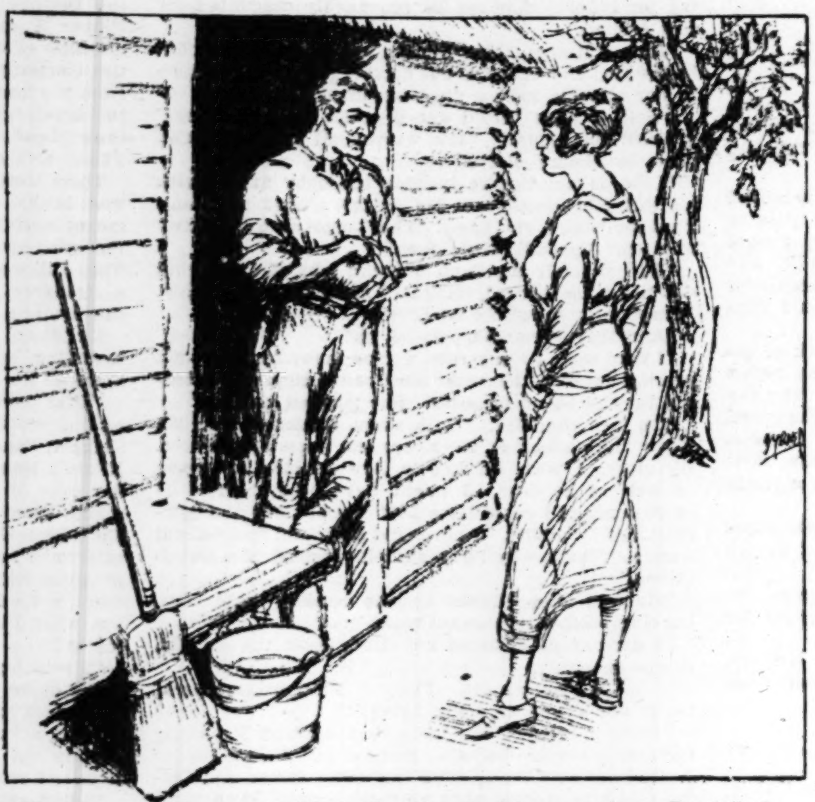
"So be it," said Olga, shortly. "Have your own way about it. It is not my affair. You have come to me, however, because you know he loves you, and you know you do not love him. Why, therefore, are you afraid of me?"

"It is useless to continue this"——

"Oh, I see! You do not wish my girls to hear our conversation." Without more ado she ordered the three girls out of the hut. "Go out and play," she commanded. Then, as the girls departed in haste, she turned to Ruth. "I am very thoughtless. You are not in the habit of discussing your love affairs quite so generously as I. Poof! They do not care, those girls. Love affairs mean nothing to my girls."

"I have no love affair to discuss, Mme. Obosky. You need not have sent them away. Good-by. There is nothing more to be said"——

"Do not go away, please. You do not know whether to like me or not. You do not understand me. You have never encountered any woman as honest as I am, zat is the trouble. Sit down, please. Let us talk. We may be here together on this island all the rest of our lives, Miss Clinton. It would not be right for us to hate each other. When you are married to Mr. Percival you will have nothing to fear from me. I give you my solemn oath on zat, Miss Clinton. Our little world here is too small. If we were out in the great big world—well, it might be different then. But, how, I ask you, is it possible for me to run away with your husband when there is no place to run away to?"



"I understand you tackled the 'boss' this morning, Ruth," he said, as she came up.

She spoke so quaintly that Ruth smiled in spite of herself.

"You are a most extraordinary person, Mme. Obosky. I—I can't dislike you. No, thank you, I shan't sit down. I came to see you about the naming of the baby. I suppose you know that we women have decided to oppose the"——

"Yes, yes, I know," interrupted the other. "But why should we oppose? It is a very small matter."

"Do you really believe those men had—or have—the right to name Betty Cruise's baby? I don't believe it, Mme. Obosky."

"In the first place, can you blame Mr. Percival for taking the matter out of the mother's hands? Mothers are very, oh, so very stupid sometimes, you know. For example, my dear Miss Clinton, you have but to see what Mr. Percivail's mother did to him when he was an infant. She called him Algernon Adonis. And why? Because she thought he was the most wonderful child in all the world and because she was silly.

"I can almost hear her arguing now with the father, poor man. One day I asked Algernon Adonis what name his father called him by—I was so sure he would not call him Algernon. He said that up to the day his father died he called him Bud. That's a boy's name, you see.

"I am in favor of children being named by outsiders—disinterested outsiders—a committee or something, men preferably. I think this child should be called Doraine. Betty Cruise, she do not care what she call it, now that it is not possible to call it Jimmy Percivail or Percivail Jimmy. Has it occur to you that if it had been a boy, all those men would have insisted on Jimmy, without the Percivail?"

"I like the name Doraine—we all do. What we resent is Mr. Percival's presumption in"——

"Let me tell you one more thing. Do not permit Mr. Percivail to address your indignation meeting tonight, for if you do, and he smiles zat nice, good-humored smile and tells the ladies zat he is sorry to have displease them, and zat he is to blame entirely for the blunder—poof! Zat will be the end!"

"I am not so sure of that," said Ruth. "There are some very determined women among us, Mme. Obosky." A faint line appeared between her eyes, however, a line acknowledging doubt and uncertainty. "And you will not join us in our protest?"

"No," said Olga, shaking her head. "I am content to let the men have their way in small things, Miss Clinton. It makes zem—them so much easier to manage when it comes to the big things. I speak from experience. Once let a man think he is monarch of all he surveys, and he becomes the most humble of subjects.

"As I have said before, we may all be here for a long, long time. No one can tell. So, I say, we must pat our men on the back and tell zem what great, wise, strong fellows they are, and how good and gallant, too. Then they will fight for us like the lion, and zey—they will work for us like the ass and the oxen, because man he enjoys to be applauded greatly.

"A man likes to have his hair rubbed gently with the finger tips. He will smile and close his eyes, and, if he knew how, he would purr like the cat. But, my dear, he do not like to have his hair pulled. Zat is something for you to remember—you and all your determined women, as you call them."

"Of course, you understand, Mme. Obosky, I—and the other women—are thinking only of Betty Cruise in this matter."

"From what I have been told, all these men out here stayed awake half the night thinking about her, Miss Clinton. They behave like so many distracted fathers waiting for news from the bedchamber. Bless their hearts, you might think, from their actions, that the whole two—three—hundred of them consider themselves the consolidated father of zat single infant."

"I must be getting back to my work," said Ruth abruptly. Her eyes were shining, her voice was soft and strangely thick. "But," she went on bravely, after clearing her throat, "we intend to fight it out with them, just the same, Mme. Obosky."

Olga went to the door with her.

"You mean, you intend to fight it out with Mr. Percivail, you, yourself, eh?"

"It is not a personal matter with me, let me remind you once more. He is their leader. He dominates them. He is the force that holds them together. That's all."

"And you would render that force impotent, eh? I see. How wise you women are!"

Ruth stopped short, struck by the remark. "Say that again, please."

Olga repeated the words slowly, significantly, and added: "They might have a worse leader, Miss Clinton."

At another time, Ruth Clinton would have been deeply impressed by the underlying significance of the Russian's words. But she was at the mercy of a stubborn, rebellious pride. She chose to ignore the warning that lay in Obosky's remark. She felt herself beaten, and she was defiant. It was too late to hark now to the mild, temperate voice of reason.

Something rankled deep down in her soul, something she was ashamed to acknowledge even to herself. It was the disagreeable conviction that Percival ascribed her activities to nothing more stable than feminine perversity; in fact, she had the uncomfortable feeling that he even went so far as to attribute them to spitefulness. Something in his voice and manner, as he left her that morning, suggested the kindly chiding of a willful child. Well, he should see!

"I don't care what it all comes to, Mme. Obosky," she said, a red spot in each cheek. "He shall not name that baby."

The Russian smiled. "Forgive me for saying that you will not feel so bitterly toward him when the time comes for him to name your baby."

Ruth's lips fell apart. She stared for a moment in sheer astonishment. Then she paled with anger. Drawing herself to her full height, she asked:

"Are you deliberately trying to make me despise you?"

"By no means," replied the other, quite cheerfully. "I am merely giving you something to think about, zat is all."

"Rubbish!" was all that Ruth flung over her shoulder as she walked away.

It was the noon hour. Scores of men were resting in the shade of the huts as she strode briskly past. They all smiled cheerily, but there was good-humored mockery in their smiles. Here and there were groups of women, talking earnestly, excitedly.

Abel Landover was leaning in his doorway, watching her approach. His eyes gleamed. She was very beautiful, she was very desirable. She had been in his mind for months, this fine, strong, thoroughbred daughter of a thoroughbred gentleman. His sleeves were rolled up, his throat was bare, his strong, deeply lined face was as brown as a berry; if anything, his cold, gray eyes were harder and more penetrating than in the days when they looked out from a whiter countenance. He was a strong, dominant figure, despite the estate to which he had fallen, a silent, sinister figure that might well have been described as "The Thinker." For he was always thinking.

"I understand you tackled the 'boss' this morning, Ruth," he said, as she came up.

"I dare say the news is all over the island by this time," she replied, still angry.

"Was it worth while?" he inquired, a trace of derision in his voice.

She was on the point of replying rather emphatically in the negative, when suddenly she recalled the look in Percival's eyes and the first words he spoke to her.

WEST WIND DRIFT - -

"Yes, Mr. Landover, it was worth while," she said, and went on, leaving him to reflections that were as perplexing as they were unanticipated.

She experienced a short spell of triumph. After all, Percival was in love with her. She did not need Olga Obosky to tell her that. She could see, she could feel for herself. A certain glee possessed her; indeed, as she afterwards succeeded in analyzing the sensation, it bordered decidedly on malice. She had it in her power to make him miserable and unhappy. She would enjoy seeing him unhappy!

The meanness of the woman who longs to injure the man who loves her, whether loved or unloved, revealed itself for the moment in this fair-minded, generous girl. (It is a common trait admitted by many fair-minded and generous women!) But even as she coddled and encouraged the little sprout of vengeance, the chill of common sense rushed up and blighted it.

She had a sickening impression that Percival would fail to play the part according to her conception. In fact, he was quite capable of not playing it at all. He would pursue the even tenor of his way (she actually made use of the time-honored phrase in her reflections), and she would get small satisfaction out of that.

Moreover, there was Olga Obosky to be reckoned with. She was conscious of a hot, swiftly passing sense of suffocation as the thought of Olga rushed unbidden into her brain, for an instant only; and then came the reaction—a queer chill that raced over her body from head to foot. What part would Olga play in the game?

The women congregated on the forward deck of the Doraine after supper that night. The evening repast was no longer dignified by the word dinner. The sky was inky black; not a star flickered in the vault above. There were low, far-off mutterings of thunder. The rail lanterns, few and far between, threw their pallid beams down into the rippling basin in a sickly effort to penetrate the gloom.

Capt. Trigger and Mr. Mott, smoking their pipes on the makeshift bridge, studied the throng of women in dour silence.

"I understand the farmers are praying for rain," remarked Mr. Mott, sniffing the air with considerable satisfaction.

"It would do no end of good," said Capt. Trigger, without taking his eyes from the chattering mass below.

Mr. Codge, the purser, joined them.

"What are they waiting for?" he asked. "Why don't they call the meeting to order?"

"They did that half an hour ago," said Mr. Mott. "Good Lord, man! can't you hear them talking? Have you no ears at all?"

"But they're all talking at once."

"And why shouldn't they?" demanded the first officer. "It's their meeting, isn't it?"

"I met Miss Clinton as I was coming up. She was going to her room. I asked her how the meeting was getting along. I don't believe she understood me, because all she said was 'Good-night.' "

"I guess she understood you, all right," said Mr. Mott, again sniffing the air. "Seems to me it's getting a little nearer, Capt. Trigger. There's a little breeze coming up, too."

"A good thunderstorm," began the captain musingly, but failed to complete the sentence.

"Would settle something besides the dust," said Mr. Codge, after a deferential wait of a few seconds.

A figure detached itself from the mass on the weirdly lighted deck below, and, approaching the perch of the three officers, came to a halt almost directly below them. The light of a lantern fell fairly on the upturned, smiling face of Olga Obosky.

"What is the hour, Capt. Trigger?" she inquired.

"Almost 9, Mme. Obosky."

"That is nearly two bells, eh, yes? How peaceful you look up there, you three old owls."

"Come up!" invited the captain cheerily. She joined them a moment later. "Tell me, are they leaving a shred of Percival and his band of outlaws?"

Mr. Codge struck a match and held it for her to light a cigarette. She inhaled deeply and then expelled the smoke in what seemed like a prolonged sigh of satisfaction.

"They are very funny, those women," she said, placing her elbows on the rail and looking down at the crowd. "Do you know what the trouble is now? It is this: they cannot think of a way to condemn the action of those men as a body without also including Mr. Percivail in the verdict."

"How's that?"

"Ninety-five per cent of them want to exonerate Mr. Percivail, but they don't know how to do it, in view of the fact that he is the guiltiest man of them all. That's why I say they are very funny, those women. They approve of what he has done in naming the baby, because whatever he does must be right, but they are almost unanimous in charging that all the other men out there are wrong. So they are in a great dilemma."

Capt. Trigger laughed. "I see. What was Miss Clinton's position in the debate?"

"Oh, she was one of those who insisted that Mr. Percivail alone be held accountable, the other men not at all. She was the chairman, you see, and they were obliged to listen to her at first.

"But zen, presently, one of those Brazilian ladies said it was a shame to put all the blame on dear Mr. Percivail, who is such a gentleman, and so splendid, and all zat; and zen—then zat Mrs. Block jump up and say that if it was not for Mr. Percivail her husband would have been killed last week when he fell off of the landing into ten thousand feet of water. And the great Careni-Amori, she get up and say she would die for Mr. Percivail, because he is such a gentleman, and two of those nurses at the same time cry out that he ought to be in the hospital because he is so worn out working for other people zat he can hardly drag his poor feet around.

"And so it goes. Miss Clinton has departed, her chin in the air. But she does not deceive me. She has gone to her room to have a good weeping."

"Well, I wish they'd get together on something," growled the captain, "so's we can all go to bed and get a few hours' sleep."

"Like as not they're keeping the baby awake with all this jabbering," said Mr. Codge. "And that isn't good for babies, you know. They've got to have plenty of sleep. 'Specially little ones."

"Will you tell me, Capt. Trigger, why Mr. Percivail did not come aboard tonight?" asked Olga suddenly. "They were expecting him."

"And they were disappointed, eh?"

"I dare say. At any rate, a good many of them kept peering out over the water most of the time and listening for the sound of oars." She laughed softly.

The men chuckled. "Talk about strategy," said Mr. Mott; "he's a bird at it. Keeps 'em guessing, he does. By glory, I wish I'd known how to handle women as well as he does. I might have been married 15 or 20 times if I could have kept 'em anxious and worried; but I couldn't. I never did have any sense about women. That's why I'm a bachelor instead of a grandfather."

"He told Miss Clinton he was coming," said Olga, harking back to the unanswered question.

"I daresay he changed his mind," said the captain, rather evasively.

"I do not believe zat. There is some other reason. He is not a woman, Capt. Trigger."

"Well, to tell you the truth—but don't let it go any further, madame—he came aboard just before supper to find out how Mrs. Cruise is getting along. Dr. Cullen told him exactly what all these women down there know—that she's very low. So he went ashore; said something about not wanting to take part in any racket that might disturb her, noisy talk and all that, and left a bunch of wild flowers for her in case she was better by morning."

There was a slight noise behind them. Turning, they saw the figure of a woman in the shadow of the deckhouse.

"Who's there?" demanded Mr. Mott.

Ruth Clinton stepped forward into the light.

"Did he—did he do that?" she asked, huskily.

"He did," said the captain.

"And is she so very ill? I did not know, Capt. Trigger."

"She's likely to die, Miss Clinton—poor little woman."

Ruth was silent for a moment. Then: "Do you think she—she can hear all that hubbub down there?"

"I am sure she cannot. But Percival was afraid she could, so he—well, he thought it best not to make it any worse by adding his groans of agony when you women tore him limb from limb out here on deck. That's the way he put it, so don't look at me like that."

Ruth suddenly hung her head and walked away. As she disappeared down the steps, Mr. Codge remarked, sotto voce:

"She isn't as rabid as she was, is she?"

"She's got it in for Percival ever since he took that fall out of Landover," said Mr. Mott.

"Think she's—er—keen on Landover? He's a good bit older than she is, 20 years or so, I should say."

"Don't ask me, Codge. As I was saying a while ago, I don't know anything whatsoever about women. They know all about me, but, gosh, I'm worse than a baby goat where they're concerned. There's no law against her being in love with Landover, and there's no law against him marrying a woman 50 years younger'n himself if he feels like it. Now, you take that good-looking Russian over there talking to the captain. Who knows what's in her mind? Nobody, sir, nobody. All I know is that Landover tried to"——

——"and she put him in his place so quick it made his head swim. That's why he's got it in for her so hard. He says she's not fit for decent women to associate with. On the other hand, if she had been willing to flirt a little with him, and so on, he would have said all the other women were cats if they refused to take up with her. That's a man all over for you, Codge. I hope Miss Clinton ain't considering getting married to that man."

The torrent came at that instant and the indignation meeting broke up in a wild scurry of skirts.

It rained very hard all night, and thundered and lightened, and blew great guns. Not one, but all of the women tucked away in their bunks, wondered how those poor men were faring out there in that black and lonely camp!

The next morning it was still raining—in fact, it rained steadily for three days and nights. Betty Cruise died shortly after daybreak, and with her death ended the controversy over the naming of her babe.

She was the first to be laid to rest in the burying ground on Cape Sunrise. Services were conducted on the Doraine by the Rev. Mr. Mackenzie, assisted by Father Francisco. All work was suspended on the morning of the funeral. Shortly before noon the entire company walked, in a long, straggling procession, from the landing to the spot three miles distant, where the lonely grave awaited its occupant. Careni-Amori sang "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee," at the graveside.

There were tears in a thousand eyes, and every voice was husky. To most of these people Betty Cruise meant nothing, but she was to lie out there alone on the wind-swept point, and they were deeply moved. They all went back to work after the midday meal, a strangely silent, thoughtful company, even down to the lowliest "Portugee."

Mr. Mott, the gaunt old cynic, surprised everyone, including himself, by adopting the infant! He announced his decision on the day after the funeral.

"That baby's got to have a father and a grandfather and a mother, and all that," he declared to Capt. Trigger, "and I'm going to be all of them, Weatherby. It ain't legal, I know, and I reckon I'll have to turn her over to her proper relatives if they make any demand, provided we ever get off this island, but while she's here she's mine, and that settles it, and as long afterward as God's willing. Chances are that no one at home will want to be bothered with an infant that don't actually belong to 'em, so I shouldn't wonder but what I'll have her always. What are you laughing at?"

"I was just thinking that you didn't mention anything about being a grandmother to her."

"Is that meant to be sarcastic?"

"Not at all," said the captain, hastily, noting the look in Mr. Mott's eyes. "But for fear you may think it was, I take it all back, Andrew."

"I laid awake all last night worrying about how lonely and useless and unoccupied I'm going to be if we stick here on this island for any considerable length of time, not to say always, and I made up my mind that if I had that kid to bring up, life would be sort of worth while. I'll probably live a good deal longer if I have something to live and work for. Ain't that so?"

"It certainly is," agreed the captain. "Do you mind my asking how you're going to feed it?"

"I've got that all attended to," said Mr. Mott, calmly. "I've been to see three of these women who've got tiny babies, and they've promised between 'em to nurse this one. It's all fixed, captain. Of course, I don't know how it's going to work out, seeing as one of 'em is Spanish, one of 'em Portugee, and the other a full-blooded Indian, but they're all healthy."

"It's very noble of you, Andrew," said the captain, laying his hand on the first officer's shoulder.

"Absolutely not!" snapped Mr. Mott. "It's plain, rotten selfishness on my part, and I don't give a damn who knows it."

How Eyes Grow Keener in the Dark

ON ENTERING a dark room after a stay in the outside daylight, the eye at once begins to increase in sensitivity. At first this increase appears to be slow, but after five minutes the increase is quite rapid, the eye acquiring a sensitivity several hundred times its initial value. After 30 minutes' sojourn in the dark the sensitivity still increases, but more slowly than before, and after 45 minutes or an hour the maximum sensitivity is reached. The final sensitivity varies slightly with different people, but in fully adapted condition the eye is easily 5000 or 10,000 times more sensitive than it was at the beginning.

These facts are obtained from a study of the sensitiveness of the eye in the dark made by Selig Hecht of Creighton University, Omaha, and published in the Journal of General Physiology. Mr. Hecht's study goes to show that the increased sensitiveness is due to a reversible photochemical reaction within the retina, involving a photosensitive substance and its two products of decomposition.

The Waterloo of All-He-Wants Ryon

toward the house. Hour after hour went by and sometimes he leaned back and cocked his head as he imagined painters did when admiring their own work, and sometimes he imagined that he heard someone singing inside the house, and sometimes he imagined what Wall street would say if it could see him now, and sometimes he imagined that not for more than 20 years had he had so much time to think. He found thinking quite a sport.

At about 11 or 12, by the inaccurate sun, he felt eyes upon him. Perhaps he only imagined that a pair of eyes some distance away were directed at his back. He did not turn. He flourished a brush with a chilly gob of green on its end and whistled "London Bridge Is Falling Down" with several notes arising from a bad memory and a sense of melody somewhat wrecked by years of dealing with the music of machines and the harmony of money. He stayed until the lamps in the house behind him were lighted; then he packed up and went home.

The next day his position was taken still farther from the house; he considered this a move made for the same cause which is served by drawing bait slowly away from the rock under which the wily fish is lurking. The day passed as before. He felt the eyes again. In the afternoon the thick clouds that had come rolling over the edge of the sea came nearer on a wind which drove the salt before it and thundered the water onto the rock beach until that beach looked like a great black underlip with white teeth. Ryon was surprised. He had discovered the sky!

Now the wind turned and brought a strange wintry hush, and the baskety clouds began to dump goose-feather snowflakes. Ryon kept right on painting his standardized efficiency pine tree. An artist would have gone home rather than have stayed to be covered with the downfall until he looked like a snow man.

A flock of chickadees, coming in under the loose-woven roof of the pine boughs, began an industrious search for food on the rugged tree trunk. A red squirrel signaled to him with jerks of his tail.

"Go on!" Andy said, cordially. "I could make just as bright eyes as yours with a couple of black-headed pins!"

"No you couldn't," said a voice.

He squeezed half a tube of cold, stiffened paint onto his palette, but without looking around, he said: "I could, too!"

"No you couldn't."

"Yes I could. I never saw a squirrel good enough so that I couldn't make a better one. Only mine won't climb trees." He had presence of mind not to turn toward the voice.

"What are you painting?" it asked.

Ryon was in a panic for a moment. He stammered, "Why, a pine tree, of course. I mean pine trees, a forest of them all alike. I mean all different. Can't you see?"

"Oh, yes."

Ryon uttered a sigh of relief and putting down his brush he turned around.

"It's cold sitting here, I would think," the young woman said. Her hands were encased in huge coonskin gloves, which were meant for a chilly motor man. Under her short brown skirt she wore a pair of fisherman's rubber boots; and gloves and boots served to emphasize her slenderness, the delicate curves of her cold-nipped cheeks, the grace and flexibility of her body beneath the green sweater.

"Come and sit down," suggested Ryon. "Try it."

"But I don't know you," she replied.

"Don't know me! I'm the pine-tree man!"

"I suppose I can call you P. T. M."

"Right you are!" Ryon assented eagerly. "But I don't know you." He looked at her accusingly.

"Well, I'm not to be counted," she argued, sitting down on an old stump. "You're the principal in your artistic crimes, P. T. M. As for me, I'm only an innocent accessory. Are there such accessories?"

"Ha," said All-he-wants Ryon. "I should say so. You're an innocent accessory—an A. I. A. I shall call you Aia."

"It sounds primitive. Like a story about the South Sea Islands, doesn't it? My hair is yellow. And three gray ones—up here in front." She showed them.

"One, two, three," he said.

"Yes, and if I'm to sit in this snowstorm and talk to you, I can't do it here. We must move on the other side of that big ledge."

"Why?"

"She might see."

"Who might see?"

"The one in the house."

A curious expression came over Ryon's face, and he blurted out: "The one in the house? Then who are you?"

"I am Aia," replied the other promptly.

"You might be her—her—relative—a relative of somebody you call 'she.'"

"Yes, I might be a relative, a cousin or something, but I'm only Aia," she said with a laugh. "Come on. Paint a tree somewhere else."

He folded up his outfit and obeyed. At the crest of the ledge the sea was spread again before their eyes, but it was all hazy behind the veils of the slanting snowfall. He took a deep breath before he turned toward her.

She had blue eyes.

"Look here," he said after a long time. "Can't I ask any questions?"

"Oh, no. Would you want me to ask any questions? Questions only make the past come and tie us to our old hitching post. Would you want me to ask you questions?"

Ryon was no fool. He could see she was right. He said, almost eagerly: "That's fine! If I come to paint here, you can come out and talk to me. And there'll be no questions, and therefore we can start as if this were—as if it were"——

"The beginning of a new world."

"You bet!"

They laughed, and suddenly Ryon became grave. "There's something in it," he said, soberly, and opened his paint box.

"Have I got to see you paint?"

"What else can I do?"

"Walk—can't you?"

"Yes, I can walk—even better."

"Come on."

When they came back from a four-mile tramp along the beaches and rocky coves the Saxon house was looking at them with two yellow eyes. Suddenly one light went out; the house had winked at them! Ryon said to himself: "Wink ahead, old top. I want you and I shall have you."

"Where," began Aia.

P. T. M. shook a forefinger at her. "You're going to ask where I am staying?" he said, craftily. "That's a question."

"It wasn't the one I had," replied the girl. "But anyhow I won't ask. It's the agreement. And you are never to come to the door."

"Never!" replied Ryon. "But when you said 'where' —you meant"——

"Yes, I did."

"Well, here," said he, the industrial king, blushing, "right here, tomorrow."

"At dawn?"

This was a challenge, intended, purposed and designed to knock his breath out. Ryon had been tried in this way in the banking world, but never so nearly floundered. He won by a hair's breadth.

"Or earlier, if you like," cordially.

"Good-night, P. T. M.," she said, with her eyes shining. "Sleep like a good one!"

He watched her go through the pines toward the dwelling of Charity Saxon.

"Ten acres!" said he.

Of course, Ryon may not have estimated the power of propinquity. He may have known that a woman can put imagination in racing trim—even a broken-down imagination of the 1885 model—and turn something that occupied a sordid inactivity in the dirt of success into a bird that can outfly any scout plane made yet. Then again he may not. He may have thought he knew what he was doing when, on the fourth day that he had known this Aia of the class features, he snatched up her ungloved hand and ran along the beach with her until both stood panting and happy somewhere in the salt spray.

"I want to kiss you," said Ryon.

"She says," began Aia.

"Who says?"

"The old party—at the house."

"What does she say?"

"That some persons who are in the habit of getting all they want should have someone say 'No.'"

"Are you going to say 'No'?"

"No."

He took her into his arms and kissed her warmly. Yes, warmly, but I should say rather solemnly, too—so solemnly that it made her laugh.

"But you understood that, didn't you?" he asked.

She looked at him searchingly. She said: "Well, I shouldn't have cared whether I did or not. But I did understand, P. T. M. Yes, I did so."

This darn-foolish industrial magnate smiled. "Well, I think it has been 18 or 20 years since I kissed anyone."

There was some devilment even in the Puritans, and it danced in her eyes now.

"Oh, P. T .M., that isn't human! It hasn't been that long with me."

Ryon laughed, but he soon became serious.

"I'd like to get up at dawn again," he said. "It was fine the last time."

"All right," said Aia cheerfully.

"Yes, I want to say something to you tomorrow."

"I know what you're going to say to me tomorrow, P. T. M."

All night long it snowed quietly; but it stopped at dawn, the wind changed, and when All-he-wants Ryon had trudged through the drifts up to their ledge, the sun came out of the sea, red and merry. He was watching it when he heard her behind him.

"She was fixing the tree," said Aia. "Last night."

"Tree—what tree?"

"This is the day before Christmas."

"So it is," said Ryon.

He was astonished when he saw the sun on her face, that the gaiety had all gone from her expression. She looked tired.

"You said last night that you knew what I was going to say," he began.

"Yes, I did—I thought I knew, I think I did. You were going to ask me to marry you."

"Yes," said Ryon directly, "I was."

"How old do you think I am?"

"Well, how old?"

"I'm over 30," she said.

"So am I," replied Andy. "I don't let it worry me."

"But that is not all, P. T. M.," she said. "I think our days have been wonderful. You think so, too. I know you do."

"Of course."

"And I'd give my right hand, I think, if I hadn't played this role, P. T. M. There's the New England conventions in me, after all."

"What role?"

"Making you think when I said 'she' that I meant my aunt or some relative. It was only old Katie."

Ryon stared at her. "What of it?"

"But you thought when I said 'she' that I meant Charity Saxon."

He stared some more.

"How did you know I ever heard of Charity Saxon?" he asked.

"Heard of her! Of course you heard of her. You wanted her little home. I knew who you were all the time, Mr. Anderson Ryon."

He took both her hands in his.

"Does that make any difference?" he said. "Answer!"

"No, only—I'm Charity Saxon."

He turned quickly away and faced the sea; then sat down and covered his face with his arms.

Charity was frightened. She had never loved anyone before. It just happened so. And she never expected it would pounce on her suddenly from the last person in the world she believed would bring it. She never had thought it came like that—to restrained New England hearts.

She put her hands on Ryon's shoulder and with her lips quivering, she said: "Does it make any difference, P. T. M.?"

He stood up. It was evident then that he had been laughing.

"I knew you were Charity Saxon," he said. "Here. Take this. It's my Christmas present to you. I wrote to my lawyers, Ramson, Puffer & Hubble, and had them draw it up. It's a deed to Nickrock. Your name's on it. I've known you, Aia, ever since I stood on tiptoe the day before I bought my land, and saw you weeding in your garden. Your chin was muddy!"

She stared at him.

"Come, Aia," he said. "See if you can't say something that will make me feel comfortable—as if the coarse old world to which I belong has some virtues of directness anyway. Jump away from your traditions and you conventions for a moment, dear."

The devilment that is under the lid of a Puritan danced again in her eyes.

"To hell with Nickrock," said she. "When we're married you come and live with me."

He did—it was all he wanted.

Nickrock is now owned by a man who runs 46 canneries, who is an expression of our national virtue "of doing things in a big way," who has a desk in his limousine for efficiency on the ride downtown, and thinks that those who do not believe in law and order should be lined up against a wall and shot—without trial. He chews perfumed lozenges. He loves Nickrock—says it has distinction!

Ancient Organ Is Lent to Carnegie Museum

AN ORGAN which gives every evidence of being one of the earliest products of American ingenuity has been lent to the Carnegie Museum at Pittsburg by U. C. Kramer. With it is a note in the builder's own handwriting, showing that he sold the organ to a certain John May and for it he received "a horse, watch, some cash and some notes."

There is a romance in every fiber of this one of America's oldest musical instruments. It was built in 1787 by Joseph Downer, then a youth of 20 years. At first it was regarded as a curiosity by the neighbors. People came to see it from far and wide. Tourists would tell their stage-coach drivers to stop at a small town near Boston to see this much-discussed music box.

The instrument is six feet wide and nearly eight feet high. It is painted with enamel and is finished with carvings and scroll work. The workmanship is good and the materials used seem to have been of the best. Some of the pipes were glued in, others were placed in grooves. Those glued in are today just as tight as they were 150 years ago.

THE TRUTH ABOUT CINDERELLA

By HELEN ROWLAND.

THE real truth about Cinderella has never been told.

It's all very well for a mere man to believe in that clever little camouflage about pumpkins, mice and fairy godmothers—but every WOMAN has her suspicions that this is how it actually happened.

The clock pointed to one minute of 12.

Cinderella stood before her mirror contemplating approvingly the radiant beauty, which the Prince had held in his arms for one fleeting moment, and one thrilling kiss.

She smiled back at the glowing vision; the star-lit, dusky-lashed eyes, the rich, red, luscious young lips, the slender, swaying figure, the aureole of fleecy gold hair, the flushed cheeks and round, ivory chin. "Oh, you baby-doll!" she murmured, happily.

The clock struck 12.

With a start, Cinderella turned from the mirror and snatched off the filmy tulle scarf and the silver-spangled, fairy-like frock—with its 27 hooks and eyes and 42 "snappers."

She unfastened the stiff, hermetically-sealed stays with a glad, glad sigh, flung them across the room and wrapped herself with a shiver of happiness in a wooly brown bathrobe.

Sitting down before her magic mirror, she carefully unpinned the little side puffs from over her ears, unwound the aureole of tiny golden pin curls from around her crown of glory—and laid them on a chair. Then, she rolled up the curling masses of fleecy gold hair on 12 magic weavers—made of tin.

Next, she covered her face with the cleansing cream, and with two deft passes of a soft cloth, erased the beautiful line of the scarlet lips, the girlish color of the flushed cheeks and most of the dusky eyelashes. After that, she rubbed in the night cream, put on her chin strap, and, yawning delicately, started for bed.

At this juncture, she realized, with a sudden twinge, that an acute pain had all the while been gnawing at her heart—or something.

With a groan, a sigh, and a soft but expressive exclamation, she stooped over, snatched off the high-heeled, short-vamped, silver slippers (for which she had paid 24 good dollars), and hurled them at the wall!

But Cinderella was only a woman—not a Christy Mathewson!

One of the slippers sidestepped, and in a burst of temperament shot through the half-open window, falling at the feet of the romantic young Prince, dreaming in the garden beneath.

"Beloved!" he murmured, catching it up and kissing its tiny, vicious vamp. "My beloved sleeps. How beautiful is a lovely woman—in sleep!"

Where does the fairy godmother come in, you ask?

The fairy godmother, my children, was "Madame Celeste"—you know her.

The one who keeps the beauty parlor.

And Cinderella?

Oh, almost any girl you happen to know!

PARADOX OF RAIL WEAR.

IN a single-track line of railroad the wear on the rails is seldom greater, and is frequently less, than in a double-track line, says the Scientific American, an apparent paradox which is probably explained by the reversal of direction of traffic, which tends to neutralize cold-rolling actions in the surface of the rail-head.

Men who have invested millions in big generating plants will have to go out of business, he says, and steam engines will become extinct like the buffalo, and will only be seen in a museum as a relic of days gone by. Navigation will be revolutionized and, instead of a great expense for fuel and stoking, operating expenses will be cut by getting free power from this and other planets which, scientists have always claimed, have an inexhaustible reservoir of energy only awaiting the mind of man to control it. Hubbard says he will put larger types of his apparatus in ships and that current, drawn from the illimitable power of the universe, will surge through the wires that lead to the engines which turn the propeller.

It is pointed out that railroad engineers have found that even when electricity is purchased from a generating plant it is a much cheaper and more efficient source of motive power than steam, and Hubbard's friends assert that when a trans-equipment now used by the Milwaukee initial steps to supplant steam with electricity and then found it a paying investment. the possibilities of Hubbard's free power discovery can be seen from the railroader's standpoint. The generating equipment now used by the Malwaukee could be done away with, some of the new apparatus placed in the giant engines and the wheels would turn. Airplane motors would turn with power derived from a few small coils, thus relieving the craft of the weight of the present-day heavy gas engine.

Among Hubbard's first experiments was that of using his apparatus to take X-ray pictures with and also for furnishing current for wireless plants he had. When 16 years old, Hubbard was able to pass the Government test for radio operators and experimentation on this went along with the long, ceaseless chase after the exact arrangement of coils desired to accomplish atmospheric power. So permeated with the spirit of the thing that he was unable to think of anything save the possibilities of such an invention, the lad read everything he could find dealing with the subject of electricity, and when he submitted his machine to the patent office his request for patent rights was accompanied by an eight-page description of the apparatus, and there were 30 pages of explanatory matter, all typewritten.

Hubbard found that others had dreamed of the thing he says he has accomplished, and patent lawyers in Washington had to be first sure that Hubbard was not bringing an old principle, in new dress, for patent rights. But search of the record shows that this aspirant to the century-old search for illimitable power has a new principle and the patent has been granted.

The machine is not a perpetual motion affair, but is simply an apparatus composed of several layers of wire about a steel core, which is magnetized after the construction is complete, and this attracts earthly electricity on the principle of a magnet, it is claimed. Hubbard, the son of an electrician, says he got his inspiration three years ago, when he saw a great belt on an air compressor in an Idaho mine. He noticed that he could draw electricity from the belt with his finger, and he decided that there must be some way, besides that of the principles of friction, to draw power from the atmosphere, and it was after working 18 hours a day for two years that he claimed success.

His first model was shown to the parish fathers, who were skeptical, but his latest claim is that he can build for less than $50 a generator large enough to drive any automobile, and that with an apparatus about 18 feet long, containing simply the wire coil and the magnetic core, 18,000 horsepower can be developed. Hubbard is willing to take oath that his four-kilowatt machine has excited the equivalent of 125 ordinary 25-watt house lamps for a three months' period. He was able to prove, he told an investigating committee, that he had been able to deliver approximately 85 volts from the apparatus, under test conditions, for an hour.

Some of the critics of the boy's claims set forth that there must be a primary or a secondary battery, but gave this up when the smallness of the apparatus prevented the inclusion of a battery of sufficient strength to provide current for a three months' test period. Others said that the induction principle employed by Hubbard might make possible a "generator steal" from electrical transmission wires in the city, although this was not likely, they stated. All agree that the demonstrations, whether or not conclusive of Hubbard's claim to have captured the power of the universe, are almost unbelievable.

The youthful inventor does not intend to forget the commercial possibilities of his invention in the event scientific men accept his invention as the true solution. He has figured out how wealth and fame will be at his command.

And he also does not know what it means to forecast failure of his invention, although he is but one of many who have sought patents on free energy machines.

GETTING THE HOUSE SHINGLED

I sent for the carpenter, had him buy the shingles and told him to come round any time.

He came around in two weeks, having been delayed by a strike, and put up his scaffolding.

It was a calm, beautiful summer day when he began. But it was not for long.

He went to work with commendable zeal, and got the roof denuded for a space of about 10 feet square.

Then there was a little puff of wind, a few scattering drops, and the next thing we know the plaster in the attic bedroom was bulging down with its weight of water.

The carpenter got canvas over the leak he had made after a while, and a drink of something bracing restored his good humor. He appeared to think that I had made it rain, and he was right, although I little suspected it at the time.

We waited after that till the middle of a dry spell, with the same results. This time the wind that came with the rain was a little brisker. It got under the shingle lath and hoisted, with the result that a patch of shingles the size of a double blanket was pried off the roof and sailed away, to volplane into my neighbor's tomato patch.

Of course that saved the carpenter's time in taking off the shingles, but the resultant damage to the inside of the house more than made up for it.

Plaster and woodwork are not made to be rained on. Neither are rugs or bedding, or closets full of feminine apparel, or pianos, or any of the many objects one gathers in a house in the course of 10 years.

By this time it began to look as if shingling the house really had something to do with the rain.

We clinched it by a few more experiments. They all worked.

By the middle of October we had the house newly shingled. But that wasn't much use, for everything in it that was damageable by water was destroyed utterly. Even the dog got a bad cold and had to have $10 worth of veterinary work done on him before he was any good. The cat left the place and hasn't come back.

Don't doubt the value of this discovery. It cannot go wrong. If your house needs shingling, dress your family in waterproof clothing, use rubber plastering and get ducks for pets. It is the only way you can be comfortable while making the experiment.

Cured His Rupture

Wonderful Invention of Kansas City Physician Cured Texas Man in Three Weeks—Thousands Now Using It.

A. P. Vogt of San Antonio, Texas, suffered for years with a bad rupture and tried practically all the known forms of trusses and pads in the hope of getting relief. He found his rupture steadily getting worse, until a short time ago he used an appliance invented by a Kansas City physician. He writes:

"The Easyhold cured my rupture in three weeks' time. This is sure a record for a cure. I will be pleased to answer all inquiries."

So confident is the inventor of the Easyhold Appliance that he will send it free to any sufferer who is seeking a cure. You may try it thirty days free. Should you not be satisfied at the end of that time that your rupture is actually getting better, you may return the appliance and it has cost you nothing. Any rupture appliance sent for thirty days' free trial without expense to you is certainly worth a trial, especially when you realize that the Easyhold Appliance has no blistering leg straps or bands of steel to bind. Many thousands of rupture sufferers are wearing the Easyhold and finding it to be the one rupture appliance giving entire satisfaction.

A free book explaining this remarkable method of rupture treatment and a measurement blank will be sent any sufferer. After reading this booklet you may try one of these appliances for thirty days at their expense, returning it if not entirely satisfied. Write to the Easyhold Company, 5019 Koch Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. Tell your ruptured friends of this offer.

"Cure Your Rupture Like I Cured Mine"

Old Sea Captain Cured His Own Rupture After Doctors Said "Operate or Death."

His Remedy and Book Sent Free.

Captain Collings sailed the seas for many years; then he sustained a bad double rupture that soon forced him to not only remain ashore, but kept him bedridden for years. He tried doctor after doctor and truss after truss. No results! Finally, he was assured that he must either submit to a dangerous and abhorrent operation or die. He did neither! He cured himself instead.

"Fellow Men and Women, You Don't Have To Be Cut Up, and You Don't Have To Be Tortured By Trusses."

Captain Collings made a study of himself, of his condition—and at last he was rewarded by the finding of the method that so quickly made him a well, strong, vigorous and happy man.

Dividing Up the Land in Czecho-Slovakia

THE new system of land ownership in the Republic of Czecho-Slovakia, by which a single landlord may not own more than 150 hectares (370 acres) of farming land, is being rapidly put into operation. An official pamphlet published at Prague declares that the land reform "is proceeding in a quiet manner, being supported by the opinion of the whole people, which secures its success."

By the law of April 16, 1919, the State seized all the lands held by individuals in excess of the newly-established maximum. The largest single ownership permitted, even of forested land, is 257 hectares (617 acres).

This law invests the State with a sort of trusteeship over the seized land, which in time will be divided up among individuals and among public and private corporations claiming their share and paying an indemnity.

The first large transactions already have been put in motion: Land which was leased in small allotments several years ago has been given up to the lessees by the former owners, who are indemnified on a scale fixed either by agreement between the parties concerned or by a court judgment.

In this way, it is said, many thousands of the most needy people in the country will become owners of land. "Land hunger" became a psychosis of the war, in Czecho-Slovakia. Small tracts had changed hands even before the war at exaggerated prices. Government officials believe that the present "land hunger" will cease to exist in a few years.

"Who in Europe or America does not know emigrants from Slovakia?" asks the Prague pamphlet. The large Magyar estates prevented the Slovaks from earning their living in their native country. The largest emigrant district in Bohemia was a portion in the South ironically called the "Kingdom of Schwarzenberg" because a family of that name held more than 200,000 hectares (about one-half million acres) of landed property.

Statistics show how the system of large estates, with people of the district either working for the landlords or forced into the villages, prevailed also in Moravia and Silesia.

And even among the small proportion of the population which shared in the land possession, the figures show that 43 per cent of the landlords in Bohemia owned not more than half a hectare (about 1 1-4 acres) at most. In Moravia this class made up 50 per cent of the total landed class, and in Silesia 35 per cent.

"Countries in which large estates preponderate," declares the pamphlet, "force their inhabitants to emigrate temporarily (become seasonal workers) or permanently into foreign countries, where they alienate themselves and adopt a new nationality, voluntarily or under compulsion."

The large land holders of Czecho-Slovakia are not now as reluctant to divide their great estates as they were before the war, according to the pamphlet mentioned above. A widespread feeling that some such step was necessary for the salvation of the country is said to be largely responsible for the change of feeling.

Mounting a Print Without Buckling

HOW many times have you pasted down a paper or mounted a print to find that when it dried it had buckled disappointingly? The Scientific American gives the following instructions as to how to avoid this difficulty:

Keep the mount flat and with a small wad of cotton wetted in clean water, slightly dampen the approximate area to be covered by the print. Cover the back of the print with paste—preferably arabol—smooth and thin. Apply the print to the mount, and with aid of a paper blotter and a small roller smooth the print from its center outward. No paste will appear outside the limits of the print; any dampness exceeding these limits will evaporate. Any paper shreds left by the blotter, etc., may be wiped clean from the print's surface with the same damp wad of cotton.

would require weeks to cover on horseback can be reconnoitered in a short time.

"By the use of light motor trucks, movable bases can be established, so that the members of the expedition can carry on work independently in widely separated parts of the same region. It is probable, too, that in some parts of Mongolia and Western China airplanes may be employed," according to a formal description of the expedition plans by Andrews.

"Camels will be used for heavy transport, but in Mongolia the personal and light baggage can all go by automobile. Camels require 40 days to cross Mongolia between Kalgan and Urga; motor cars can go in less than four days. But Mongolia is almost the only region in which automobiles can be used.

"On the long journey to the mountains of Northern Thibet, all the equipment and also the members of the party will go on mule or pony back. It will require two months of steady traveling by caravan to reach even the borders of the Forbidden Land. Of course, pack trains will be sent ahead with supplies and a base established, for it will be at least a year before the return to Pekin."

Restorations of prehistoric man have been made at various times from the fossils that have been discovered. Noteworthy among these attempts to show what the ape man or his primitive descendants looked like are the reconstructions by Prof. J. H. McGregor of Columbia University, exhibited in the Hall of the Age of Man at the Museum of Natural History.

Thus we can see there the reconstructed Piltown man discovered in England, that of Neanderthal of German origin and the Cro-Magnon, who is practically the modern man, the homo sapiens, though he must have lived at least 25,000 years ago.

Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn of the American Museum of Natural History, a recognized expert, believes that the Cro-Magnon man drove out the Neanderthalers, that he fashioned weapons and slew the great mammoths by driving them into pits under the goading of pointed stone javelins; that he lived on the flesh of the reindeer and the bison and drove the bears from their homes and possessed himself of their caves. How long ago that was, science has not established.

It is the hope of the third Asiatic expedition that luck may be so far on their side that they may chance on a cave in the wilds of Mongolia or Thibet that will be as fruitful for purposes of science as the cave in the Neanderthal in Germany.

"It is also well known," adds Prof. Osborn, "that Neanderthal man dominated Western Europe for an immense period of time, probably not less than 100,000 years, but that finally, between 25,000 and 40,000 years ago, there appeared a different race known as the Cro-Magnons, with a higher mentality, with rudiments of religious ideas, with evidences of ethical development. This new race triumphed and practically all traces of the ancient Neanderthal race disappeared."

To the nonspecialist in anthropology the Neanderthal skull is perhaps the most interesting. It was found in 1857 in a cave situated in that part of the valley of the Dussel, near Dusseldorf, which is called the Neanderthal. The spot is a deep and narrow ravine, close to the village of Hochdel. The cave occurs in the precipitous left side of the winding ravine, about 60 feet above the stream and 100 feet below the top of the cliff.

When Dr. Fuhlrott of Elberfeld first examined the cave he found it to be high enough to allow a man to enter. The width was seven or eight feet and the length or depth 15.

In the limestone are many fissures through which the loam and possibly the human body to which the bones belonged may have been washed into the cave below. On removing the loam, which was five feet thick, from the cave, the human skull was first noticed near the entrance and further in the bones lying in the same horizontal plane.

When the skull and other parts of the skeleton were first exhibited at Bonn, doubts were expressed as to whether it was truly human. Prof. Schaafhausen, an experienced zoologist, observed that the cranium, which included the frontal bone, both parietals, part of the squamous and the upper part of the occipital, was of unusual size and thickness, and the forehead narrow and very low.

He also stated that the absolute and relative length of the thigh bone, humerus, radius and ulna agreed well with the dimensions of a European individual of like stature at the present day, but that the thickness of the bones was very extraordinary, and the elevations and depressions for the attachment of muscles were developed in an extraordinary degree. Some of the ribs also were of a singularly rounded shape and abrupt curvature, which was supposed to indicate great power in the thoracic muscles.

In the same way it was observed that the depression of the forehead was not due to any artificial flattening such as is practiced in various modes by barbarous nations, the skull being quite symmetrical and showing no indication of counter pressure at the occiput.

On the whole it was decided that the individual to whom the Neanderthal skull belonged must have been distinguished by small cerebral development and uncommon strength of corporeal frame. When Huxley saw it he remarked that it was the most apelike skull he had ever seen.

It was not until 1891 that a Dutch army surgeon, Eugene Dubois, while excavating for fossils in Java, discovered part of a skull, two molar teeth and a thigh bone of what is generally believed to have been an ape man that lived approximately 500,000 years ago.

Strange Hunger Strike of Mountaineer Revolutionist

the first sign of weakness and he spent most of his time reclining on a couch or in bed.

But the Rev. Wooldridge did not fast under such circumstances. He was a revivalist of the active type, who gradually worked himself into a frenzy and whose energy of gesture has been compared to that of Billy Sunday. That he should have gone through the terrific strain of mind and body which his preaching and fasting entailed for even a single week, let alone three weeks, made him an object of interest to scientists.

Accounts received from the scene of the fast show that for the first fortnight there was little diminution of his vigor. Then his voice commenced to fail, although he still worked himself into a frenzy as his address, often falling to a whisper, proceeded. Then his weakened limbs were unable to support him and he spoke seated. And, finally, he had to be borne into the meeting house on a cot.

Descriptions of the meetings show that it must have been a weird scene up there in the mountains, already touched with the frosts of early fall. The mountain population for miles around gathered to attend the revival, hearing the old man's pledge. And for night after night, wrapped in their winter garments, their breath rising in clouds in the little, unheated church, lit only by flickering candles, they silently watched the old evangelist grow weaker and weaker until his sudden decision to end the fast. The idea of interfering with a man they believed divinely inspired probably never occurred to any of them.

The fast was started on the last day of September. Word that he had called off his "strike" was received Oct. 28. As it took about three days for the message to arrive from Hayes Chapel, the fast probably took 24 days. The Wooldridges are said to be descended from the Indian Powhatan of Virginia, whose daughter, Pocahontas, offered her life to save that of Capt. John Smith. Some of the spirit of Indian ancestors may have upheld the old revivalist in the early days of his fast.

La-may Face Powder is Guaranteed
Pure and Harmless.

Pure face powder cannot injure the most delicate baby skin. The trouble is, too many powders are made in the old-fashioned way, with rice powder. Rice powder is starchy, and, like bread flour, it is quickly turned into a gluey paste by the moisture of the skin. This paste clogs the cuticle, swells in the pores, causing enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. A specialist makes a harmless powder by using an ingredient doctors prescribe to heal the skin. Every time you apply this improved powder you give your complexion a real beauty treatment. There is a thousand-dollar guarantee of purity printed on the box, certifying it does not contain white lead, rice powder or any harmful substance. This guaranteed pure powder is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). Because it is pure and harmless La-may is now used by over a million American women! It is now the most popular complexion powder sold in New York. Women who have used even the most expensive face powder say they can not buy a better powder than La-may anywhere at any price. There is also a La-may Talcum that prevents the souring of perspiration.

Free Proof that I Can Raise Your Pay

No matter how much you are earning now, I can show you how to increase it. I have even taken failures and shown them how to make $100—$200, and in one case as high as $2000 weekly. I am willing to prove this entirely at my risk and expense.

LET'S have a little chat about getting ahead—you and I. My name is Pelton. Lots of people call me “The Man Who Makes Men Rich.” I don't deny it. I've done it for thousands of people—lifted them up from poverty to riches.

I'm no genius—far from it. I'm just a plain, everyday, unassuming sort of a man. I know what poverty is. I've looked black despair in the eye—had failure stalk me around and hoodoo everything I did. I've known the bitterest kind of want.

But today all is different. I have money and all the things that money will buy. I am rich also in the things that money won't buy—health, happiness and friendship. Few people have more of the blessings of the world than I.

IT was a simple thing that jumped me up from poverty to riches. As I've said, I am no genius. But I had the good fortune to know a genius. One day this man told me a “secret.” It had to do with getting ahead and growing rich. He had used it himself with remarkable results. He said that every wealthy man knew this “secret” —that is why he was rich.

I used the “secret.” It surely had a good test. At that time I was flat broke. Worse than that, for I was several thousand dollars in the hole. I had about given up hope when I put the “secret” to work.

At first I couldn't believe my sudden change in fortune. Money actually flowed in on me. I was thrilled with a new sense of power. Things I couldn't do before came as easy for me to do as opening a door. My business boomed and continued to leap ahead at a rate that startled me. Prosperity became my partner. Since that day I've never known what it is to want for money, friendship, happiness, health or any of the good things in life.

That “secret” surely made me rich in every sense of the word.

MY sudden rise to riches naturally surprised others. One by one people came to me and asked me how I did it. I told them. And it worked for them as well as it did for me.

Some of the things this “secret” has done for people are astounding. I would hardly believe them if I hadn't seen them with my own eyes. Adding ten, twenty, thirty or forty dollars a week to a man's income is a mere nothing. That's merely playing at it. In one case I took a rank failure and in a few weeks had him earning as high as $2000.00 a week. Listen to this:

A young man in the East had an article for which there was a nation-wide demand. For twelve years he “puttered around” with it—barely eking out a living. Today this young man is worth $200,000. He is building a $25,000 home—and paying cash for it. He has three automobiles. His children go to private schools. He goes hunting, fishing, traveling, whenever the mood strikes him. His income is over a thousand dollars a week.

A Few Examples

Personal Experiences

Among over 400,000 users of “Power of Will” are such men as Judge Ben B. Lindsey; Supreme Court Justice Parker; Wu Ting Fang, Ex-U. S. Chinese Ambassador; Assistant Postmaster General Britt; Gov. McKelvie of Nebraska; General Manager Christeson of Wells-Fargo Express Co.; E. St. Elmo Lewis, former Vice Pres. Art Metal Construction Co.; Gov. Ferris of Michigan, and many others of equal prominence.

$300 Profit From One Day's Reading

“The result from one day's study netted me $300 cash. I think it a great book and would not be without it for ten times the cost.”—Col. A. W. Wilkie, Roscoe, S. Dak.

Worth $15,000 and More

“The book has been worth more than $15,000 to me.”—Oscar B. Sheppard.

Would Be Worth $100,000

“If I had only had it when I was 20 years old I would be worth $100,000 today. It is worth a hundred times the price.”—S. W. Taylor, The Santa Fe Ry., Milans, Tex.

Salary Jumped From $150 to $800

“Since I read Power of Will my salary has jumped from $150 to $800 a month.”—J. F. Gibson, San Diego, Cal.

From $100 to $3000 a Month

“One of our boys who read Power of Will before he came over here jumped from $100 a month to $3000 the first month, and won a $250 prize for the best salesmanship in the State.”—Private Leslie A. Still, A. E. F., France.

In a little town in New York lives a man who, two years ago, was pitied by all who knew him. From the time he was 14 he had worked and slaved—and at 60 he was looked upon as a failure. Without work, in debt to his charitable friends, with an invalid son to support, the outlook was pitch-black.

Then he learned the “secret.” In two weeks he was in business for himself. In three months his plant was working night and day to fill orders. During 1916 the profits were $20,000. During 1917 the profits were close to $40,000. And this genial 64-year-young man is enjoying pleasures and comforts he little dreamed would ever be his.

I COULD tell you thousands of similar instances. But there's no need to do this, as I'm willing to tell you the “secret” itself. Then you can put it to work and see what it will do for you. I don't claim I can make you rich over night. Maybe I can—maybe I can't. Sometimes I have failures—everyone has. But I do claim that I can help 90 out of every 100 people if they will let me.

The point of it all, my friend, is that you are using only about one-tenth of that wonderful brain of yours. That's why you haven't won greater success. Throw the unused nine-tenths of your brain into action and you'll be amazed at the almost instantaneous results.

The Will is the motive power of the brain. Without a highly trained, inflexible will, a man has about as much chance of attaining success in life as a railway engine has of crossing the continent without steam. The biggest ideas have no value without will power to “put them over.” Yet the will, although heretofore entirely neglected, can be trained into wonderful power like the brain or memory and by the very same method—intelligent exercise and use.

If you held your arm in a sling for two years, it would become powerless to lift a feather, from lack of use. The same is true of the Will—it becomes useless from lack of practice. Because we don't use our Will—because we continually bow to circumstance—we become unable to assert ourselves. What our wills need is practice.

Develop your will power and money will flow in on you. Rich opportunities will open up for you. Driving energy you never dreamed you had will manifest itself. You will thrill with a new power—a power that nothing can resist. You'll have an influence over people that you never thought possible. Success—in whatever form you want it—will come as easy as failure came before. And those are only a few of the things the “secret” will do for you. The “secret” is fully explained in the wonderful book “Power of Will.”

How You Can Prove This at My Expense

I KNOW you'll think that I've claimed a lot. Perhaps you think there must be a catch somewhere. But here is my offer. You can easily make thousands—you can't lose a penny.

Send no money—no, not a cent. Merely clip the coupon and mail it to me. By return mail you'll receive, not a pamphlet, but the whole “secret” told in this wonderful book, “POWER OF WILL.”

Keep it five days. Look it over in your home. Apply some of its simple teachings. If it doesn't show you how you can increase your income many times over—just as it has for thousands of others —mail the book back. You will be out nothing.

But if you do feel that “POWER OF WILL” will do for you what it has done for over four hundred thousand others—if you feel as they do that it's the next greatest book to the Bible—send me only $4.00 and you and I'll be square.

If you pass this offer by, I'll be out only the small profit on a four-dollar sale. But you—you may easily be out the difference between what you're making now and an income several times as great. So you see you've a lot—a whole lot—more to lose than I.

Mail the coupon or write a letter now—you may never read this offer agin.
